County Agent J. L. Walker and two airlines have been involved.

Red Tape Cut

It was the result of a telephone call to Byrnes that red tape snarling a warm hearted gesture was cut.Because of the work of many persons in government positions and jobs in the Fox Valley, Costa Rica may embark on a new program of quality breeding of hogs.The story of Rojas dates back to September of 1962 when he visited three weeks at the Kenneth Block farm, route 3, New London, as an International Farm Youth Exchange visitor to the U. S. During his visit he became interested in raising hogs. On his home farm in Costa Rica, the family has meat only once a week because of a shortage of animals for slaughter.

has told the United States it is ready to buy 800,000 tons of Amer-one of the big U.S. processors and the Czech and Bulgarian embasterest in buying American grain, in an estimated total value of $60 million.

No Prices Given

Neither price nor conditions of payment were discussed, these sources said. They stressed, however that all three countries are on the market for considerable quantities, but, as one diplomat put it, "We will buy where we get the most favorable conditions."This, one source suggested, was an indirect reply to Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dir-son of Illinois, who endorsed a possible grain sale to Communist countries with the reservation that the administration seek some "political concessions" beyond the sale price.A Hungarian legation spokesman described his government's inquiry as an expression of "most serious interest." He said that

Midwest Democrats Urge Sale of Wheat to RussiaUnanimous Backing for Kennedy Civil Rights
Bill Comes at Meeting

BY JAMES BARTELT

MADISON — The sale of American surplus wheat to Russia and the Kennedy civil rights bill were endorsed unanimously Saturday by a meeting of the executive committee of the 14 state Midwest conference of the Democratic Party.The adopted wheat resolution said there were indications that Russia wanted to buy three million tons of wheat for the market price of $200 million dollars and that this would "significantly reduce the United States wheat surplus, reduce government cost of storage and handling of surplus wheat, increase American farm income and greatly relieve pressure of the United States balance of payment deficit."The association of midwest state Democratic organization includes those from the wheat producing states of the Great Plains. All the adopted resolutions were intended to be sent to members of Congress from the 14 states.

Intermediary Nation

The wheat resolution said a failure to sell to Russia would only result in the grain reaching there through an intermediary nation.The sale, the resolution said,

Ryan, Jim Brown Pace
35-23 Comeback Victory

BY FRITZ HOWELL
CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's Browns came from behind in the final quarter Saturday night with some sensational passing by quarterback Frank Ryan to defeat the Pittsburgh Steelers 35-23 and cement their hold on top place in the National Football League's Eastern Conference.

A crowd of 84,684, largest in Browns' history, saw a dazzling display by both sides as the undefeated teams battled for the conference lead.

Pittsburgh led four times during the torrid contest, but could not hold off Ryan as he passed to Gary Collins for 15 and 20 yard touchdowns, 19 yards to Rich Kreitling and scored one himself. Fullback Jim Brown, the league's leading scorer, who gained 175 yards in 21 tries, counted the other Cleveland marker on an eight-

Gagermeier and Pavelski Pace
Win Over Ferris

DE PERE — Dave Gagermeier and Pat Pavelski paced unbeaten St. Norbert College to its fourth straight victory here Saturday night. The Knights whipped Ferris State College of Big Rapids, Mich., 27-13, before 2,700 fans in Minahan Stadium.

Quarterback Gagermeier, normally a defensive regular who started for the first time on offense, scored two touchdowns and passed for a third. Pavelski intercepted four passes from his halfback position—and ran one back for a touchdown—and caught four others from his offensive end spot.

St. Norbert scored once in each quarter and ran up a 27-0 lead before Ferris scored on a 2-yard run by Emery Welsh and a Frank Davis-to-John Brandstetter pass (in the last five seconds).

St. Norbert's first touchdown came on a 62-yard pass play. Gagermeier to Art Fisher. Ed Hammen took a hard pass from center and circled end for the extra point (a 1-pointer under NAIA rules).

Gagermeier went two yards for the second and fourth touchdowns. Pavelski's interception was returned 20 yards for a third-period score. Hammen kicked the points after the second and third TDs.

UCLA Soph Helps 10-9 Grid Win

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — UCLA sophomore halfback Bob Richardson raced an intercepted pass 47 yards to the Stanford five, setting up the Bruins' winning fourth quarter touchdown Saturday in a 10-9 victory.

Staubach Completes 14 of 16 Passes As Navy Tramples Michigan, 26-13

Associated Press Sports Writer
ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Quarterback Roger Staubach threw unerringly and helped shred Michigan's defenses with his own running as unbeaten Navy trampled Michigan 26-13 here Saturday.

Staubach, who entered the game as the nation's total offense leader, completed 14 of 16 passes for 237 yards.

His passes accounted for two touchdowns and he scored a third himself as the sixth-ranked Middies broke the game open with two touchdowns in the second quarter and two more in the third.

Staubach's longest aerial in the first half, in which he completed eight of eight, was a 54-yard pay-off pitch to halfback John Sai.

Dodgers Win Third in Row Behind Drysdale's 3-Hitter

Tommy Davis Drives In Only Run; Los Angeles Eyes Clincher With Sandy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Drysdale, a tall, handsome part-time TV actor, pitched the Los Angeles Dodgers to their third straight World Series victory over the reeling New York Yankees Saturday with a three-hit, 1-0 triumph.

One more defeat today and the futile Yanks will go down the drain, victims of their own patented four-straight killer punch.

No clubs in 59 previous series ever has been able to bounce back after losing three in a row. The Yanks, with a total of three runs in three games and a Sandy Koufax ahead, don't look like the team to rewrite the book, even though they hold the record for four-straight sweeps with six.

Once again the Dodgers pinned the Yanks to the mat by taking an early lead. In this case it was only one run but it did the trick with Drysdale.

Dodger speed, young Jim Bouton's wildness and the inability of the highly touted Yankee infield to come up with the big play at the right time added up to that lonely run.

Gilliam Walks
With one out in the first, Jim Gilliam worked the 24-year-old Yankee right-hander to a 3-2 count.

Drysdale, a tall, handsome part-time TV actor, pitched the Los Angeles Dodgers to their third straight World Series victory over the reeling New York Yankees Saturday with a three-hit, 1-0 triumph.

Working carefully on Tommy Davis, Bouton let his fifth pitch bounce into the dirt away from catcher Elston Howard for a wild pitch. Gilliam quickly dashed to second.

Davis hitting star of the series then smashed a single through the usually dependable Robby Richardson that rolled into short right center, far enough to permit the speedy Gilliam to score the only run. Tommy's smash appeared to scoot off the edge of the infield grass and hopped off Richardson's foot.

The Dodgers were not smashing the ball, but the Yanks weren't doing a thing. They went quietly inning after inning as Big D blew them down. Not until the seventh did a single Dodger outfielder have a putout. In fact, they had three in all, all by Ron Fairly.

The futile Yanks gave the crowd of 55,912, largest in the history of plush Dodger Stadium, a thrill on the last out. Joe Pepitone tore into a Drysdale pitch and lofted it to deep right field. Jim Plankenhorn's 21-yard field near the Yankee bullpen. Fairly, who doubles as a first baseman or outfielder as the occasion demands, raced back and pulled it down about five feet short of home run territory.

New York had one big chance to get Drysdale. That opportunity came in the second inning when Mickey Mantle dropped a bunt and period to give the Wildcats' single behind third base for his first hit of the series, and Pepitone was hit by a Drysdale pitch. With men on first and second and nobody out, Big D was in trouble.

But Drysdale, a 6-foot-6 giant, was up to the occasion. He made Howard go after a high hard one for a strikeout. Blanchard rolled out to Dick Tracewski, advancing the runners to second and third with two gone.

Clete Boyer was ordered walked intentionally by Manager Walt Alston, loading the bases. Bouton was the next batter and Drysdale struck him out on three pitches.

Drysdale, a 19-game winner this year after winning 25 last year when he was awarded the Cy Young Trophy as top pitcher in the majors, had been saved for the Dodgers' home opener so that the left-handers, Koufax and Johnny Podres, could pitch at Yankee Stadium.

He came through with a strong game all the way, striking out nine men and walking only one. He fanned Mantle, Howard, Tom

Buckeyes Blank Indiana in Their Big 10 Opener

Dick Van Rapphorst Breaks Bakken's Field Goal Record

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Dick Van Rapphorst broke the Big Ten field goal distance record and Tom Federle and Greg Lashutka broke the Hoosiers' hearts with a pass interception as Ohio State beat Indiana 21-0 Saturday.

The crowd set an Indiana football record of 42,296.

Van Rapphorst cleared the crossbar from 48 yards away with a 32 left in the second quarter, and he did it again in the fourth quarter from the easy (for him) distance of 19 yards.

Federle intercepted a pass by Indiana's Frank Stavroff in the first quarter to set up a Buckeye touchdown which Lashutka scored on a 24-yard pass from Don Unverferth. Lashutka tackled Indiana's Bill Malinchak in the end zone for a safety in the fourth quarter that ended Indiana's last hopes.

With Indiana thus discouraged, the Buckeyes finally got a drive going late in the fourth quarter and marched 45 yards after taking Indiana's free kick following the safety. Unverferth passed four yards for the touchdown.

Second Loss
It was the Big Ten opener for Ohio State and the second conference loss for Indiana.

Van Rapphorst's first field goal broke a conference record of 47 yards set by Jim Bakken of Wisconsin against Northwestern Nov. 11, 1961.

The Hoosiers took charge of the game in the second quarter and dominated play throughout the period. They controlled everything except the goal line and could get nothing done about their nine-point deficit.

Indiana drove to Ohio State's 4-yard line in that period on Stavroff's passing and the running of Marv Woodson and Tom Nowatzke, but a pass from Stavroff to Malinchak fell incomplete to the end zone.

Crunching Defense Too Much for Cadets

BY LEW FERGUSON
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota's crunching defense set up three touchdowns on two fumbles recoveries and a pass interception as the football Gophers defeated Army 24-8 Saturday.

The Gophers only had to go 20 and seven yards to score after Frank Marchlewski and Gene Raibel recovered fumbles. Minnesota drove 44 yards after the interception to score.

Army finally broke through the Minnesota defense for a fourth quarter touchdown, moving 38 yards in six plays with Ken Walder ramming the final three yards.

It was Army's sixth straight defeat at the hands of a Big Ten opponent. The Cadets suffered their first loss of 1963, while Minnesota scored as

LSU Nudaes Georgia Tech In 7-6 Upset

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State's sophomore-dominated football team upset nationally ranked Georgia Tech 7-6 Saturday night in a Southeastern Conference gridiron battle.

It was the third straight year that LSU had whipped a previously undefeated Tech squad. The Yellow Jackets entered the game as the No. 7 team in The Associated Press collegiate rankings.

Tech's highly touted quarterback, Billy Lothridge, who just five days ago was acclaimed Back of the Week met his equal in LSU's sophomore signal caller Pat Screen.

The 5-foot-11, 181 pound Screen gained 95 yards rushing as he handled the once-beaten Tigers like a veteran.

Illini Upset Wildcats in Big 10 Duel

Use Razzle-Dazzle Touchdown Pass, Field Goal to Win

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Illinois stifled three long goaldawd drives by Northwestern in the last quarter Saturday to beat the Wildcats, 10-9, on a razzle-dazzle touchdown pass and field goal.

Previously unbeaten Northwestern was a touchdown favorite in this important Big Ten football battle opening Illini league play.

Northwestern's great passer, Tommy Myers, hurled a 29-yard scoring pass to Tom O'Grady in the opening 40 seconds of the second period to give the Wildcats' a 6-0 lead.

But, otherwise, Myers was pres-ured by Illinois' charging line men and many times, when he did have time, his aerial othermised or his receivers dropped the ball.

It just wasn't Myers' day and the Illini took advantage of it for its first victory over its intrastate rival since 1959.

Center Joe Cerne's high snap-back prevented Northwestern from converting after its touchdown.

Only 5 Yards
With 3½ minutes left in the first half, Illinois got the ball on Northwestern's 32 when Ron Rec, a 38-yard placement for Notre tor's fizzled punt went only five yards. On the first play, sophomore quarterback Fred Custardo shot a flat pass to Ron Fearn, who then heaved 32 yards to Jim Warren in the end zone for the Illini touchdown. Plankenhorn booted the point.

Myers mixed up running with two pass completions to George Burman in the third period as the Wildcats thrust 43 yards. After a seven-yard shot from Myers to Burman was ruled caught out of the end zone, Pete Stamison booted a 24-yard field goal putting the Wildcats ahead 9-7.

After the ensuing kickoff, Illinois' sophomore backs, led by Custardo, Sam Price and Jim Grabowski, moved 58 yards to Northwestern's four. During the push, a pass interference call on a fourth-down-and-six yards to go situation gave the Illini an automatic first down and kept the threat alive.

Plankenhorn was called in for a field goal attempt at a dangerous angle. It sailed perfectly.

Texas Wallops Oklahoma State

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas, the nation's third-ranked team, surrendered a first quarter touchdown Saturday night, then stormed back for a 34-7 football victory over Oklahoma State.

Behind for the first time this season when the Cowboys struck at the start, Texas shrugged it off with an overpowering attack, took back the advantage and outplayed Oklahoma State decisively the rest of the game. Texas led 20-7 at the half and coasted in.

An interested spectator was Coach Bud Wilkinson of the Oklahoma Sooners, who meet the Longhorns in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas next Saturday in their traditional battle. Oklahoma had an open date this week after gaining the national No. 1 spot last week with 17-12 defeat of Southern California.

Minnesota Whips Army '11'

Reid rammed three yards off left tackle. He also converted.

Army then had the ball only three plays before Willie Costanza picked off a Carl Stichewicz pass at the Cadet 44. The Gophers covered that distance in 13 plays, with Bob Sadek diving over center for the touchdown. Reid's kick made it 17-0 six minutes before the half.

54-Yard Run Helps Defeat Beloit, 8-7

RELOIT (AP) — A 54-yard touchdown run by sophomore halfback John Schumm and a two-point conversion enabled St. Olaf to pass at the Cadet 44. The Gophers covered that distance in 13 plays, with Bob Sadek diving over center for the touchdown. Reid's kick made it 17-0 six minutes before the half.

Beloit was in control of the situation until midway in the third quarter when Schumm carried the ball on a quick opener over guard, saw daylight and sprinted all the way to the goal. Trailing 7-6 at that point, St. Olaf needed a two-point conversion to take the lead. This was accomplished by Pete Aus on a fake placekick which sent him around end across the goal.

Heavily-Favored Packers Are Wary of Rams Today

BY ART DALEY
Post-Crescent News Service
GREEN BAY — Today's warning: that enemy gun the Packers will be messin' around with in City Stadium is loaded.

The Rams haven't won a game yet but they're bound to explode and, like everybody else the Packers meet up with they'll have both barrels highly charged up.

Green Bay is a handsome favorite to post its third straight victory, but the Rams have always been tough for the champions. Just hark back to last December when the Bays closed their season in Los Angeles. The Packers were lucky to get out alive—much less win, 20-17, finishing with two able-bodied backs.

And speaking about the Rams being tough, it seems like only yesterday that L.A. crashed dear old GB, 45 to 6, in 1959 and nipped the Pack, 33-31, in '60. That top-sider, which ended a 3-game winning streak, was the worst licking Coach Vince Lombardi ever took and it launched a 5-game loss streak. The loss the next year opened a 2-game losing skein.

5-Game Streak
The Packers haven't lost two in a row since and the Rams haven't beaten GB since that tight setback. In fact, Green Bay has a 5-game winning streak going with the Rams.

So the Packers have history going for 'em but let's go back this afternoon. Kick-off is set for 1:06, and a sun-kissed capacity crowd of 42,327 will attend.

Ram Coach Harland Svare has announced that he'll alternate quarterbacks, opening with Zeke Bratkowski and following with fireballer Roman Gabriel. This can be murder for a defense if the change of pace QBs can get the defense swinging at a lot of had pitches.

The Rams haven't been doing much scoring but that's where that undefeated gun business comes in. They've been moving the ball well and getting into scoring position but, as Svare explained, "it's like making those 3-foot punts." Once they start dropping, it's easy.

FVL Achieves 34-7 Football Win Over Manitowoc Lutheran

Wolslegel, Koenig Lead Foxes in Rushing and Passing

BY HENRY SIMON
Post-Crescent Staff Writer
MANITOWOC — Seniors Jack Wolslegel and Wayne Koenig put on a 2-man show for Fox Valley Lutheran High School Saturday afternoon, playing key roles in FVL's 34-7 win over Manitowoc Lutheran High School here.

The pair accounted for over half the totals in both FVL rushing and passing. They also scored four of the five Fox Lutheran touchdowns.

The Foxes wasted no time in getting on the scoreboard after returning the open kickoff 27 yards to their own 47-yard line. The shifty Koenig took the first handoff of the game and raced around right end on a power sweep to score the visitors' first TD.

Wolslegel toted the ball for the extra point, and the Appleton squad was off and running.

Gets Drive Going
Manitowoc Lutheran got its own drive going, penetrating to the FVL 27, but the Foxes held. Exchanging punts, Fox Lutheran had the ball on the 39-yard marker of the hosts.

After losing two yards on the first play, Wolslegel scampered through the middle of the line for a 42-yard TD jaunt. The PAT attempt failed.

Although Chuck Krahn and Mark Dahlke intercepted passes in the second quarter, FVL, nothing with the ball on the resulting series. The Foxes did sandwich a 69-yard scoring drive between the thefts, however.

Big play in the quarter that led to the score was a 53-yard pass play between quarterback Lee Kiepke and Wayne Koenig, who was dragged down one yard from paydirt. Wolslegel rumbled in for the score on the next play, and when "Wolly" also tallied the PAT the Foxes lead 20-0.

The most spectacular act of the FVL duo's performance was yet to come. On the opening kickoff of the second half, chosen by Manitowoc Lutheran because of the wind, "Wolly" scooted 75 yards for a TD that put the Foxes out of the reach of the Lancers. Signal caller Bob Krueger added the extra point.

Start a Drive
After getting the ball back the hosts started a drive, but FVL took over after stopping the Manti squad on the Fox Lutheran 15. The Foxes drove to the Lancer 5, but Chester Jaenig, who played an outstanding game for the hosts, intercepted an FVL aerial to stem the visitors' scoring threat temporarily.

The Fox Lutheran defense forced Manitowoc Lutheran to punt, however, and a bad kick gave FVL the ball on the 25. Three plays later Krueger threw to end John Mueller for 20 yards and the final FVL score. The he-spectacular signal caller added the "Foxes' last point, and the score stood 34-0.

The last quarter was all Manitowoc Lutheran, as the FVL second and third strings battled it out with the Lancers. The Foxes got the ball for only six plays in the period.

The hosts' TD came through an interception. After driving from the FVL 35, the versatile Jaenig top ML pass receiver and rusher in the contest, went five yards for the score. Steve Bialowski pushed across the PAT.

Playing good games for FVL, in addition to Koenig and Wolslegel, were Lee Kiepke on offense and Gary Buss, John Hartwig, and Barry Wierschke on defense, according to Coach Dave Umnus.

The FVL mentor was pleased with the Foxes' ability "to come up with the big play," and also was gratified with the fine showing by Wolslegel.

Mild Weather Greeters Hunters on Opening Day of 1963 Duck Season

Finding Water Is Big Problem in Shiocton Area

Post-Crescent News Service
SHIOCTON — Blue bird weather and a stiff north breeze greeted duck hunters who opened Wisconsin's 1963 season in this area.

The problem was not so much finding ducks as finding water. As a result, the Wolf River was a popular place for duck hunters. The public hunting ground on Country Trunk M north of here had a full quota of hunters. About 50 cars were lined up when the season opened, some of them there as early as 10 a.m. The season opened at noon with a bag limit of four ducks, which could include not more than two mallards or two wood ducks.

Mallard and wood ducks seem to be the most plentiful waterfowl in this area with a smattering of teal, both blue-winged and green-winged.

There was a somewhat restrained roll of gunfire in the public hunting ground area at opening hour as disturbed ducks circled and traded back and forth, drawing fire from the hunters. But after about 15 minutes, their water where they found it. Where a man could find some small bodies of water, there was the brushy pot-hole this writer excellent shooting to be had, was shooting.

Leeman Area Success Recorded By Early Shooters

BY JIM HARP
Post-Crescent Staff Writer
LEEMAN — It was a day for sightseeing, a walk through the woods to enjoy Mother Nature, but not a day for ducks.

Within an hour after the opening shot was fired, the local ducks that were available were already wise to the idea of how high to fly and where not to go. Those hunters who were in the right spot at the right time, but after the early firing was over things settled down to only sporadic shooting.

My hunting partner and I were along the Wolf River, more famous in the springtime for its wall-eye and white bass runs and today probably a better bet for fishing than duck hunting. The cascade of shots started and continued for about 45 minutes. By 1 p.m., the situation was back to normal except for "here-and-there" action that caused hunters' heads to shift from one area to another as they searched the sky for ducks.

Ducks were still uneducated by mid-afternoon and forced to take shooting was light and sporadic. They couldn't be driven out of the brushy pot-hole this writer excellent shooting to be had, was shooting.

Mallards and teal, those ducks which had been in the area for some time, made up the major share of the opening-day bag. We checked two hunters who had six ducks, four mallards and a pair of small teal, and saw another hunter who had only one duck and admitted his dog had retrieved it, a mallard that someone else had shot. Three other hunters were in the same boat as us—nothing in the game bag.

The general consensus was that it was too nice a day for ducks, better for fishing.

NOTES and NOTIONS

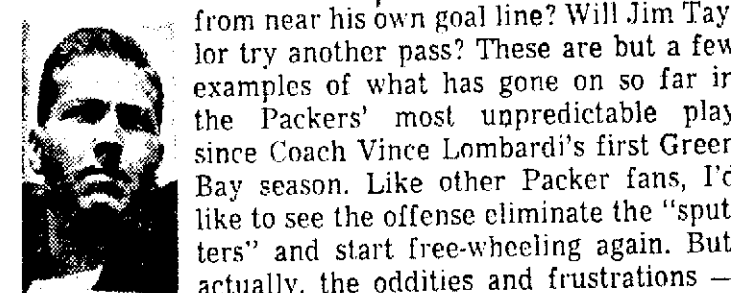

The University of Wisconsin did it with Ron Miller in 1960 and with Ron VanderKelen in '62. Now, the football Badgers have come up with another "sleeper" in Jimmy Jones. The transfer student, who was just another name on the roster prior to the Notre Dame game (although he caught two passes for 21 yards in the Western Michigan contest), became the Badgers' new glamor boy with his aerobic, game-saving receptions against the Irish. If ever a potential star was kept effectively under wraps, it was Jones. After his transfer from Trinidad Junior College, in Colorado, he sat out the 1962 UW season with a knee injury (he was awarded an extra year of eligibility by the Big 10). Jones did not participate in 1963 spring practice. In the Badger football "dope" book, the 6-3 junior was listed as the probable third-team end. At a writers' meeting last spring, Coach Milt Bruhn bemoaned the loss of Pat Richter almost more than he did the graduation of VanderKelen. Richter, according to Bruhn, had an uncanny knack of freeing himself — of breaking out of a pattern, if necessary — for a catch. And, Richter's size also made him the type of target that doesn't happen along very often. But, Bruhn never mentioned Jones as a possible Richter replacement. So, without fanfare, Jones came on like a typhoon. He was named the UW's "player of the week" and ranked high in the national "linebacker of the week" poll. Movies of the Badger-ND game, in which Jones and his mates engineered a tingling rally, will be shown Wednesday night in the Fox Valley Center.

Bruhn has a chance this season to become the second winningest coach in UW history. He now is tied with Ivy Williamson for third place with 41 wins. Harry Stuhldreher has 45. The all-time UW leader is Phil King, with 65.

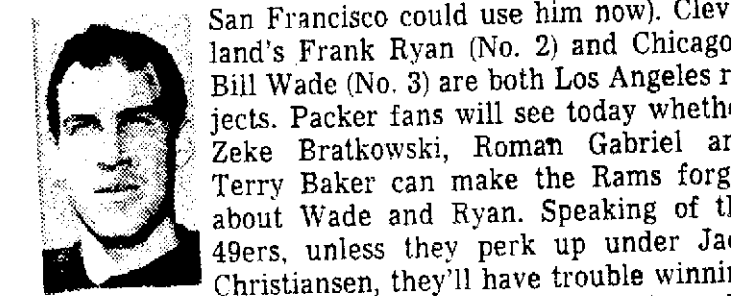

Wonder what surprises the Packers will cook up today. Will they hang onto the ball? Will Bart Starr "ad-lib" another touchdown? Will Ray Norton try a fake punt from near his own goal line? Will Jim Taylor try another pass? These are but a few examples of what has gone on so far in the Packers' most unpredictable play since Coach Vince Lombardi's first Green Bay season. Like other Packer fans, I'd like to see the offense eliminate the "sputters" and start free-wheeling again. But, actually, the oddsities and frustrations — together with bursts of brilliance — have added up to some mighty interesting Sunday afternoons. More so than the pair of 49-0 victories over Chicago and Philadelphia last year, for instance. It is unlikely that such overpowering precision is in prospect this year. Some of the same fans who were a little bored by the perfection of past Packer routs are now free in their criticism of the '63 showing — despite the two wins in three tries. Maybe the offensive line has lost a fraction of a step in speed and a modicum of its zeal. Maybe the diminution of Bart Starr's superb passing touch (from better than 60 per cent accuracy to below 50 per cent) will prove permanent. Maybe, as one Chicago source insists, the Packers have lost their momentum and drive. Maybe. But don't count on it. I, for one, believe the Packers will recapture their 1961-'62 consistency and class any Sunday now. In the meantime, it's fun watching the offense fight to regain its form — and it's always great to watch that defensive unit.

The parents of Bob Lehmann, Notre Dame captain who played against Wisconsin last Saturday, have quite a problem. They'd like to see both Bob and his brother Ken play. The hitch is that Ken plays for Xavier University — where he is a co-captain. Actually, the Otto Lehmanns, of Louisville, could conceivably see most of the games played by both sons — because of the help of several open dates, Friday night games and Saturday night games.

The current top three passers in the National Football League are all transplants. First-rated Y. A. Tittle was shuttled from the 49ers to the Giants (and oh, how San Francisco could use him now). Cleveland's Frank Ryan (No. 2) and Chicago's Bill Wade (No. 3) are both Los Angeles rejects. Packer fans will see today whether Zeke Bratkowski, Roman Gabriel and Terry Baker can make the Rams forget about Wade and Ryan. Speaking of the 49ers, unless they perk up under Jack Christiansen, they'll have trouble winning a game and could well be the NFL's weakest entry in years. Former Coach Red Hickey had more than his share of bad breaks. You can't lose players like John Brodie, Bill Kilmer and Clyde Conner by injury — as Hickey did — and hope to field a strong team.

Jim Bakken, former UW kicking star, is coming through surprisingly well for the St. Louis Cards this season. He is tied for fifth in league scoring with 18 points, a total which includes three field goals in five tries. Originally drafted by the Rams, Bakken sat out most of last year with an injury.

A new Midwest Conference trophy will be awarded during the current school year to the outstanding scholar-athlete in the junior classes of the 10 member colleges. The eventual winner will have maintained the highest academic average and have earned letters in at least two varsity sports. The trophy will be awarded in behalf of the late Roy W. LeClere, of Cedar Rapids, a long-time booster of the MC.

Neenah Quarterback Tom Diedrich (10) picks up two yards for a first down in second period action in Saturday's game against Menasha. Making the stop are Rick Zimmerman (11) and Dick Sorensen (1). Floyd Dietzo is the official. After trailing, 7-0, at halftime, the Rockets scored four second half touchdowns to register a 27-7 win, their 16th straight. (Post-Crescent Photo)

The Jays punted after the next series and taking over at its 44, the Red and White began its second goalward trek. It took eight plays and the clincher was a 19-yard pass from Diedrich to end Bill Falk, who had a step on the Menasha defender. Diedrich's kick was wide.

The Rocket defense, which limited its rivals to 21 yards in the second half, forced another Menasha punt and Neenah took over on its 33. This time it only took seven plays to score with Hollis Bliss carrying over from the two. Diedrich converted for a 20-7 tally with 7:15 left to play.

Ed began intercepted a Menasha pass on the 20 three plays later. Bruce Rasmussen rambled to the five and Diedrich scored on another keeper. He again kicked the point.

Began swiped another pass on the 25 in the next series and brought the ball to the 10. The Rockets took it to the five. Diedrich tried a field goal (which was wide) but Menasha was offside on the play. The Jays mustered enough defense to stop the fourth down play on the one.

They had the ball up to the 38 when the game ended, getting their only two first downs of the second half enroute.

Menasha made 89 yards rushing in the first half and 21 in the second. Neenah ground out 110 in the first two periods and 157 in the third and fourth. The Rockets completed six passes for 64 yards; Menasha had one for two yards.

Three TDs in Final Period Win for Duke

Blue Devils Top Maryland, 30-12, Stay Unbeaten

RICHTON, Va. (AP) — Frustrated Duke threw off the shackles of a stubborn Maryland defense and came from behind with three touchdowns in the final quarter Saturday for a 30-12 victory that kept the Blue Devils on the high road to a fourth straight Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

A 60-yard touchdown pass from sophomore Scotty Glacken to end Stan Crisson brought the Blue Devils from a 12-10 deficit and put them ahead for keeps in the nationally televised game, the football feature of the 15th National Tobacco Festival.

After Glacken's bomb, the Blue Devils added points on Jay Wilkinson's five-yard touchdown run and a spectacular 76-yard touchdown punt return by sophomore halfback John Gutekunst.

The triumph in the festival game before 20,000 spectators kept the Blue Devils unbeaten in three starts. Fired-up Maryland, which for a long time this sunny afternoon looked like an upset winner, went down to its third straight setback.

Maryland, losing a bit of its punch early in the second period when a bruised hip temporarily sidelined star quarterback Dick Shiner, trailed at halftime 10-6. But the Terps, with Shiner cast in a starring role and scoring the go-ahead touchdown on a three-yard plunge, took a 12-10 lead into the riotous fourth period.

Brown Hands Yale Gridders 12-7 Surprise

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Brown surprised favored Yale 12-7 in their battle to stay out of the Ivy League football cellar Saturday. The Bruins earned the victory with a display of running and passing that baffled the losers.

Brown, trounced 41-14 last week by Columbia, and Yale, making its first league start under new Coach John Pont, did all their scoring in the first half.

Sophomore Bob Hall, the outstanding player on the bowl, scored for Brown from the three-yard line in the first period and pitched eight yards to Bill Seiple for the decisive touchdown in the second period.

Yale led temporarily, 7-6, on sophomore Tone Grante's one-yard end run and Chuck Mercein's 35-yard conversion after a penalty had nullified his first attempt.

Princeton Grid Team Edges Columbia, 7-6

NEW YORK (AP) — A soccer-style conversion kick by Charles Gogolak gave Princeton a 7-6 victory over Columbia Saturday in an exciting Ivy League football game.

Gogolak, brother of the Cornell kicker, booted the extra punt with the side of his foot after Don McKay had sprinted 44 yards for Princeton's touchdown in the first quarter.

Columbia, guided by the brilliant and versatile Archie Roberts, came back to score in the second period and got close enough for three unsuccessful field goal attempts as it dominated the rest of the game.

But Roberts' failure on a run for a two-point conversion proved decisive in the Columbia defeat.

Alert Ghosts Trim Clintonville High In 18-6 Grid Upset

Verstegen Scores on 78-Yard Run; Clints Complete 13 Passes

BY ED VAN BERKEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

KAUKAUNA — Playing hard, alert football, the Ghosting of Ghosts of Kaukauna High School rolled to an 18-6 upset win over the Clintonville Truckers here Saturday afternoon.

The Ghosts set the pattern early in the first quarter by scoring the first time they had their hands on the ball, repulsing a Clintonville drive deep in their own territory on the next series of downs and combining a strong ground game with occasional passes to keep the Truckers off balance.

A 78-yard run by Tim Verstegen early in the third period put the game on ice for Kaukauna and seemed to take much of the starch from the losers. The losers filled the air with passes, completing 13 of 26 attempts. Many of the passes came late in the game as the Truckers battled to catch the Ghosts.

Passes to Promer
Clintonville kicked off to the Ghosts and Pete Bordini returned the kickoff off the Kaukauna 46-yard stripe, a 26-yard return. On the first play, Bob Main hit Verstegen with a pass and Kaukauna was on position on the Clintonville 25. In two plays, Verstegen picked up 10 yards and then Main hit Bob Promer in the end zone for the first score, only four plays into the game. The try for point failed by Tom Hanby was blocked.

Bill LaViolette took the subsequent kickoff for the Truckers and returned 27 yards to the Clintonville 47-yard stripe. He narrowly missed going all the way as he evaded a swarm of tacklers on the 30 and was hit by Dan Bay, one man between him and the goal.

Steve Hedtke picked up two yards and Bill Melzer hit Terry Dieck and Bruce Christensen for four yards each and a first down. Another pass to Dieck and two running plays moved the Truckers deeper into Kaukauna territory. A pass Melzer to Sam Hogan put the ball on the 15-yard stripe and a first down.

Hedtke Workhorse
Hedtke, workhorse for the losers, ran for eight in two plays and a Melzer-to-Dan Thompson pass put the ball on the 5-yard stripe. Pete Bordini broke through alert football, the Ghosting of Ghosts of Kaukauna High School rolled to an 18-6 upset win over the Clintonville Truckers here Saturday afternoon.

Using straight power plays with an occasional end around the Ghosts moved downfield racking up four first downs before the drive was halted on the 17 yard line when an attempted field goal was fumbled and Clintonville took over on the 28-yard stripe. The Ghosts missed a second score ground game with occasional passes to keep the Truckers off balance.

After Clintonville took over on its own 28 a running play netted two yards before the Truckers were assessed a 5-yard penalty. On the next play, Melzer hit on a 9-yard pass play, but the receiver fumbled and Jim Rademacher recovered for Kaukauna on the 29-yard stripe.

Verstegen skirted end to the 7-yard stripe, added two off tackle and then Bob Promer powered five yards for the score. The try for point was wide, but Kaukauna held a 12-0 lead with time running out in the first half. Shortly after the kickoff Bud O'Brien intercepted a Melzer pass and put Kaukauna in business again on the Clintonville 30 but Bruce Christensen intercepted a Main pass on the 1-yard stripe to the goal. The try for point failed by Tom Hanby was blocked.

Bill LaViolette took the subsequent kickoff for the Truckers and returned 27 yards to the Clintonville 47-yard stripe. He narrowly missed going all the way as he evaded a swarm of tacklers on the 30 and was hit by Dan Bay, one man between him and the goal.

The Trucker defense stiffened and took over on downs. Here the losers began to move with Melzer hitting Gary Tveiten for 19 yards, Ken Koeller for 12 and finally Hedtke for 19 yards and the score.

The try for point was wide. Melzer recovered a Kaukauna fumble shortly after the kickoff, but Bordini retaliated by intercepting a Melzer pass when Gary Schubring broke through and hit Melzer's arm as he attempted to throw. Kaukauna attempted to run out the clock, but Clintonville took over on the Kaukauna 41 with 28 seconds remaining. O'Brien picked off a Melzer pass as the game ended to halt the Truckers.

GALESBURG, Ill. —An 80-yard Holstrom's 1-yard punch. A pass touchdown run by sophomore Henry Rutz of Oshkosh, midway through the final period, turned what looked like a sure defeat into a thrilling, 16-14 Midwest Conference victory for Lawrence. Saturday at the Knox College field.

The Vikings now have a 1-2 record, while the Siwashers are 0-3.

Knox dominated most of the game, at least statistically, and had scored a touchdown to take a 14-8 lead when the speedster Rutz got the ball. Actually, the ball was lateralled to Rutz on the kickoff, fumbled, and then picked up to start the play. Rutz was hit on three occasions in the first 10 yards. When he did break into the open he used his speed to race away.

The game was won on the next play. With the score tied at 14-14, the Vikings decided to run for the extra point. The ball was flipped to Appleton's Pat Keane and the 155-pound sophomore skirted around the end almost untouched.

Tackles Quarterback
Lawrence opened the scoring in the first quarter. The first two points came on a safety when Gary Kussow tackled the Knox quarterback, Duke Bothof, in the end zone. Knox had returned the kickoff only to their 10 yard line and then tried a pass.

The first Viking touchdown came later in the opening quarter on an 11-play, 51-yard drive. Co-captain Carl Berghult pounded the last two yards and the Vikes had an 8-0 lead. The extra point attempt was blocked.

Knox tied the score in the second period on a punt which went for minus yardage. The Siwashers took over on the Lawrence 2-yard line, but took four plays to put it away. Pete Holstrom went the final yard. Bothof ran for the extra point and it was an 8-8 halftime deadlock.

Holstrom Scores
Knox took the lead in the fourth quarter. A 57-yard drive, featuring a 10-yard scamper by Pete Holstrom, was climaxed by

This year's estimated prize list recorded in the past week in for the 24th annual Fox River Valley Bowling Association tournament will be about $7,000.

Oct. 19 is the deadline for filing entries in the tournament which will be held at the Playdium Lanes in Sheboygan Nov. 3 to Dec. 8. Competition is restricted to keglers living in Brown, Calumet, Columbia, Dane, Door, Dodge, Fond du Lac, Green Lake, Iowa, Jefferson, Kewaunee, Langlade, Lincoln, Manitowish, Marquette, Marathon, Marinette, Oconto, Outagamie, Portage, Rock, Shawano, Sheboygan, Waupaca, Wood, Waushara and Winnebago counties.

The tourney will offer competition for regular teams and booster squads with the latter restricted to 3-man entries averaging 825 or less.

Handling the entries and communications is Clarence Wirtz, P. O. Box 751, Oshkosh.

When you talk about split troubles, talk to Irene Deligen who bowls in the Fish Couples League at Hahn's Lanes.

Irene had no fewer than six in one game and managed 14 out of the 30 possible in her 3-game series. Of the first 12, she managed to clean-up one.

Millie Daniels came up with one better in the Five by Eight League when she had seven splits in one game.

Hawkeyes Post 17-7 Victory Over Huskies

Iowa Marches 93 Yards for Tie-Breaking Tally

SEATTLE (AP)—Not lightning, thunder, Washington desperation or a waterfall of rain could stop a fourth quarter surge Saturday that carried the Iowa Hawkeyes 93 yards to a tie-breaking touchdown and set up a 17-7 victory for the visitors in an intercollegiate football game.

The 39-yard field goal that Jay Roberts kicked a few moments later merely made the Hawkeye win more impressive against a team that was rated 10th nationally prior to the season start.

Against a fumble plagued Washington team Iowa had opened the scoring in the second quarter on a 44-yard pass play that stunned the already damp crowd of 55,200. Quarterback Fred Riddle rifled the ball to halfback Paul Krause, who had gotten behind the last defensive man to take the pitch on the 10 and amble untouched to the goal. Roberts kicked the conversion.

Shed Jitters
Washington's Huskies, temporarily shedding the jitters which lost them the ball on fumbles three times in the first half, put together a concentrated drive to tally in the third quarter.

Mainly on the power running of fullback Charlie Browning and a 36-yard run by quarterback Bill Douglas, the Huskies rolled 69 yards in eight plays. Browning went the final 11 as the first downpour drenched the stadium. Ron Tvedt kicked the score-knocking conversion.

Iowa started from its own six after a Washington punt with Riddle quarterbacking and Bobbi Grier drove most of the running. Grier broke away for one 43-yard jamble. An interference ruling on Riddle's pass over the goal to Cloyd Webb gave Iowa the ball on Washington's one and from there Riddle dived into the end zone, for all of the points his team really needed.

Roberts had tried and missed placekicks from the 32 and 31 in the first half and Washington also missed a placekick try.

In the first quarter Browning crossed the goal on an 18-yard run but a holding penalty nullified the Washington score.

Navy Approves Pro Football For Joe Bellino

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy said today it would amount to "discrimination" if naval officers who play professional ball were subjected to different rules than Navy men who hold other "moonlighting" jobs.

The question was raised after it became known that Navy Lt. Joe Bellino, former All-America halfback at Annapolis, had signed to play professional football with a New England team, Providence of the Atlantic Coast League.

Individually, Keane gained 34 yards and Berghult 31. Holstrom had 75 of the 109 rushing yards gained by Knox.

The Army, Navy and Air Force said they don't know how many of their men may be playing in professional sports because they keep no such records.

All three services said it is a matter for local commanders to decide on an individual basis.

Dennis Claridge Scores Twice

Nebraska Wears Down Iowa State For 21-7 Win

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Nebraska wore down Iowa State by hammering out two second half touchdowns in 93-degree heat Saturday for a 21-7 win in the opening Big Eight Conference football game for both clubs.

After being out-played and held to a 7-7 deadlock by the Cyclones in the first two periods, Nebraska marched 84 yards in 12 plays with the opening kickoff of the second half for the clincher.

Quarterback Dennis Claridge carried it over from four yards on a keeper and then added the insurance touchdown early in the final quarter.

Cyclone captain, Dick Hoover, provided the big thrill in the second quarter by scampering 70 yards for a score on a fake punt play.

With Steve Balkovec back to kick, Hoover took a direct snap in his blocking back position, batted the middle, wriggled away from at least five tacklers and outraced the Husker safetyman down the sidelines for the six-point drive.

South Downs GBE, 24-12, in FRVC Game

SHEBOYGAN—Sheboygan South scored its second win in three starts Saturday by building up an early lead and taking a 24-12 Fox River Valley Conference victory over Green Bay East. East is now 1-2.

South scored in every period. Don Bifano's 1-yard stab, a field goal by Dennis Kaboord and Kaboord's extra point gave South a 10-0 halftime lead. Bifano scored again in the third period and Dick Vander Vaart in the fourth for the winners. Kaboord added all extra points.

East's touchdowns came against South reserves. John VanLieshout ran 38 yards with a loose fumble for the first and Bob Duca plunged four yards for the second.

'Up There With the Best Games I've Ever Pitched,' Says Drysdale

BY CHARLES MAHER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'd have to put this right up there with the best games I've ever pitched," Don Drysdale said Saturday after shutting out the New York Yankees on three hits in the third game of the World Series 1-0 for the Dodgers.

"But I'll tell you I was a little worried for a second there in the ninth inning," Drysdale said. "When Pepton hit that ball to right."

"I kept watching it carry and I didn't know how far it would go. Then I saw Fairly stop moving back and I knew that was it."

Fairly said he caught the ball about six feet in front of the box seat railing.

"I didn't think it would go out at first," Fairly said, "but then it started to carry and I started to worry."

Fairly's catch ended the game and sent the Dodgers into their clubhouse with a three-game jump on the defending world champions.

Koufax on Sunday

Neither Manager Walter Alston nor any of his players would predict the Dodgers will take it in four.

"But I'll tell you this," Drysdale said, "We've got one helluva pitcher going for us Sunday."

He was referring, of course to Sandy Koufax, who beat the Yankees with a 15-strikeout performance in the Series opener.

Drysdale, who has been accused several times of throwing spitballs, said Yankee Coach Frank Crosetti complained in sixth inning that he wasn't wiping off his right hand after touching his fingers to his mouth.

"I was rubbing my hand on my pants," Drysdale said, "but Crosetti kept yelling that he wanted me to rub my shirt. The umpire came over and told me that if I went to my mouth I should wipe my hand on my shirt regardless of whether I was going to the rosin bag. I said okay."

The incident brought to mind the time Drysdale was accused of using a spitter last season. His reply then: "My mother told me when I was just a little boy never to put dirty things in my mouth. And I've always lived by that."

of using a spitter last season. His reply then: "My mother told me when I was just a little boy never to put dirty things in my mouth. And I've always lived by that."

Over in the gloomy Yankee dressing room, Manager Ralph Houk said he would pitch his left-handed ace, Whitey Ford Sunday and send Hector Lopez to right field. John Blanchard replaced the ailing Roger Maris there Saturday.

"They are pitching like we expected but we're not hitting as well as we should," he said. "This isn't the end. Sometimes that last game is the hardest, just like we have a tough time winning the first."

Jim Bouton, the losing pitcher, said "I didn't have my control. I walked too many. If you lose a tough one like that during the season it's bad, but now . . ." He shrugged in despair.

Houk praised Bobby Richardson for a great play in the seventh. After John Roseboro had singled and gone to third on Dick Trac-wski's single, Richardson made a fine play on Drysdale's grounder and held Roseboro at third while he tossed out Drysdale at first.

Davis' Freak Single
Tracowski, who had moved to second on his single on the throw to third, apparently thought Roseboro had gone on home because he charged toward third base.

First baseman Pepton tossed to Tony Kubek. Tracowski turned to go back to second and then meekly trotted on to third where Roseboro was standing. Kubek tagged him to complete the double play.

"Richardson had Roseboro cold going home," said Houk. Tracowski must have been fooled. Roseboro would never have made it home safe.

On Tommy Davis' freak single in the first that brought in the winning run, Richardson said the ball apparently hit the mound and was deflected.

"The ball hit me on the shin," said Bobby. It glanced into right field and the all-important run came home.

Unitas Could Make It Interesting for Undefeated Bears

Cardinals and Vikings Match 2-1 Records This Afternoon

BY BOB GREEN

The Chicago Bears, bolting 267 yards along unbeaten and leading the Western Conference of the National Football League, just might be in for an interesting afternoon today.

It's all up to Johnny Unitas. The Baltimore quarterback, helped along by the return of receiver Lenny Moore, has demonstrated a return to the form that helped the Colts to league championships in 1953 and 1959 and could be pressed to turn on his old tormentors.

The game, the first of the regular season on the Bears' home field, is one of six scheduled in the NFL this afternoon. The others have St. Louis at Minnesota, San Francisco at Detroit, New York at Washington, Los Angeles at Green Bay and Dallas at Philadelphia.

Solid Favorites

The Bears, who have rolled over defending NFL champion Green Bay, Minnesota and Detroit in road games, are solid favorites in their home opener, but their defensive backfield can count on a busy workout.

Unitas, one of the most feared passers in the league, has thrown 107 times, completed 61, for more yardage, 774, than any other passer in the league. He had a big day in a losing effort at Green Bay last

On the other side of the ledger is the Chicago defense, which has allowed only 31 points in three games and leads the league in pass interceptions with 10. The Bears have beaten the Colts four straight in regular season play.

And, while Moore has recovered from an appendectomy, receiver Jimmy Orr is doubtful with a knee injury and Ray Berry is out indefinitely. The Colts are 1-2, while Chicago could do no worse than slip to a share of first.

The Cardinals and the Vikings match 2-1 records and a couple of the league's best young quarterbacks, St. Louis' Charley Johnson and Minnesota's Frank Tarkenton in the fourth interconference game of the season. The East has won all three previous meetings and, represented by St. Louis, is a paper-thin favorite in this one. It is the Cardinals' fourth straight road game and the first meeting ever in regular season play for the two teams.

New York, still on the rebound from a shocking shutout by Pittsburgh two weeks ago, has a string of 10 straight going against the Redskins and figure to make it healthy. He returned from an injury absence with three touchdowns, 61, for more yardage, 774, down passes last week. Each is the 2-1 New Coach Jack Christiansen, replacing Red Hickey of the

Bowling Tips

BY DON CARTER AND MARION LADEWIG

Push Away—Now!

It would be a boon to scoring if there were a way to tie the bowling ball and the starting foot together so that they would move simultaneously. This is so important to good timing. Until such a device is perfected, we'll just have to pretend that the foot cannot move until the ball does. This initial movement is called the push-away. Shove the ball forward as you begin your initial step (as shown in today's illustration). Failure to do so is a major fault among bowlers of all grades and I will refer to it here more than once.

winless 49ers, must face his old team, the tough Detroit Lions, without the services of No. 1 quarterback John Brodie, out with an injured throwing arm. Bobby Waters and Lamar McHan are expected to fill in. San Francisco is 0-3, Detroit 1-2 against the league's toughest opposition.

Dallas and Philadelphia each has yet to win, but each figures to be improved. Don Perkins, Dallas' top runner, missed the opener but already has jumped into the No. 5 spot in the league. Philadelphia always is dangerous with Sonny Jurgensen throwing to Tommy McDonald.

Wayne Neuman's 552 Leads Pin League

Wayne Neuman's 552 series was the only honor count recorded in the Continental Couples Bowling League at Jerry's Lanes.

Stop and Shop (12-3) is the leading team.

Fumbles Set Up 2 Lion Talies In 28-7 Win

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) —Penn State's unbeaten Nittany Lions cashed in on two fumble recoveries and a pass interception Saturday for three touchdowns to beat Rice 28-7 in an intersectional football battle.

Four different backs—Tom Urbank, Gary Klingensmith, Ed set up the Lion's third TD in the final period. Stuckrath plunged counted for the scoring as the over from the one.

Lions unleashed their best ground attack this season. Rice fumbles set up the first and third Penn State talies, but it was Don Caum's interception of a Walt McReynolds pass deep in Nittany Lion territory in the third quarter that turned the tide. With the score knotted 7-7, Caum snared the ball on the State 14 and raced back 25 yards to the 39.

Thirteen plays later, Klingensmith crashed over from the one for the lead State never relinquished. A fumble recovery by end Billy Bowes on the Rice three, Stuckrath and Don Kunit — ac-

Crabtree Scores 2 Touchdowns for Unbeaten Panthers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitt, stunned by Jim Blakeney's exciting 85-yard touchdown run on the opening kickoff, roared from behind on the classy quarterbacking of Fred Mazurek and Ken Lucas, yard pass from Lucas in the third, and a rugged defense to beat California 35-15 Saturday in an intersectional football game at Pitt back and Mazurek took turns engineering Pitt drives, dazzling the crowd with some fancy passing and ball handling, as the Panthers rolled up 446 yards total offense—and the first time since 1958 fense.

Meanwhile, Pitt's alert defense kept California and its passing whiz, Craig Morton, in check for most of the game. Morton hit for 206 yards, 38 passes for 206 yards, most of it coming in the final quarter. That's when California scored its other touchdown with the Morton firing a 14-yard pass to Jack Schraub, climaxing a 46-yard passing drive.

Squirrel, Woodcock Best Hunting Bets

SINGLE SHOT

In the past week, several hunters have inquired about the regulations concerning those little speed demons of the low, boggy country — the woodcock.

The woodcock is classed as a migratory bird, but it does not fall under the same classification as a duck or goose.

Foremost question that has come up is whether or not a duck stamp is needed to hunt woodcock. The answer is no, it is not necessary to have a duck stamp even though the tasty little morsels are actually migratory birds.

This looks like a good year for woodcock. The birds appear to be more plentiful than in the past few seasons and there will be sporty shooting for those with the quick reactions.

After two successful demonstration hunts using dogs to track and bag bear, the third and final session last weekend at Presque Isle was washed out.

Rain started falling Saturday shortly after over 100 hunters had gathered and the drizzle continued through Sunday taking care of any tracks the dogs could pick up.

The rain also kept the opening day pressure at a minimum for the ruffed grouse who were out in the popular northeast section of the state.

No doubt the leaders and top entrants in the Post-Crescent's Master Angler contest are anxiously awaiting the final results.

The plan now is to have a complete list of entries set up to run in next Sunday's paper. This will show the leaders and all entries for each division. Before this is done it is necessary to go through all the entries and make sure none are passed up. So, just hang on for another week and we'll have the results for you.

Here are some startling facts that will perk up your ears (and besides, they are true):

The river otter can stay under water for a quarter of a mile without coming up for air.

The gray fox is the only fox that is apt to climb trees.

A bird's two eyes often weigh more than its brain and better than that, the eyes of an ostrich often weigh more than twice the weight of its brain.

That should be enough for any one mind to try and mull over for one day. This week we hope to get out and do a little duck hunting, possibly snoop around for a squirrel or partridge and I hear the fish are really hitting on Poygan and Winnebago. Times like this there should be about 10 days in each week, providing of course only about five would be used for working days.

Gift Suggestion: Buy Your Fisherman Husband a Junk

So you want to take a slow boat to Redbanks and create a big splash on the Wolf River to boot?

Then buy a junk. No kidding. A firm in Seabrook, Texas, can obtain for you a genuine, made-to-order Hong Kong junk. All hand-built by Hong Kong craftsmen following a design passed down from father to son for centuries, so the firm says, these "custom junks" offer the best of both worlds.

Constructed of solid Burmese teak, the junks sell from approximately $15,000 and up.

Lots of loot for a Chinese scow, you ask? Well, consider this: The hulls are available in lengths from 30 to 65 feet sporting intricate hand-carvings of old Chinese dragons on the outside to the latest in water purification and air conditioning in the cabin, depending on the buyer's taste.

Think how the eyebrows would raise up at Fremont if you went walleye fishing in a genuine junk? The ornately carved junks are designed with two masts, carrying mainsail and jib up to the 35-foot length while the longer models boast three masts. The auxiliary engines are all diesel.

Standard equipment on the 40-foot model includes electric generator, plant, stove, refrigerator, hot water heater and stainless steel shower and sanitary system. This may be just the ticket for the walleye fisherman who has

Grouse Are Also High In Numbers

BY DAVE DUFFEY
Post-Crescent News Service

Wondering what to hunt? Have not had a chance to look things over and make up your mind?

For what it's worth maybe I can help you. The recommendations are based on summer observations and the first few days of the season in the hunting field. They don't apply to everywhere, but chances are they'll apply pretty generally for the readers of this newspaper who hunt "somewhere around home."

This year's best bet is squirrel. I can't remember seeing so many of them, particularly grey squirrel. But the fox squirrel are also up in numbers.

Woodcock Next

Ranking right up behind the squirrel is woodcock. This little bird isn't hunted in any great numbers and most are killed incidentally to ruffed grouse shooting. But there are good numbers of them this year. The only drawback is so few persons hunt them they wouldn't know where to look and the bird is a migrant and may be here today, gone tomorrow.

But an animal that's here in high number and which sticks around is the raccoon. If you're busy during the day, you can get in your hunting at night when the coon are moving. You'll need a good hound. If you don't have one, try and strike up a friendship with the owner of a coonhound. Chances are he'll be looking for someone to go along and hunting conditions won't be crowded.

Ruffed grouse are also a good bet in northeastern and central Wisconsin this year. And because they are more predictable than woodcock, and may be more widely distributed hereabouts, probably outrank the timberdoodles for a hunter who is game-in-the-bag conscious.

Mild Comeback

Rabbits have also staged at least a mild comeback this year, but it's too early for real good hunting. After the first snow hits the ground, however, beagle fanciers and their little dogs are going to have a better year than the ones in the recent past.

Ducks are around in goodly numbers, but water is scarce. Hunters are going to be crowded and ducks aren't going to hang around long.

Pheasants you might as well forget about unless you know where the stocked birds are on opening weekend. It won't influence anyone, since hunters probably spend more time working for this scarce bird than any other and refuse to give up on it, but for most hunters pheasant hunting will be a waste of time.

Hungarian partridge are also present in this region but are few in number, unknown to most hunters and an even poorer bet than pheasant.

If you enjoy what the English call "rough shooting," the collection of a mixed bag, this is possible in many parts of central and northeastern Wisconsin, although this year ducks won't be as easy to include in the variety of game a man may shoot in a spot of cover on a single day. The last two years the upland hunter could knock off a waterfowl or two because they were jumping out of wet places. But it's dry this year.

Just one tip. Don't just go hunting. Go grouse hunting, squirrel hunting, pheasant hunting etc. In other words concentrate on the primary species you want. Then be happy when you bump into an added bonus in the form of some other game. A sure way to come home disappointed is to hunt but hunt nothing in particular.

So when you concentrate, here's how I'd rank the best bets.

1. Squirrel
2. Raccoon
3. Ruffed Grouse
4. Woodcock
5. Ducks
6. Rabbit
7. Pheasant
8. Hungarians

CD Has Big Seed Supply

No Spruce, Pine Cones Will be Purchased Again

MADISON — The Conservation Department is literally going to seed according to latest inventory reports from state tree nurseries.

With enough tree seeds in storage to reforest about a million acres, the department today announced for the second year in a row that no spruce or pine cones will be purchased again this fall.

The inventory amounts to nearly one billion seeds. It contains enough white pine to last nine years, enough Norway pine, jack pine and Norway spruce for six years and white spruce for five years.

Only about 30,000 acres per year is reforested annually in Wisconsin while estimates of the total area remaining to be replanted go as high as one-million acres.

The high seed inventory was built up in anticipation of a long-term soil bank program and consequent heavy demand for trees to convert agricultural land to forestry. About 28,000 acres were converted in Wisconsin.

To supply the demand, the conservation department produced about 45-million trees in 1958 but since then the figure has dropped to about 30-million and is expected to stabilize there.

Legislation Affects Fur Farm License

New legislation has been recently passed and signed into law as Chapter 298, Laws of 1963, affecting the operation of licensed fur farms.

According to game manager Jerry Rieckhoff, this new law repeals a portion of the old law which reads approximately as follows:

"Any person operating a muskrat or mink farm under license granted by this Chapter (29) shall not trap any animals for pelting purposes during the closed season provided for by this chapter, except on a permit granted by and under supervision of the State Conservation Commission; and all skins of such animals so taken during the close season shall be tagged with a tag to be furnished by the Conservation Commission, etc."

In other words, you need no longer secure a trapping permit from your district game manager to trap your licensed fur farm during the closed season. Also, you do not have to buy pelt tags for tagging fur trapped on your licensed farm during the closed season.

Many other provisions of the old law remain as they were in the past. If you have any questions regarding the new law, contact your district game manager.

Servicemen and Student License Rule Explained

County conservation warden Albert L. VanderBloemen says that there still seems to be some confusion on the licenses necessary for armed forces personnel and nonresident students. Here is the proper information.

There is no longer a free license for personnel in the armed forces.

Residents of Wisconsin now in the armed forces are, of course, entitled to a resident hunting, fishing or trapping license.

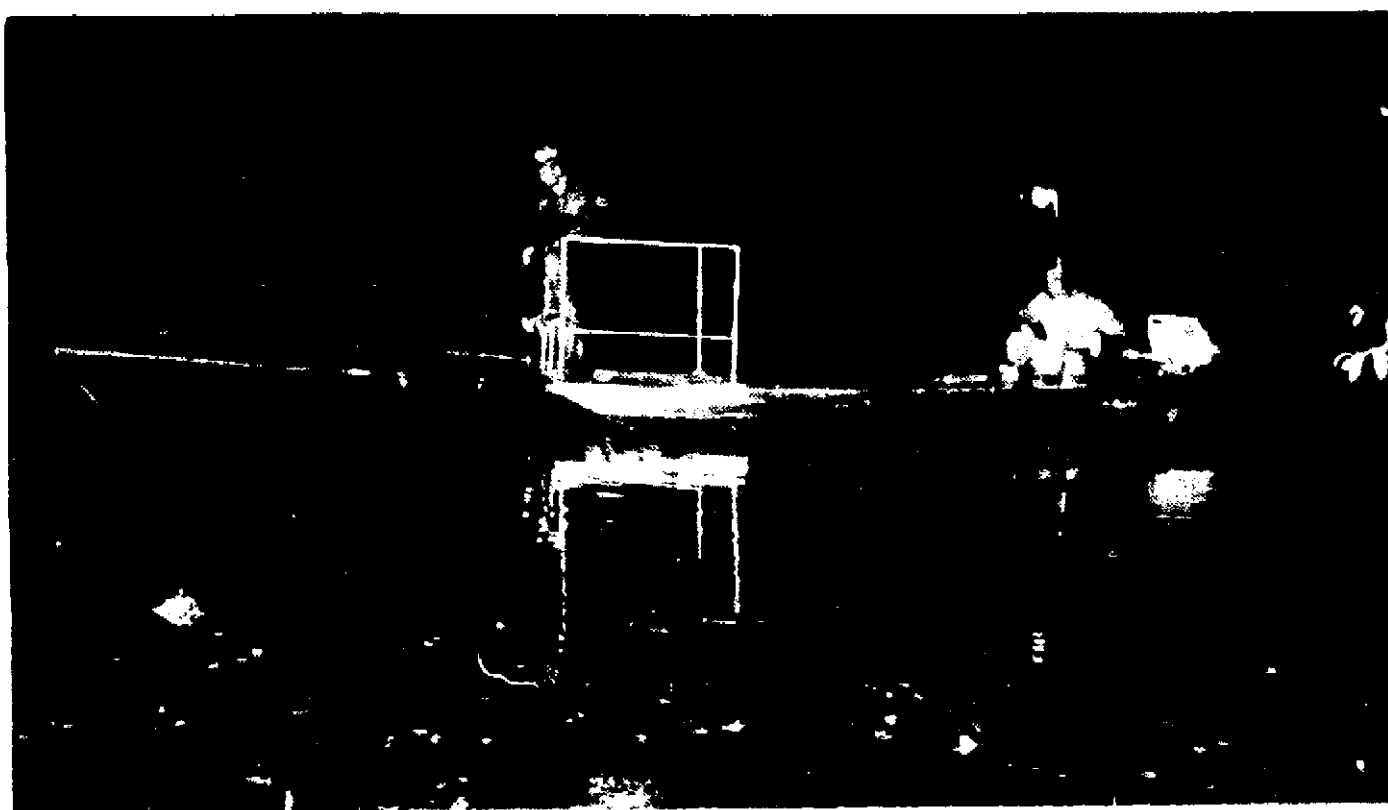

Nonresidents in active service with the armed forces and stationed in Wisconsin may buy hunting or fishing licenses at resident fees.

Registered, full time, undergraduate students in residence of a college or university, public or private, located in this state and offering a Bachelor's Degree may also buy a hunting or fishing license at resident fees.

Anyone applying for these licenses must exhibit proof that he meets the above qualifications.

Waupaca, Portage County Survey Shows Good Natural Reproduction

Boom Shocking Device Checks on Fish Population

BY DICK MCDANIEL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

WAUPACA — Results of surveys indicate most species of fish have natural reproduction in Waupaca and Portage county lakes, indicating fishing will remain good for many years to come unless there are some drastic changes.

Trout are probably the only exception to the natural reproduction rule, although their status seems assured by the tremendous production at the Wild Rose hatchery.

This big production of trout, combined with the harvest ratio from planted lakes, indicates the conservation department can start liberalizing or extending trout fishing seasons on most lakes.

Dan Folz, district fish manager, who said he has not asked for extended trout fishing on inland lakes, agrees there may be some merit to the proposal within confines of specific instances.

Small Harvest

He pointed out, for example, lakes with records of heavy plantings and small harvests could possibly offer additional trout fishing if it is noted the trout do not hold over to the next fishing season.

There is a possibility that late fall or early winter fishing may offer the more ardent anglers, who dare to fish in face of adverse weather conditions, a chance to improve the ratio between the number of trout planted and the low number harvested.

Limited season on species such as bass and northerns with a history of natural reproduction in county lakes concurs with good management practices.

A good example of a highly productive lake is Bass Lake, near Spencer Lake, south of Waupaca. This lake was treated in 1960 and restocked with large and smallmouth bass, perch and trout.

Bass lake has no inlet as it is a spring fed lake of about 19 acres with a maximum depth of about 35 feet. The outlet is gridded to prevent infiltration of undesirable fish into the lake.

Very Productive

A survey of the lake indicated the bass planted in 1962 have been very productive. Using a boom shocking device, many small bass were taken and measured indicating the lake is destined to be one of the top bass producers in the area.

Folz said there also were many perch found indicating there will be a good pan fish harvest in a few years.

Also found in the lake were many bluegills, which, according to Folz, must have been planted by some mis-guided fisherman who wanted to catch bluegills. Big bluegill populations could be harmful to future fishing in Bass Lake as they are known to overpopulate and cause stunting in their and other species.

Bass lake also is known to be a good trout lake as the harvest of rainbows last fall yielded fish

Best Hunting Coming

Don't Feel Bad If You Missed Opening Day

Post-Crescent News Service

SHAWANO — Had to work? Wanted to watch the Packers beat the Colts? Took the family for a drive? That means you missed getting out bird hunting on the opening weekend.

If you feel bad about missing the earliest opening on upland game in the state since World War II days, don't. On the basis on personal observation the third and fourth days of the season you and I didn't miss much.

I missed the bird season opener too. The cause was a trip to Missouri Valley, Ia. for the National Goose Calling Championship.

But I hit a bunch of brush south of here less than an hour after I got home the third day of the season. Maybe you have, but I haven't ever seen cover this heavy. Normally I don't hunt this area this early, preferring the country farther north. Maybe it's open a bit more up there, but it's going to take more frost and some wind and rain to open up the possible that anybody hurt the birds on opening weekend. In fact, it may so discourage early-bird hunters who's fever to get out-and-at-em wanes after the opening weekend, that they'll lay their muskets aside and miss out on a real killing later in the year.

Also, since the rules makers cover for good shooting in this area. Besides, it's hot. Both dogs and men play out early.

But there are birds. Woodcock were more plentiful than is usually the case in this cover. I put out seven woodcock and eight ruffed grouse in a couple of hours. Also thought I heard the croak of a sharp-tail when one of the dogs bared in out of sight and the bird was sounded rather than sighted. But I couldn't be sure.

Because hunting conditions are poor, it's likely that disgruntled hunters will complain about the early opening. It's true that a concurrent opening with ducks on Oct. 5 would make more sense from the standpoint of distributing hunting pressure.

But actually, it doesn't seem have compensated for the early

Humans May Encounter More Bear This Fall

Fruit and Berry Crops Are Down In Northern Area

MADISON — Chance encounters between bear and human beings are expected to be high in northern Wisconsin this fall because of the bear's wide-ranging search for food, prompted by failure of fruit and berry crops.

When such meetings occur, the Conservation Department advises that don't what comes naturally is the response most likely to assure survival of both species. Since the two customarily avoid one another with equal gusto, wide detours are about the only requirement for mutual security.

One of the state's finest big game trophies, wild bear may be legally shot by a licensed hunter only during an open season. The penalties for violation are severe — up to $100 fine and six months in jail.

Cause Damage

Conservation department law enforcement officers are authorized to control the occasional animal that causes damage and should be notified whenever it occurs. Since July 1, two dozen complaints have been received as compared to 18 for the same period in 1962. In 10 cases this year bear killed and ate farm animals while crops and beehives were destroyed in the remainder. Officials anticipate the rate of incidence will increase as fall progresses.

Wild bear are normally shy and elusive; however, when partially tame they can be a potential danger. Often the animal that causes damage has lost its fear of people by being treated as a semi-pet all summer at a garbage dump.

Come fall, when the feast runs out at the refuse heap, this same beast with the teddy-bear demeanor, that can lay a 500-pound steer low with a single swipe of its paw, prowls the back yards hoping the familiar people-scent will lead to a new food supply.

Wildlife Group To Provide Grants For Scholarships

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The National Wildlife Federation will provide several thousand dollars in grants to natural resources conservation students again this year, according to Federation president Ross L. Leffler.

Deans of graduate schools in colleges across the country are now receiving the Federation's official announcement that it plans to provide undergraduate scholarships of up to $500 and graduate fellowships of up to $1,000 to college students majoring in such subjects as wildlife management, forestry, fisheries management, and conservation education.

Applications may be submitted by students having completed one year of college and who are citizens or nationals of the United States, or will be by March 1, 1964. Awards will be made in March, 1964, for the academic year 1964-65.

start by extending the season to Dec. 15 in a large portion of the state (cut-off date's a month earlier in the north) they haven't hurt our hunting time. If the number of days late in the season had been reduced in order to have an earlier opening date, then a gripe would be legitimate.

So look on these early days as a time to get yourself and your dogs into shape. Take some short jaunts in the early morning and evening, but don't try to work through the whole day. Use the time to locate birds, even though you don't get shots at them. Then when the cool crisp days are on us and a man just can't get enough of the out-of-doors, you'll know where to go to get your have compensated for the early game.

Buddhist Suicide Brings New Strife

Officials of U. S. News Agencies Protest Brutal Treatment of Reporters, Cameramen by Police

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Gasoline flames seared the face of a young Buddhist monk at Saigon's central market Saturday in the sixth fiery suicide of the Buddhist campaign against President Ngo Dinh Diem. Hundreds watched in horror.

Saigon was thrown into new and potentially explosive turmoil in the political-religious crisis that had been quiescent since the government cracked down militarily in late August on Buddhist and student foes of Diem, a Roman Catholic.

The monk appeared to be in his early 20s. Seated in the street, he doused his brown robes with gaso-

Thich Quang Huong

A leaflet tossed into the yard of Vietnamese intelligence headquarters identified him as Thich Quang Huong.

Plainclothes police, aware of the suicide's potential impact abroad, roughed up and injured three American newsmen who resisted efforts to seize their cameras.

Troops and uniformed police, using tactics applied sporadically since the outbreak of the crisis in bloody rioting at Hue last May, sealed off the heart of the city with tanks, armored cars and wire barricades.

U.S. ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, who is known to feel that the crisis jeopardizes the U.S. backed war against Communist guerrillas, called an immediate conference of U.S. Embassy staff members. A spokesman said Lodge was shocked by the suicide and deeply concerned about its political implications.

Lodge Confers

Lodge talked with the injured newsmen — Grant Wolfkill and John Sharkey of the National Broadcasting Co. and David Haberstam of the New York Times — and then delivered a formal protest to the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry against the police attack. Sharkey had a head wound that required six stitches to close. He was under observation at Saigon's American Hospital. The other two were less severely injured. Wolfkill, who was clobbered in the back and kicked in the groin, said one plainclothesman had pulled a gun on the newsmen when they refused to surrender their cameras.

In New York, William R. McAndrew, executive vice president in charge of NBC news, said in a statement:

"This was the climax of several months of harassment of American newsmen, including threats, absurd censorship — now physical beatings. We are now asking the State Department not to be content with lodging a simple protest but to demand that those responsible for this senseless brutality be brought to trial—as would happen in any civilized country."

Dangerous Situation

A spokesman for the Times said "We are sorry that our correspondent was injured and glad that he wasn't hurt more seriously. We recognize that he is working in a dangerous situation there."

The suicide came just four days after departure from Saigon of a military mission that President Kennedy sent to South Viet Nam to survey progress of the U.S.-backed war against Communist guerrillas.

The mission chiefs—Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — told Kennedy Wednesday that actions by Diem's administration against his Buddhist opponents "have not yet significantly affected the military effort."

They added that there could be an adverse effect in the future. They expressed belief the need for major American involvement in the war, to which about 15,000 U.S. servicemen are now committed, will be ended by December 1965.

Lodge Begins U. S. Shakeup In Viet Nam

Intelligence Head, Several Officials Will Be Recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. intelligence chief in South Viet Nam, John H. Richardson, and some other senior American officials at Saigon probably will be recalled in a shakeup of personnel under Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

Reporting this Saturday informed sources said Richardson is being brought back to Washington "for consultation" but Lodge has asked for a permanent replacement.

The others who may be replaced in the diplomatic-military trouble spot were not named. It was said that Lodge, who took over as ambassador in late August, feels that changes are needed for a more effective performance in the prevailing circumstances.

Major Difficulty

One major difficulty has been dealing with the authoritarian regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem. At one point Washington hoped Diem would get rid of his influential brother, Ngo Dinh Nhu, who is regarded as a powerful advocate of tough tactics against the regime's Buddhist opponents.

With Washington trying but failing to get Nhu out of the palace or to change his policies, it was felt here that U.S. officials in Saigon who had worked closely with Nhu are now in a position of decreased influence.

Also, there have been reports of conflict among U.S. Central Intelligence Agency men in South Viet Nam over whether there should be changes in the Saigon government.

Close to Nhu

Richardson's job is said to have required him to work closely with Nhu, head of the South Vietnamese special forces and secret police.

Richardson is not publicly listed as CIA chief in Saigon. Intelligence personnel abroad normally operate under some other designation.

New Corporation Buys Milwaukee Shoe Firm

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A newly-formed corporation was reported Saturday to have purchased the Simplex Shoe Manufacturing Co. of Milwaukee with the intention of opening a new plant at Watertown, Wis.

Gilbert A. Reinartz, who said he had been named the firm's new president, announced the purchase. He declined to name the Waterloo principals.

Kennedy Plans News Conference Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy will hold a news conference at 3 p.m. next Wednesday, White House press secretary Pierre Salinger announced Saturday.

U.N. Members Want Thant To Help Viet Nam Buddhists

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Sixteen countries were reported planning Saturday to propose that the U.N. General Assembly ask Secretary-General U Thant to talk to the government of South Viet Nam about better treatment for the Buddhists of that country.

Ceylon's chief delegate, Sir Senarat Gunewardene, said he would introduce a resolution to that effect Monday on behalf of the 16 African, Asian and Latin-American delegations that have obtained a debate on alleged "violation of human rights in South Viet Nam."

He predicted that the 111-nation assembly eventually would adopt the resolution with no contrary votes and only a few abstentions.

4 Days for Debate

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons have been set aside for the debate. Ceylon, El Salvador, Ireland and the Soviet Union are expected to speak Monday.

Communist Judge and Jury

China Wants Differences With Soviets Settled by World Court

TOKYO (AP) — The Chinese Communists gave their blessing Saturday to a proposal for bringing the Soviet Union and Red China before a court of world Communists to settle their ideological differences once and for all.

Indonesian Communist leader D. N. Aidit, had called for world Communists to sit as a jury and decide who is right in the Peking-Moscow feud which has split the Communist world movement. Up to now, he said, the mud slinging has only hurt the movement toward world domination.

Similar but less forceful appeals

Which Is the Villain

As Aidit sees it, the time has come to determine which is the villain and which is the hero. Nothing has been solved, he said, by meetings between the two Communist powers.

The appeals that won favor in Moscow came from the Communist parties of Portugal and Paraguay, but they called for a world meeting to denounce the Red Chinese.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev is said to have originally ruled out a world meeting on the ground it would widen the split in the world movement. However, publication by Moscow, of the appeals of the Portuguese and Paraguayan Communists indicated he may have changed his mind.

Sorensen said the President is determined that this Congress, already historic for approving the test ban treaty and certain to be remembered for a tax cut, "will also be noted for achieving more progress in the fulfillment of human rights and human opportunity than the last 40 congresses combined."

Sorensen, ranked with the President's top advisers and a key strategist in his election, said a good president must have a creative mind, a compassionate heart and a courageous spirit. The country now has such a president, he said.

The President knew "there were no votes to be won by increasing foreign aid or expanding tax trade or raising postal rates or granting tax credits for investment, but those measures had to be passed," he said.

Sorensen, at an earlier press conference, discounted the possibility that passage of the Kennedy Civil Rights Bill would increase the chance of victory for Sen. Barry Goldwater as the Republican candidate in the presidential election.

Business and Industry Pledges Support for New Honduran Ruler

Military Regime Declares Intent to Crush Any Pro-Communist Move

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)—The two-day-old military regime of Col. Oswaldo Lopez Arellano the exiling of Villeda Morales to neighboring Costa Rica.

In words similar to those of the military leaders in the Dominican Republic, the Honduran regime charged Villeda Morales ignored Communist infiltration and did little to stem what it called growing chaos in the administration of the country.

The proclamation also denounced the civil guard which was established under Villeda Morales, who became President Dec. 21, 1957.

It charged the guard was a "political army" whose job was to guarantee the election of Modesto Rodas Alvarado in the Oct. 13 presidential election, now canceled. Rodas Alvarado, who appeared a certain winner, has opposed the Honduran army's almost autonomous status, subject to little civilian control.

Guard Disbanded

The proclamation said the guard would be disbanded, thus ending what it termed the possibility of civil war in Honduras.

In Costa Rica, Villeda Morales claimed the army was used by what he called "reactionary elements" to end civilian rule in Honduras. He did not further identify them.

Villeda Morales was said to have asked President Kennedy to send troops to Honduras to ward off a military takeover but was turned down. Costa Rican President Francisco J. Orlich criticized the U.S. government for failing to answer Villeda Morales' call.

The Honduran seizure was the sixth military takeover in the last 18 months in Latin America—beginning with the ouster of President Arturo Frondizi of Argentina March 28, 1962.

Lopez Arellano, who declared himself provisional president Friday, continued to distribute proclamations throughout the country.

All summer long, across the wide expanse of America people hitch their wagons to a car and depart for vacations. The methods vary somewhat from the first Americans who traveled with their homes, when those houses were covered wagons and there were no roads to make the going easy.

Those who make the journey in the 1960's do with all the conveniences. Their frozen foods stay cold even in the desert and their sleeping quarters are warm as the Arizona Highway in the far north.

Across the country the spider web of highways is dotted with the out traveling homes, catching the glint of sun as they climb the Rockies, showing lights and warmth in the nighttime loneliness of the Black Hills, or weaving merrily through the woods of northern Wisconsin.

Usually the sight of one of these traveling homes makes one think of distant journeys, wide vistas of panoramic beauty and a certain restlessness, as our travel happy citizens take a look at their land. With the beginning of cold weather, however, the homes and their owners take to 'dry dock', finding a place to nest during the winter months.

In many trailer courts surrounding the Fox Cities, the homes on wheels do very little traveling. Some are as earthbound as any basemented home, with concrete foundations built around their base. Others move only from town to town, as the head of the family changes his job location. Mobile homes have become a way of life.

All kinds of people live in trailer courts. There is a widow who needs very little room yet wants independent accommodations. The merchant seaman, home only a few months during the year, leaves his wife to the comforts of trailer life.

Duane and Carol Wagner, a couple who has chosen to live in a trailer outside of Appleton, bought their home just before they were married in June, 1960, and believe they made a wise and thrifty choice for the early years of their marriage. Mr. Wagner, employed by the Kirby Co., and his wife, a secretary at Appleton Machine Co., feel that the easy upkeep is perfect when both husband and wife are employed.

"Besides, the only furniture we had to buy was a TV set," Mr. Wagner comments. "I'm sure Carol will agree that 99 percent of the women want new furniture when they get new homes. If we ever do decide to buy one, our trailer will serve as a down payment on the furniture."

Convinced of the rightness of their decision, the attractive couple says the original plan was to live in a trailer only for a few years. Now, they may just stay on. It's so cozy and inexpensive that they plan to put off buying a home. "Our rent here wouldn't even pay the taxes on a house," they agree.

The couple's home, from the inside, has the look of any comfortable apartment, neat and tasteful. Duane has his own special corner and chair, where he reads and watches television. A ship's clock, the couple's wedding picture, a record player and sofa bed add to the pleasing aspect of the carpeted living room. The bedrooms have wardrobe closers, and, though one of them is now a store room, it would also be adequate for a child's room. The kitchen has an automatic washer, a 22 inch oven and a large refrigerator. "We have everything we need," Mrs. Wagner says with satisfaction.

— then qualifies it by adding that a little more

Mrs. Henry Lau has all the conveniences anyone could want in a kitchen. She is shown above preparing dinner after finishing her day at the Appleton State Bank. For those who travel in their mobile homes, meal preparation is only a step away from a sight-seers front seat vantage point. Most mobile homes use gas for cooking fuel. The Laus are so sold on their way of life they are now in their second trailer home.

After the Richard Galien's return to Manitowoc for the winter, Dick has the task of making the trailer ready to withstand the onslaught of ice and snow. Keeping his family comfortable during the cold months is not as easy as it would be in a house, he feels, but the advantages of keeping close to his work outweigh whatever other problems are involved. At right, he is shown attaching the boards that will keep wind and snow from under his home. At left, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lau put on storm windows, an easy inside operation probably envied by many a ladder-climbing householder.

Duane Wagner has his own special corner for relaxation — reading or watching television. The couple has lived in a trailer home since their marriage in June, 1960. During the cold winter months the scene above is a common one, with Carol Wagner bringing in a late evening cup of coffee. At right, Dick and Pat Galien spend the early hours after supper playing with Richard Jr. The couple moves often during the summer according to the demands of Dick's job with a construction company.

Emergency Society Marks Change

Old Thrift Shop Updated with First Of Semi-Annual 'Nearly New' Sales

NEENAH — "Off with the old, on with the new" has been the chant of Neenah-Menasha Emergency Society Members, as they prepared to replace their Thrift Shop with the new Emergency Exchange. The same shop, on West Wisconsin Avenue, from which the society has operated its project since 1930, will now be open by appointment with a society member. Semi-annual exchange sales will be held for a week in a member's home.

Thirty-three years of handling rummage sales is quite a record. The women who were in on the project from the start have seen considerable changes in the kind and style of clothing that has passed from one person to another during this time. Styles have varied from the flounces of the thirties to the plain dress of the war years to the long skirts of the post-war era to the chemise and shift and today's sporty styles. As much as anyone, these women have probably noted the circle of fashion, with certain styles returning to popularity again and again.

Purpose Remains Constant
One thing that has not changed is the purpose of the project—meeting the needs of the community. The Thrift Shop method of doing this was proposed by Mrs. Kimberly Stuart. Members of the original committee investigating the prospect were Mrs. Hugh Strange, chairman, Mrs. Grace Sensenbrenner, vice chairman, Mrs. R. E. Thickens, Mrs. Kenneth Lawson, Mrs. D. K. Brown, Mrs. Paul Strange and Mrs. Stuart. They formed the first working group having charge of the Shop, voted into existence in October, 1930. Mrs. Stuart, as chairman of the finance committee, had charge of renting a room in what was then the Sherry Building.

Members were asked by Mrs. Stuart to donate certain articles in great demand — children's clothing and shoes, men's clothing, stockings, underwear, playing cards, pictures and records. Society members were given rules for opening and closing the shop and for keeping it neat.

Decided to Continue
Off to a good start, the project was continued for another year, with a separate chairman. In September, 1931, Mrs. Strange was named head of the effort, holding the job off and on for the next 12 years. She and many others who have worked in the Shop for the last 33 years have given untold and uncounted hours of time and effort to keep it operating successfully.

In its early years — during the depression, the Thrift Shop served the community with a dual purpose. It provided the needy with the opportunity to buy basic items at low costs — they congregated on the steps leading upstairs to the shop before the doors opened — and gave the Society funds to continue other community projects.

A New Way
Because of their patronage and acceptance, the Society has decided to continue these sales twice a year. The expanded project will replace the old Thrift Shop and will be called the Emergency Exchange. Women's and children's clothing, in excellent condition, will be sold.

Members of the Emergency Exchange committee are Mmes. Charles Davis, chairman, James Asmuth and Robert Melson, co-chairman; Robert Aik, Don Buchla, John W. Grimes, James Keating, John R. Kimberly Jr., John Manley, Charles Morton, Lee Heroman, H. T. Collier, Hugh Moore, Ellen Pratt, William Strange, E. William Aylward, John Henkel, Urban Krippene and David Ryan. They have been involved in organizing the Exchange, redecorating the old shop, collecting clothes and pricing them. The first fall sale will be in November.

Through its past Thrift Shop, the new Exchange and many other projects, the Emergency Society carries out its aim of aiding in the promotion and support of charitable projects in the community. Financial support is given the Winnebago Guidance Center, Neenah-Menasha Association for Retarded Children, Special Fund of Neenah-Menasha Family Service, Christmas Giving Committee of the Community Council, Girl Scout, Boy Scouts, YWCA and needy children, and Work Adjustment Services, Inc.

A Dress From the 1930 era, when the old Thrift Shop came into being is modeled by Mrs. William Strange, above left. At right, Mrs. Robert Melson is wearing a dress of more recent vintage. Through the years, the purpose of serving the needs of the community has remained constant for the society. At left, Mrs. Hugh Moore and Mrs. John Manley are shown helping load a Goodwill Industries truck during the summer dismantling project. Below, Emergency Society members who gave freely of their time and energy through the years of the Thrift Shop, are Mrs. R. E. Thickens, Menasha, Mrs. W. K. Prevention Means Not to Cause Fires

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

The lingo of Madison Avenue has not yet tarnished the minds of six-year-olds. They're not a bit concerned about hard or soft sell, or whether an idea is presented with a gimmick. They still have the grace to be direct, with no side-stepping or evasion.

Faced with the prospect of a slogan contest—the one concerning Fire Prevention sponsored by the Downtown Kiwanis Club — first graders at Foster School had a variety of ideas about what a slogan is.

"The home of the Green Bay Packers," asserted one sturdy future fullback, his blond hair rising in a stiff cowlick.

"It's advertising," whispered a shy young lady, wise to the ways of the world.

A Thrilling Reward

"An instrument," "A statue," "A tramp," "A piece of machinery," and "Don't be a litterbug" were offered as slogan definitions by others.

When the youngsters learned that a ride on a big fire truck would be the reward for the best school slogans for Fire Prevention Week, a concerted gasp of joy broke the afternoon quiet.

As busy fingers dealt with paper and crayons, some of the students of Mrs. Gladys Friedel told what they thought about slogans, prevention, causes of fire and their own safety efforts.

"Don't play with matches," Jay Gendron said seriously, "'cause if you light a fire you might get killed. Smoking's bad. If you breathe too much it gets in your lungs and you could die. I'm gonna draw a litter bug, 'cause if you litter a match you'll start a fire."

Tina Langdok, a smiling little blond girl, said that "safety is to be safe around your house." Telling about fire drill procedure, she said that "we close all the windows, line up and walk outside without talking."

Blows Them Out!

"Fire Prevention is not to cause a fire," Bobby Totzke declared nodding his head vigorously. "I don't think Smoke's for real, but he lives in a forest probably around here. If we had a fire, it might be in the attic 'cause there's lots of stuff there. I never play with matches. I just blow them out."

Jean Varecka warned, "Don't smoke in bed if you're sleeping. And don't have oil in the house and matches near 'cause if the matches fell in the oil it could start a fire and don't have leaves in the road and if you see a fire call a policeman."

Bill Casper had his own personal experience to relate. "Once when I was little Tommy told me to sneak some matches and then he lighted them and told my mother I lighted them and I didn't and the field started on fire and my mother hit it out with a broom and I learned I won't do it any more." To Bill, Safety means "Don't light any matches."

Sketched Out Ideas

In their posters the youngsters depicted different ways they considered important in preventing fires. Proper wiring, carelessness with matches, setting up a Christmas tree good and strong so it won't start fires, staying away from burning rubbish, keeping children away from the stove, storing combustibles out of reach, having a family fire rope in case of emergency, extra caution with candles, not permitting old rags or papers accumulate and not leaving lights burn when away from the house were all shown as important.

And they said people should do these things all year. Not just during one week.

Bill Casper sat straight and tall as he told how Smokey the Bear's duties were to put out fires in the woods. Below, Jean Varecka said that prevention means don't have papers all together in the attic. She thinks children are careful enough. Below, left, Bobby Totzke believes that safety means not getting hurt. (Post-Crescent Photos by Ralph Acker)

"Fires Could Start in the Living Room, 'cause it's got a carpet," Jay Gendron says thoughtfully. He and his classmates in Primary I at Foster School spent some time this week thinking about fire safety and participating in the Fire Prevention Week program. Below, Tina Langdok says that safety is to be safe around your house. The program is designed to make children conscious of the dangers of fire and help them avoid accidents through an awareness of the causes.

Jane Rosenberg showed her poster to the class members, explaining the precautions that should be taken with Christmas trees. The children stressed wiring, matches, lightning, bombs, oil drums, ashcans, stoves and old papers and rags as dangerous fire hazards in their homes.

Early Morning Church Bells Annoy and Alarm Sleepers

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I moved my family into this nice apartment two years ago. The first morning we were awakened at 6 a.m. by the loudest church bells I've ever heard. After a few minutes they stopped. At 6:30 they started again — and once more at 7. This routine has been going on every morning since we've lived here and it's driving us stark, raving mad.

My husband went by the church to check and sure enough, he discovered four huge amplifiers — one under each of the bells.

We wrote to the church twice and asked if they would please stop waking up thousands of people at such an early hour. Our letters have been ignored as if we were just some nutty cranks.

Several of our neighbors are as disgusted as we are, but because it's a church they are afraid to complain. If a dance hall made that much noise it would be shut down in a week. What can we do about it? — X. Hausted

Dear X.: Church bells have been ringing for thousands of years and I have a strong suspicion they are going to continue to ring for a long time to come.

Some people like the chimes. For those who don't, I have five words of advice: Don't live near a church.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter who is 19 works in a large department store. Every evening she gets a ride home with the housewares buyer. He is married and has two children in college. A few days ago I thought I saw her kiss this man before she got out of his car. I just couldn't believe my eyes so I watched the next night. She did the same thing three nights in a row, and those kisses were more than just pecks on the cheek.

This evening when she came into the house with lipstick smeared, I asked her about it. She said brazenly, "Of course I kiss him. It's cheaper and easier than taking that god-darned bus and getting trampled to death by peasants."

We talked for half an hour and she insisted that I am old-fashioned and that there is nothing wrong with what she is doing. Her argument is that the kiss is not romantic but a trifle friendlier than a handshake. May I have your views? — Nervous Mother

Dear Nervous: Your daughter should stop kidding herself. That bus may be a lot cheaper in the long run and I suggest she start taking it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our godchild was 13 years old in July. We sent Georgette a lovely birthday gift, as we have every year since she was born. Every Christmas we send her a gift, also.

Georgette has yet to drop a line or pick up the phone and say thank you. When we see her at our house or hers, her mother usually jabs her in the ribs and Georgette blurts out, "Oh, thanks for the present."

My husband says the child is too young to have polished manners. I say he's all wet. At what age do you think children should be expected to say thank you for a gift? — Emily

Dear Emily: Any child who can print or write should be able to drop a line of acknowledgement for a gift. Any child who can speak should be told to say "Thank you."

Georgette's mother is nudging her in the ribs about seven years too late. If you want to do this girl a real favor sit down with her and explain the importance of letting people know you appreciate their thoughtfulness.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting — And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Winter Storage

Laundering summer clothes before fall storage is especially important. The stains, soil, and perspiration that are so much a part of summer activities may become "set" in the fabric and the garment will not be wearable when you're ready to don the light-weight attire again.

Stuffed Eggs

Extra-good stuffed eggs are made by mashing the egg yolks with butter or mayonnaise, salt, dill.

The Red Feather Story

Adoptions Part of Apostolate Services

A couple who wanted children and an unmarried mother, trying to do what was best for her baby, found an answer to their problems — through the Appleton Apostolate, one of the 10 Red Feather Agencies.

Florence and Ed, married seven years, longed for a child and were desolate when doctors informed them they would never have any. They told their feelings to their parish priest, who sent them to the Apostolate.

The pretty young woman and her sympathetic husband were considered potential adoptive parents by the agency, who conducted long interviews with the couple. In any situation of this kind, facts are not always cut and dried. A woman who finds herself unable to bear a child is torn by many emotions. She feels guilt, as if somehow she is to blame, or is being punished. She feels cut off from one of the most fulfilling experiences of a woman. And she is often bitter about the deprivation. Ed, a successful engineer, was unable to understand why he and Florence should not have children, as other couples did.

Conflicts Worked Out

As all conflicts were brought into the open and discussed, it became evident that Florence and Ed had the capacity to make superior parents. While this decision was coming, Joan had become the mother of a daughter, Susan. Even though she loved the baby's father, he had chosen not to marry her. Joan's decision involved doing what was best for the baby, and she concluded that letting her grow up loving

Knits Run Gamut Of Style Variety

It's a case of: Anything fashion can do, knits can do, if not better, at least first, as knit-wear gets a fall boost from fashion's two directions — sportive and sultry.

Raglan sleeves, sportive shifts, layered separates — these are all in the knitwear tradition. As for the sultry and sophisticated side of fashion, knits have always had the wherewithal to flatter and follow a figure.

Zooming popularity of knits is attested to by the many knitwear divisions recently inaugurated, as makers of dresses turn their special attention to this important area of fashion.

For all knits make new fashion moves in the direction of texture-in-depth providing a new look in knitwear.

Heater Slowdown?

What causes a water heater to slow down? Maybe it is just too old to keep up with the changing needs of a family. New water-consuming automatic appliances and an additional bathroom or sink increase hot water needs in the home. Your local appliance dealer can help you determine if your present water heater has enough capacity to do the job.

Although Sam C. Taylor, president of the K. K. Prettier Parties Result of Waupaca Men's Imagination

Trailers Prepared For Cold Weather

storage room would be welcome. The Wagners have changed trailer courts once. "All we had to do to move was secure the dishes, tape the closet doors shut, hook on and go."

Unless the stay in a given place is to be only a matter of a few days, it is almost automatic to put a trailer on blocks. It is a simple matter to remove them and make the trailer truly mobile.

The Wagners have spent three winters in their home. "There's really nothing to it," they comment, "once the initial preparation is made. It is essential to have the heater checked and cleaned before cold weather begins. Mr. Wagner says, adding that every thoughtful home owner does the same thing. The storms go on from the inside. Outside of that, the only essential is putting heat tape around the water pipes to prevent freezing. This tape is wired in a manner similar to an electric blanket, with a thermostat, and is standard equipment for all mobile homes parked in this north country."

In contrast to the Wagners, ert Stange, decided bridge players needed something extra to decorate their tables when guests were coming. They started with about 20 designs and now have over 100.

Two artists submit suggestions for new designs and the board of directors, Taylor, Stange, treasurer, Richard DeTerville, vice president, and Grant Sorensen, secretary, select the ones they figure have the best possibilities.

Selecting designs is a seemingly endless job as each can be introduced for a special occasion.

For example, there are all occasion cards, special season cards, birthdays, showers, holidays and many other dates and events on the calendar which some time or another may be exemplified on a bridge tally.

They have shamrock cards for St. Patrick's day, fall scenes and specialties for Thanksgiving and Halloween and a number of lines for the Christmas season.

Gives a Boost

Taylor said the introduction of new designs helps increase sales. Salesmen also become more enthusiastic.

The Kappa Line cards, originating in Waupaca, are printed by professional houses and packaged and shipped out of Waupaca. When a line is introduced, it calls for an order of about 30,000 tallies.

All of the tallies have matching place cards and score books. This is the incentive for the buyer to decorate her tables in good taste. It is the little something extra.

Packaging the cards is also a unique pastime for the firms' only two employees, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Stange, who, along with their officer husbands, spend some of their "television" time packaging the cards.

Bridge, as the players know, requires different cards for different tables.

Ship From Coal Bin

The furnace room and old coal bin at the Taylor-Stange Furniture store is the shipping point for the firm's business. Each of the designs is packed in separate boxes.

As the business progressed, the firm started taking on other lines and one of the popular items is a series of party game books for teen parties, bridal and baby showers and mixed adult parties.

Taylor and Stange report they are considering the possibility of adding matching napkins to their lines and also adding note paper and invitations.

However, they are confining their activities to the planning stage as they hope to stay with it once the line is introduced.

"It was not an overnight climb in the bridge tally business and it takes time to develop new lines," they report.

Both men are active in civic activities at Waupaca in the association of commerce, community chest and Boy Scouting.

to extend a welcoming hand and an offer of whatever help might be needed.

In some courts there are families with as many as six children. Other courts make limitations.

Almost every court is like a small community, where everyone is welcome, where those who seek privacy may have it but no one ever has to be lonely.

And all over the area, as storms are put up and water pipes are insulated with heat tape, there is a kind of camaraderie in preparations for winter.

Decided to Enlarge

When the curling cards met with some success, Taylor and his furniture store partner, Robert Stange, decided to enlarge their business.

Henry Lau lived in a trailer home for two years in Iowa before coming to Appleton, where he is a refrigeration repair man for Valley Refrigeration. He liked the country and job opportunities better here, so he went back to Iowa, married, and brought his bride to Wisconsin. Original plans were to live in the trailer for a while, then buy a house. Judy Lau's original misgivings had vanished by the time they were ready, and she preferred that they buy another trailer.

Employed as a teller at the Appleton State Bank, Mrs. Lau has convenience at her fingertips in her "mobile" home that has never gone anywhere. The couple added a TV, freezer, and a sewing machine to the trailer's original furnishings.

Adopting trailer life when a bachelor who found it difficult to come across a decent place for a single person to live, Henry Lau takes great pride in his home. And he believes that trailer people are friendlier than those in most neighborhoods. There is perhaps less status seeking and more of people just being themselves, he says.

Looking to the future, Mr. Lau says that the time may come that, with children, they would decide to buy a house. But, projecting even further, he believes that when the family had grown, he and his wife might very well find themselves back in a trailer again.

Hold Open House

The friendliness of trailer life is a point of pride. On the day a new home arrives in many courts, a sort of Open House is held, with everyone coming by

A Cup of Flour . . .

Dear Heloise:
I always sift flour on a paper pot every night for use the next morning!

I measure the water, put in the coffee, and hook the electric cord. Then I can fold it and pour into the pot. In the morning when the sifted flour into my measure. I get up. . . all I have to do is plug the cord into the wall socket, cleaning the drainboard, etc.

Cupcake Caper

Dear Heloise:
Here is a time-saving and mess-saving idea that I discovered one day when I was in a hurry.

Try putting your cupcake batter in a pitcher or something with a spout. Then — it's quick and easy to fill cupcake papers! This eliminates the dripping on the pan-dripping and the cabinet, and it's much faster.

Mrs. M.J.H.

In the Bag

Dear Heloise:
I made some small bags with a little loop to fit around the neck of my coat hangers.

Now, as I iron and hang up the children's school clothes, I place their underclothes, socks, ribbons or berets in each bag. When the child picks a certain dress, everything to go with the outfit is in the little bag.

For Busy Cooks

Dear Heloise:
It seems as though I never have a large enough supply of dish towels handy, so when I know I am going to be in the kitchen for a whole day cooking, baking, etc., I pin a washcloth to the belt of my dress. Now I always have something to wipe my hands on.

Book Binders

Dear Heloise:
Use freezer tape to bind children's story books when they become worn.

You can buy the tape in different colors and it takes just a minute to stick it on. I even bind new books when I buy them and find that they last much longer.

Chair Repair

Dear Heloise:
Here's a very good hint for those who have wood screws that keep coming out of furniture.

Try putting a piece of steel wool in the hole itself, and then thread the screw back in! You'll be surprised at the result.

Mrs. S. Anderson

Nursery Tissue

Dear Heloise:
A pastel-colored roll of toilet tissue is very handy in the nursery. This can be used for most jobs which require a facial tissue and is far less expensive. Besides it comes in smaller pieces and one does not need a whole tissue at times such as when baby dribbles.

Dorothy Zabel

Icebox Water

Dear Heloise:
The water which is melted from refrigerator coils is indeed free of chlorine and can be used for watering household plants.

The reason is that the ice has condensed from the air in the refrigerator the same way that rain and snow condense from the atmosphere. However, it is also free from the trace mineral that are found in ordinary tap water.

Dear Heloise:
We are trying to teach our three-and-a-half-year old daughter to put the right shoe on the right foot, which seems to be her greatest difficulty.

I bought her a pair of bedroom

This idea works like a charm and now I have learned to put a small piece of tape inside her right shoe only. She knows anything that is "marked" goes on her right foot. No more wrong shoes or slippers for us!

I have used fresh, frozen, and powdered orange juice or just whatever is handy, and it is as good or better than a dressing that took all day to make.

Rural Medic Takes Over Argentine Leadership Reins

Arturo Umberto Illia Pledges Government for Middle Class

Buenos Aires (AP)—Arturo Umberto Illia plans to be the first Argentine president to take the oath of office in neither the gold braid of a military officer nor the traditional white tie and tails.

The 63-year-old doctor from the hill country seeks to epitomize the common man in his dress, in his talk and in his way of doing business. Next Saturday, he will put aside his full-time duties as a physician to start directing South America's second largest country—sick for 19 months with political and economic pains. He will wear a business suit to the inauguration and make his first speech as Argentina's 29th president.

What he will say he probably has said before. But businessmen, laborers and farmers will be listening for a more concrete outline of what he proposes for his six-year term.

Average Citizen

Also listening will be the ever-present "unregistered" political force, the military leaders. They will hear a keynote of "faith and optimism," for Illia says he needs them in guiding the future. But the reaction may still be one of pessimism.

Illia will be speaking the language of an average middle-class citizen. His background is not unusual: one of 14 children whose father was an Italian immigrant and his mother an Argentine.

He emphasizes that Argentina will maintain a Western-oriented but independent foreign policy.

President Illia

He pledges to promote business on an "Argentina first" basis, making the state's view predominant in dealings with foreign-based enterprises, specifically in the fields of oil production and financial negotiations.

Stability Pledge

For the men in the street Illia promises political and economic stability coupled to a firm attack on the problems he considers most important. Unemployment is estimated at 10 per cent. In housing, 1.8 million family units are needed. The cost of living is rising and danger of uncontrolled inflation. The educational system is inadequate—three of every 10 are limited to one year of formal schooling.

To master these problems Illia will lean primarily on his own political machinery, the People's Radical Civic Union. It comes to power for the first time in 33 years and the party may prove difficult to hold back from political spoils, even by Illia's big, well-scrubbed hands.

His informal personal approach and his spiel in the countryside ("I'm for the working man") have lined up the powerful organized labor movement behind him. This in effect gives him more support than shown by the July 7 election where only one out of four Argentines voted for him.

Business Bets

Many businessmen are placing their bets on the chances that Illia may depart from his reform-minded party platform, once he sees the problems of politics and the need for association between business and government.

When he goes to take the oath he will not ride with President Jose Maria Guido, whom he succeeds directly, or the past elected president, Dr. Arturo Frondizi, who was ousted by the military March 29, 1962.

To show that no separation has been made between the civilian and military leaders, the new president will ride with a military escort. Illia will be in an open car with the commanders in chief of the army and air force at his elbows.

Portuguese Bolster Stand About Angola

White Population Determined to Combat Ouster

LUANDA, Angola (AP)—The flag-showing visit here of the Portuguese president, Adm. Americo Thomaz, has stiffened the resolve of Angola's 370,000 white settlers to stand fast against African nationalism.

There is virtually no talk of negotiating a settlement with the rebels, who 2½ years ago launched a savage revolt against Portuguese colonialism.

The Portuguese government of Premier Antonio Salazar regards Angola as an integral part of Portugal, much as Algeria once was similarly regarded as part of France.

Campaign Target

Angola is the No. 1 target of the anticolonial campaign of independent African nations and they have pledged support to Angolan rebels led by Holden Roberto.

About 40,000 Portuguese troops, including African units, are garrisoned in this West African territory more than 14 times the size of Metropolitan Portugal. They are fighting an elusive guerrilla enemy, increasingly well armed and trained in the neighboring Congo.

The war is costing Portugal an estimated total of $100 million yearly. But Angola's economic benefits still outweigh this military expenditure.

Needs Development

Last year Angola earned $140 million from its exports, mainly of coffee, diamonds, sisal, corn, iron ore and cotton. Potentially the country is even richer but lacks capital for development.

"Portugal seems determined to hold on to Angola at all costs," said one Western diplomat. "It is apparently impervious to international pressure."

Many Portuguese believe the emergence of Holden Roberto's Union of the People of Angola (UPA) as the dominant rebel movement has slammed the door to any compromise solution.

1961 Uprising

UPA was mainly responsible for the 1961 uprising in which some 700 whites and as many Africans were slaughtered. The atrocities set off a wave of reprisals.

UPA has been waging a guerrilla campaign ever since, although its strongholds are now confined to mountainous and thickly forested regions.

UPA is regarded by the Portuguese as a racist movement standing for expulsion of all whites from Angola.

Angola is the largest of Portugal's overseas possessions. The first Portuguese landed here almost 500 years ago. Until the 20th century, and particularly the last 20 years, Portuguese influence and colonization were limited chiefly to the coastal regions.

According to the 1960 census, Angola has a population of 4,826,770, of whom about 370,000 are white. There are a few thousand mulattoes, and the rest are Negro.

Ivory Tiles of Mah Jong Set Inspired Black Walnut Piece

Inlaid Coffee Table Latest Effort Of Appleton Do-It-Yourselfer

BY TOM RICHARDS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Ivory "tiles" from an old Mah Jong set inspired Raymond Renier, 427 S. Warner St., to build an inlaid black walnut coffee table, his latest in a long line of do-it-yourself projects.

Renier said a piece of maple plywood door cut-out served as a base for the inlay. Some 159 separate pieces of walnut and ivory were patiently glued and clamped in place to form the intriguing pattern.

He said no more than six or eight pieces could be glued in place at a time. More than a month of spare time was needed to complete the job.

Once the separate pieces forming the table top were firmly in place, Renier said he sanded the whole thing with a large belt sander in order to give it a smooth, level finish.

Solid Legs

The legs for the table were cut from solid pieces of black walnut and fastened in place.

Once the table was constructed, fine sanding, which Renier said takes a great deal of time, but results in a smooth, clear finish, began.

Instead of shellac or varnish, Renier used new, imported hardening oil for the final finish.

He said this, too, is a slow painstaking job, but pays off in the end with a golden tone to the natural, rich depth of the dark brown wood. This finish resists damage from cigarettes and alcohol.

Oil Applied

The oil is first applied with a cloth and allowed to dry for 24 to 48 hours. Then a final coat is applied by dipping wet and dry sandpaper in the oil and working the substance slowly onto the wood in small circular strokes.

A talented woodworker, Renier built the table without plans or instructions and "out of my head."

And he isn't a beginner at do-it-yourself projects.

The Reniers' home is a showplace of his handiwork, from the built-in cupboards, cabinets and shelves on the second floor to the well-organized workshop in the basement where there is always another project in progress.

Renier, who is employed in the personnel department at Kimberly-Clark, doesn't have a lot of elaborate tools. Much of the work he does is done by hand.

His power tools include a jig saw, a circular saw, a lathe and a planer. Everything is kept neatly in place.

"I think I could find anything

I've got in the dark, if I had to," Renier said.

Here are some of his do-it-yourself accomplishments:

Complete remodeling of the house, including construction of the basement onto which the house was moved; construction of a garage; various cement work around the house; a flagpole; an outdoor fireplace; tile work in the bathroom; numerous tables, shelves and built-ins in the house.

In his "spare time," Renier sings in the church choir, is active in Boy Scouts, plays baseball and enjoys scuba diving.

Hobby Only

As for advice to fellow "do-it-yourselfers," he said "you have to enjoy what you're doing, and it has to be a hobby. People have offered to pay me for making things for them, and I won't do it."

"First of all, there's no fun in repeating a project, and secondly, once I start building things for money, it stops being a hobby and becomes a job."

And where does he get his ideas?

Well, when he finishes the serving tray he's working on, Mrs. Renier would like him to build a clock to go between the candlesticks, and then...

Raymond Renier Poses with two of his latest do-it-yourself projects, a black walnut relish server, and a coffee table inlaid with 159 separate pieces of walnut and ivory. The ivory inlays were "tiles" from an old Mah Jong set.

Billiard Room New Trend in Home Design

Smaller Tables Available for Special Needs

Popularity of the game of billiards is zooming nationally, and many a family would like the pleasure and status that comes with having their own private billiard room. But these homeowners hesitate before installing a full size table in basement playroom or attic, since it is 9 feet long, 4 feet wide, quite heavy tablecloth, and cannot easily be moved. The style, or a served meal can be space occupied, therefore would seem to be permanently invested in one game.

Smaller Tables

However there is way to use floor space and have it too. A billiard room can easily be transformed into a multi-purpose room such groups as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, or women's clubs. It's very handy, too, if you make your own clothes.

1—First of all there are smaller tables available to fit your playroom size, an 8 feet long by 52 inches wide billiard table, and one 7 feet long by 48 inches wide. Also, these tables are portable and have folding legs.

2—Regardless of size, these tables all can be easily transformed into official size ping-pong tables without putting them away or moving them. Simply put a plywood board 9 feet long and 5 feet wide on top of the table, add a net and start to play. Any local lumberyard or building supply dealer will but a plywood board to these dimensions for you. You can paint it yourself, green for visibility or ping-pong balls, and a white stripe along the edges and down the center line.

3—The ping-pong table then can owners hesitate before installing a full size table in basement playroom or attic, since it is 9 feet long, 4 feet wide, quite heavy tablecloth, and cannot easily be moved. 4—Both billiards and ping-pong are best played on a resilient tile floor.

5—The plywood board table can be used as a meeting table for such groups as Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, or women's clubs. It's very handy, too, if you make your own clothes.

Useful and Ornamental Too, Describes Couple's Projects

Time on Your Hands Often Leads to Creative Interests

BY WALT DOBERSTEIN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Fashioning a planter table lamp isn't the sort of fun-pastime you might expect of an active man. Yet this has become an interesting way for one such Appleton man to absorb time-on-his-hands.

Just 14 months ago, Carl Schmidt, route 4, Appleton might have preferred other pursuits. Back then he was newly a father, a man with a full-time job at Zwickler Knitting Mills. Then Carl, barely 20, experienced a serious back injury. Some time later, when he attempted to resume his former work Carl discovered he was working with solid cedar, Carl shaped 11 coordinated pieces into the needed components. Then he assembled them with glue. It began to look like a miniature old time wood-frame pump. Next he drilled a vertical channel through the trunk piece of the "pump."

At the top he fitted it with a lamp socket of the pull-switch type. Then he secured the pull chain to the movable pump handle. The wood was finished with a new type finishing oil which produces an exceptionally smooth and rich-appearing surface. Then Carl filled the simulated watering trough below the pump spout with suitable soil and gave it the "green touch" with a rubber plant type of perennial. The temporary shade is factory-made, but of harmonizing color and design. But he already has started on two of the job.

Bought Income—Earning Ideas

Carl looked around for things to do, ways to make money. Mail advertising of all sorts for part-time selling started arriving at the Schmidts. They moved to an upstairs apartment in a farm home south of Appleton for economy reasons — and the mail kept coming. But none of it offered much promise.

Then came a piece which at least gave him an idea for something to do — and the just completed planter-lamp is the result. Working with solid cedar, Carl shaped 11 coordinated pieces into the needed components. Then he toy chests, for sons Carl and Charles — 18 and six months — as Christmas presents. And his wife Carol? Not to be outdone in the do-it-yourself department, she has been fashioning original-design earrings and pins from tiny shells and other components which she "imports" from Florida.

Lumber Yards Have Supermarket Setup

Ever notice the big difference between the old lumber yard down by the railroad tracks and the modern, one-stop building products dealer? In the old days, you bought your lumber at the yard, your paint someplace else, your plumbing repair materials in a third place, and so on. Today, most lumber yards have a kind of supermarket setup, where you can purchase virtually anything you need to repair, remodel or refurnish.

Sash, Trim Bushes With Tapered Nylon Filaments Offered

More than 50 leading paint brush manufacturers are now offering sash and trim brushes with tapered nylon filaments. It is said that this type of brush resists water and maintains its resilience through prolonged use with water-base paints. According to one school of thought, natural bristles tend to soak up water in these paints, becoming floppy and losing their shape. The new brushes also are said to eliminate "dumping," the term used by painters for the release of too much paint the instant a brush touches a surface.

Women Yearn for Return of Pantry

Some home builders are making a discovery: women are yearning for the return of the old-fashioned pantry. A house with a walk-in pantry, with plenty of room for canned goods, jars, etc., makes an instant hit with female home-seekers. This type of pantry can do wonders to offset the space handicaps of a small kitchen.

Building Terms Often Baffling To Home Owner

Wise Householder
Learns Meanings
Of Common Words

more common terms used by builders that should be included in the vocabulary of the handyman," says Sheldon Cady, a building authority.

He also offers the meaning of a few other commonly used building expressions:

SHEATHING — Fiberboard or gypsum, often impregnated with asphalt, which covers the exterior frame of a house.

SIDING — The exterior finish of a house, generally wood, brick, aluminum, asphalt or asbestos shingling or rigid vinyl panels.

FRAMING — The wooden supports such as studs, joists, sills and lintels that make up the framework of a house, or its parts, such as doors, windows, etc.

A stud is usually a vertical piece of wood, two-by-four-inches thick; joists are horizontal beams used to support ceilings or floors; sills are large horizontal beams upon which rest the studs of the frame.

work, and a lintel doesn't float in soup. It is a horizontal beam over a doorway or a window.

DRYWALL — The covering over an interior part of the framing wallboard to insure an even finish. Usually gypsum wallboard.

DAMP PROOFING — The application of a water-resistant pitch or asphalt base coating to the outside wall of a house's foundation to prevent penetration of moisture.

The professional builders' vocabulary ranges all the way from roof. The roof on an average house measures approximately 25 ties, to Z, as in zoning where to 50 squares and a builder or local ordinances specify certain building regulations.

Although the average homeowner isn't expected to understand all the terms, he should familiarize himself with the ones that are most commonly used.

A careless man could put himself in deep domestic trouble if he too casually mentioned furring and then bought lumber when his wife thought he meant mink.

Measurement Unit

A "square" is an area 10 feet by 10 feet (100 square feet), a unit of measurement used to determine the amount of materials and labor required to cover a roof. The roof on an average house measures approximately 25 ties, to Z, as in zoning where to 50 squares and a builder or local ordinances specify certain building regulations.

These are only a few of the

Prefinished Wood Siding Now Tested

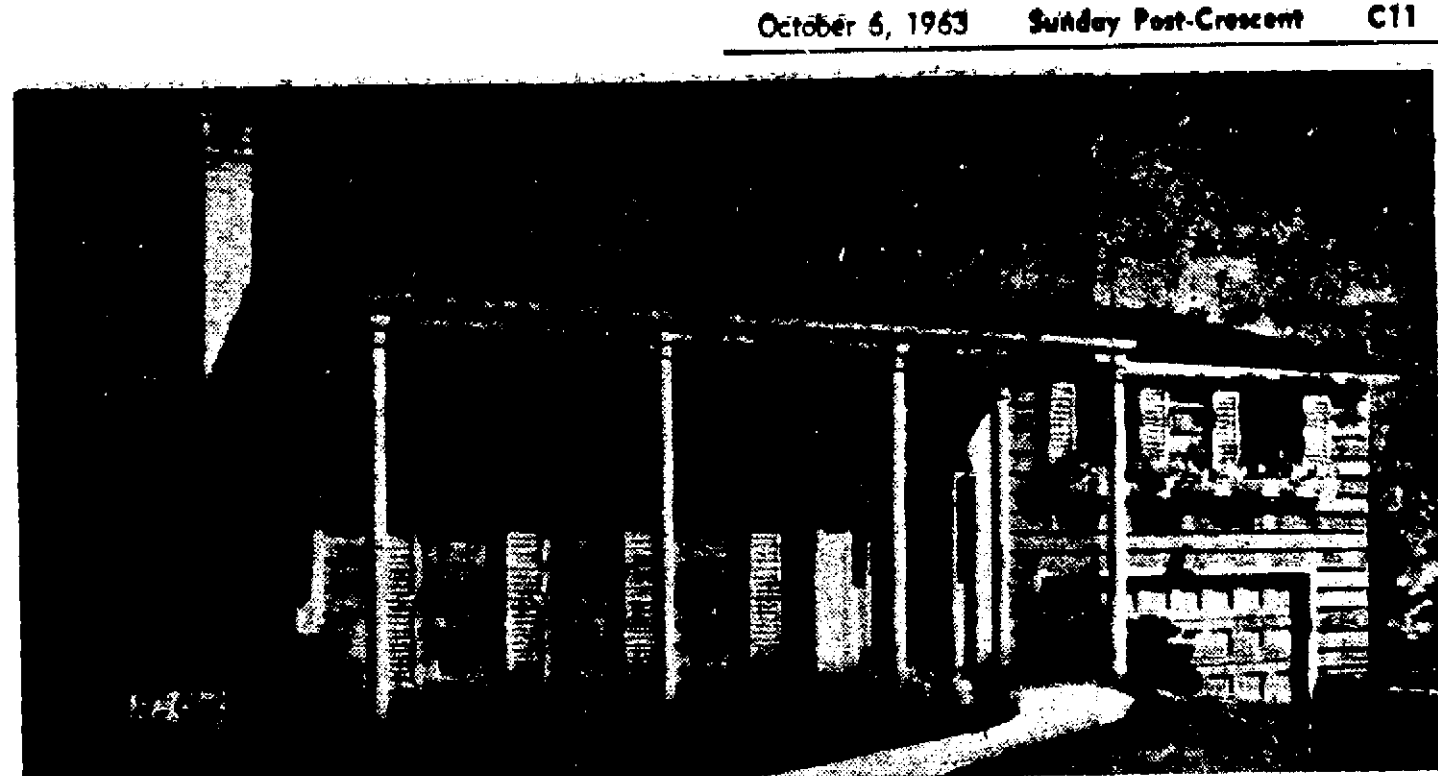

Prefinished wood siding for homes is now receiving a marketing test. A major lumber company is selling the material only in the Omaha, Neb., area. The finish coat is a baked-on acrylic resin with a satin appearance. The claim, backed by a written warranty, is that the siding will not require painting for at least seven years and that the factory-applied paint film will not peel or blister at any time. National distribution is planned when demand and production permit.

and financial conditions permit, an entire floor can be developed, adding a fourth bedroom, second full bath, recreation room and other features. In other words, it holds in reserve for the future both the daytime and nighttime space an expanding family requires.

The house is a bi-level design whose traditional styling will remain in vogue for years to come. The architect is Rudolph A. Matern, and the house is design J-96 in the weekly series.

One-Story
A bi-level is simply a one-story home which has been raised out of the ground so the basement becomes livable too; and the front door dropped a half flight so it's at grade level. It's the basement area of this home which can be finished later, and most of the work can be done by a handy husband.

Meanwhile the area plainly is not surplus — it still serves as a

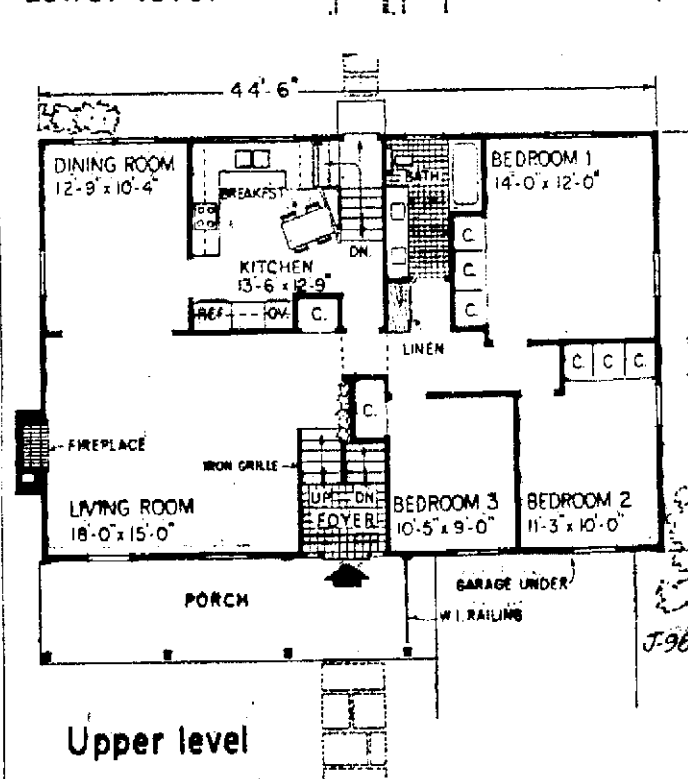

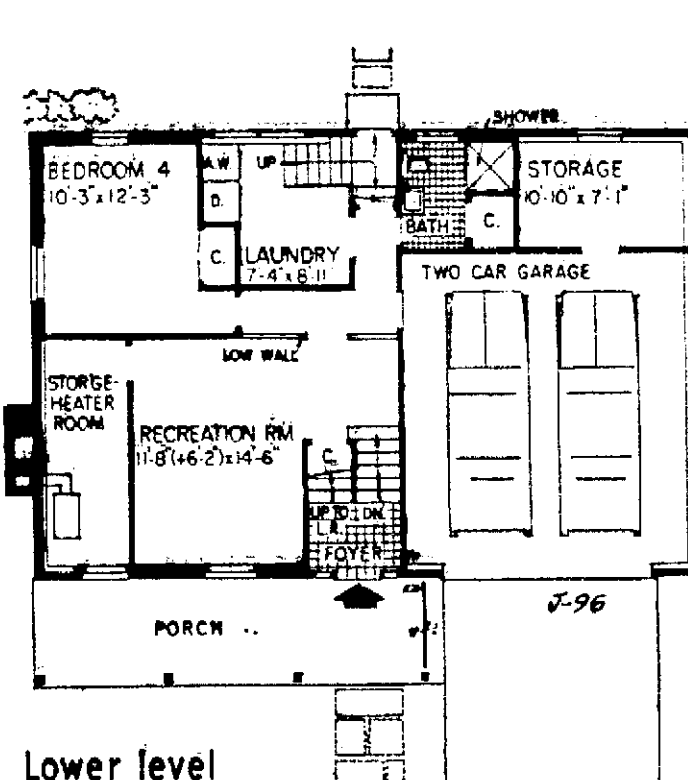

This Handsome Bi-Level contains four bedrooms and two full baths, yet its basic area is only 1,279 square feet. The lower level holds 580 square feet of bonus living area which can be developed when needed. The architect is Rudolph A. Matern.

House of the Week Bi-Level Has Reserve Growing Room

A small house that can grow right along with a family is the goal of many young couples. But finding one isn't easy — one that actually does grow, not one that just provides extra space for a future bedroom.

After all, adequate sleeping space solves only part of a family's housing problem. It's when everybody is awake and active that overcrowded conditions become really unbearable.

Today's House of the Week is a complete three bedroom home of less than 1,300 square feet. But, when family expansion demands

Main Level Contains 1,279 square feet of living area not counting 7' by 28'9" porch. Lower level contains 580 square feet not including the garage, storage area or heater room. Note the two sets of stairs, greatly simplifying movement between levels.

basement, the laundry facilities 4'6" wide by 28'9" deep. A portion are down there, and so is a full with four stately columns projects two-car garage, at least a $1,500 seven feet into the front and is item if built in addition to the 28'9" wide. The main level contains 1,279 square feet of living area not including the porch; the lower level contains an additional 580 square feet not counting the garage storage room and heater room.

An excellent feature of the house is the second set of stairs in the rear, greatly simplifying movement between the two levels. Moreover, the rear stair railing is built as a dramatic balcony for the breakfast table.

The front stair also shows creative use of wrought iron. An iron grill, not a railing, provides privacy as well as a decorative touch to the living room. A mirrored planter and vanity niche is another eye-catcher at the entry foyer.

The living room is a spacious 18' by 15', but the rear portion of it actually has the effect of being 22' wide considering the area in front of the guest closet and planter. A log burning fireplace complements the iron grill on the opposite wall, and the formal dining room adjoins in a connecting ell.

One of the finest features of the home is the kitchen, interestingly arranged and efficient at the same time. Double windows are above the double sink, offering excellent supervision of the back-yard. The rear service entry is down a half flight of stairs, equally accessible to both levels.

When the lower level is completed it will produce more than 230 square feet of recreation area as well as a well-ordered laundry, bathroom and corner bedroom. This doesn't mean there will be no room left for storage — architect Matern has provided more than 500 cubic feet of storage space at the rear of the garage, not to mention the extra space in the heater room.

Just as bulk storage space is not lacking, neither is closet space. On the main level alone there are nine closets containing a total of 368 cubic feet; and on the lower level there are large closets in both the bedroom and bathroom, and plenty of shelf or cabinet space in the 60-square-foot laundry.

As a further economy measure, the bathrooms of both levels are on the same plumbing stack. The main bath, with its double-sink vanity and recessed tub, is accessible both from the living and sleeping areas. The lower bath is convenient not only to the downstairs rooms but also the back yard and garage.

Bedroom Is Most Frequent Addition

A recent national survey shows that, when it comes to adding an extra room to a house, the bedroom is the most frequent addition. When it comes to remodeling a room that is already there, the kitchen is the most popular target for modern improvements.

Oil Solves Wood Finish Problems

A new, imported oil wood finish has solved the problems of a good many do-it-yourself enthusiasts.

Sportsmen have also found the substance useful in treating gun stocks.

The substance is composed of resins, oils and penetrators which act together to soak into the wood and harden quickly without discoloring.

Brush, cloth, or roller may be used to apply the oil. Once applied, it is allowed to dry for 20 to 35 minutes and then sanded with 400-600 wet and dry carbon paper. Power sanders may be used on larger surfaces.

The surface should then be wiped clean with a dry cloth and buffed to a satin finish.

Eight hours will provide enough time for the oil to cure, and will produce a surface that is resistant to alcohol, heat and marring.

Other uses suggested for the product are floors, natural colored exterior wood and touch-up work.

Kimberly Man Builds Cabinet Resembling Carpenter's Horse

BY JOE WOJTYSIK
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

KIMBERLY — Three weeks of labor, pounds of paper work and frustration have resulted in a unique bookcase for Edward E. Beckman, 315 S. Birch. The case is made of cherry wood and stands 28 inches high by 50 inches long. It measures 12 inches in depth. Sound a big familiar? That's right... the bookcase resembles a plain, ordinary carpenter's saw horse.

The reason behind such a design lies in a set of encyclopedias. Beckman purchased the books but had no place to store them. Tired of seeing them collect dust, he decided to build a case which would house only the encyclopedias and keep the dust off them.

Beckman's first step was to draw up a set of plans for the bookcase. "This wasn't as easy as it sounds," he said. "It's hard to plan something without having a guide, he went on. I was worried about the legs. Would they be cross correctly and would they be even when attached?"

Cherry Wood

After he drew up the plans for the project Beckman gathered his materials. They included 20 square feet of cherry wood, a varnish coat. This took up the metal brace 1/2-inch in thickness most time. Of the three weeks and four feet long, four screws, spent in building the book case, for each end of the book case, one week was used in sanding and applying the varnish, Beckman said.

All that remained was to cut a track for the glass panel.

The whole thing almost wound up in the furnace at this point, Beckman said. An error in affixing the bottom of the case cut down the clearance for the panel. Off I went to the do-it-yourself shop.

Offered $100

If you think I was discouraged, he went on, you should have seen the clerk at the shop. This was about my 29th trip in for advice. I walked in and the clerk offered me $100 to just leave the case in the corner and forget it. I was tempted.

The two of us started figuring, however, and we decided to try cutting the track and hoping for the best. Success smiled on our efforts. It fit. Of course the clearance is just a hair tight but it fits.

Beckman relates how he took it home, put it in the living room and collapsed. Incidentally, all the work on the case was done in the living room. He began work in the winter. Moisture in the basement plus the labor involved in moving it upstairs prompted the unusual shop setting.

Other Projects

Beckman has built other fixtures for this home including a kitchen table, record cabinet and end tables.

What lies ahead is not certain, at least in the do-it-yourself area.

Beckman's wife Carol would like her husband to begin work on a sewing cabinet. After the book case, Beckman asserts, I think we'll let that project wait awhile. It's in the early planning stage. I think about it when rocking in my easy chair now and then.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Beckman, 315 S. Birch St., Kimberly, can laugh now but a few months ago the book case in the center of the picture was the center of consternation. After wading through pounds of paperwork and many trips to the do-it-yourself shop, Mr. Beckman completed the 50-inch long, cherry wood case. He relates how he and his wife were ready at more than one point to scrap the whole project. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Power Behind the Throne

Claims Wives Force Husbands Into Do-It-Yourself Projects

BY VIRGIL SMITH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

I know how do-it-yourselfers get started. Their wives force them into it.

Once they have started there is no backing out. Nothing is more embarrassing than beginning a project and then having to quit and admit it's beyond your skill.

She wants something repaired, or built. It costs money... too much. You think you can save by "doing it yourself."

The Beginning

That's the beginning! And far from the end.

First there is the problem of acquiring the tools and materials needed. Then there is the added problem of implementation.

Let's take a typical example, say a couple moving into an unfurnished apartment. Everything is moved. All of the furniture is placed properly and the appliances are put back into working order, including the gas stove, refrigerator... and the automatic washer.

can be decorated with the words CHILDREN'S THEATRE and such famous names as Shakespeare, Shaw and Ibsen. Smiling or weeping gargoyles can be added. Theatre programs can be tacked to a bulletin board which also can hold rehearsal calls.

Preliminary Meetings

6—Skits or readings to be put on should be discussed at a preliminary meeting and parts assigned. Rehearsals before a specific performance time are important and can be a lot of fun.

7—Not all the amusement is on-stage. Boys often love the roles of Stage Manager (2 needed to pull curtains open and closed) Prop Man, (for setting our chairs and sets) and Publicity Director (writing up announcements for neighborhood distribution).

A children's theatre gives young girls a chance to play at being a glamorous movie star on-stage and allows boys to demonstrate strength and masculinity by pushing around seats and furniture. It's fun for everyone.

Now, the automatic washer goes in the basement. It sets on a smooth concrete floor. The legs are adjustable, so even if the floor dips toward the drain there is no problem. The machine is leveled.

A few days later, the wife says to the husband, "Honey, the new house is wonderful and you did a marvelous job connecting the stove, refrigerator... and the automatic washer, only..."

It seems the washer slips downhill toward the drain during the spin cycles. The cause is readily apparent. The vibration causes the machine to slide on the smooth concrete surface.

The Remedy

A remedy is not so apparent. It was suggested the machine be allowed to slide downhill until the hoses keep it from going further. A snort of disgust prompts a closer look at the problem.

Thought was given to insertion of rubber casters under the washer's legs. Investigation disclosed they already had rubber casters.

A thorough appraisal of the situation resulted in the brilliant idea of nailing wooden blocks in front of the legs to keep the machine where it belongs.

Tools, Material

Finding a hammer was simple. Every housewife has one in her utility drawer. Although no pieces of wood suitable for the job were found in the house, it was decided a quick trip on the next day would solve that problem. No nails long enough or strong enough to go through the wood and into the cement. They probably could be gotten the same time as the wood, and at the same store.

A sudden thought jars the senses. "What will the landlord say about driving spikes into the concrete of his newly-built house?"

Stirred by the imagined remarks of an outraged landlord, sanity returns with a flash — and with sanity the simple solution to the problem which was obvious from the beginning.

I took my problem to the landlord. You see, he is a carpenter.

Detailed reproductions of hand-carved sconces and plaques are available in many finishes, including gold, fruitwood, and white with gold highlights.

With ornate mirrors back in fashion, perhaps you've wondered what to do with your plain ones of heveled plate glass.

If You Lack Do-It-Yourself Know-How, Avoid Projects

Many home owners try to ease/help to avoid pitfalls encountered the strain on their purses by the unthinking amateur.

tackling some of the maintenance Learning by doing is an enjoyable and repair jobs which crop up able experience for the hobbyist around the house. Those buying who "farms out" a job beyond new homes assume the role of his ability and avoids becoming depressed by the sight of a half-finished project.

This is fine when the person is a good carpenter, or a skilled amateur with the proper tools and know-how. Otherwise, the many financial and personal hazards encountered more than offset the cost of hiring a professional cabinetmaker or carpenter.

Many woodworking, plumbing and electrical jobs take specific tools and this can mean a considerable capital investment. Materials are a cost item where knowledge is needed as to the type for the purpose in mind.

Masonry, plastering, wood finishing, painting and structural planning are other areas where knowledge is needed before deciding to "do-it-yourself."

Small appliance repairs is another problem which must be faced with matter of factness. Either you know how to do it, or you take it to a qualified repairman. A few dollars paid out is preferable to constantly blown fuses or fire damage caused by what is known as "faulty wiring."

Nevertheless, a knowledgeable approach to the do-it-yourself fad can be profitable and pleasurable. Acquainting oneself with the basic fundamentals of the skill required and planning ahead will

Survivor of Titanic Sinking Dies at 104

FLORA, Ill. (AP)—A 104-year-old woman, thought to be a survivor of the Titanic disaster in 1912, died Friday in Clay County Hospital.

Mrs. Della Riggs had been a patient in the hospital since April 1955.

An attorney for the family said a grand niece told him the Riggses were among the 705 survivors when the Titanic struck an iceberg in the Atlantic Ocean on the night of April 14-15, 1912.

There were approximately 2,200 passengers on the maiden voyage of the supposedly unsinkable liner.

Model Ordinance
Defeated by Council

ANTIGO — An attempt last month by Citizens for Decent Literature, Inc., to push an anti-obscenity ordinance through the common council has resulted in the adoption of a watered-down measure designed to "discourage distribution of obscene literature within the city limits".

Mayor Robert J. Perez, one of two Antigo residents active in the Cleveland, Ohio organization, spearheaded a drive to get a model ordinance considered by the council. The measure was defeated by the council Aug. 14 on a vote of 6-5, following a long debate.

Perez thought the ordinance would raise moral standards and mark easier prosecution by state statutes of purveyors of indecent materials.

Adopted in September

Adopted by the council in a meeting Sept. 11 was a resolution headed: "To promote decent reading material and to discourage obscene literature, pictures, drawings, sketches and paintings from being distributed and sold within the City of Antigo, Wis."

In part, it read, "Be it resolved that the common council of the City of Antigo does vigorously support and uphold all enforceable state statutes relative to all obscene literature, pictures, drawing, sketches and paintings found within the city which are offered for resale."

Perez had no comment on the passage of the resolution.

There was a diversity of opinion on the value of ordinance. Perez pointed out that many of the city's mothers wanted such a law passed.

Fear Government Control

Other residents, including teachers and businessmen, expressed fears the action would be the first step towards government control of library and high school reading material.

Perez refuted causes for such concern and said the target of the measure was "filth on magazine racks". He gave no assurance the law would not include libraries and high schools, but pointed out the ordinance specifically mentioned wholesale and retail vendors.

Appleton Man Hurt in

GREEN BAY — An Appleton man was admitted to Bellin Hospital Saturday afternoon after his car left Brown County Trunk A north of here, crossed a driveway, plowed through a pile of large rocks and clipped off a utility pole.

Robert Skenandore, 32, sustained a head cut and was admitted for observation following the mishap. The crash occurred about 1:30 p.m. Skenandore was unable to give police details on the mishap.

Coins Operate Record Vendor

Try-It-Before-You-Buy-It
Concept of New Invention

Not only will you be able to hear the music, but you will be able to keep the phonograph record.

The newly-formed Vend-It Corporation will manufacture a new coin-operated phonograph which will do just that at a plant in Appleton.

Vend-It will manufacture and market "Melody Vendor," the juke box with a new twist, invented by Alfred G. and Arnold E. Ristau, both of Kaukauna, who have been inventing phonographs and allied equipment for the past 40 years.

Employ 19 Persons

"Melody Vendor" will be produced in a 49 by 80 foot building at 731 W. Northland Ave. The firm expects to employ about 19 persons initially.

In addition, the firm is offering 40,000 shares of common stock to the general public at a selling price of $3 per share.

Company officials believe "Melody Vendor" is the only combination vendor-record player currently on the market anywhere.

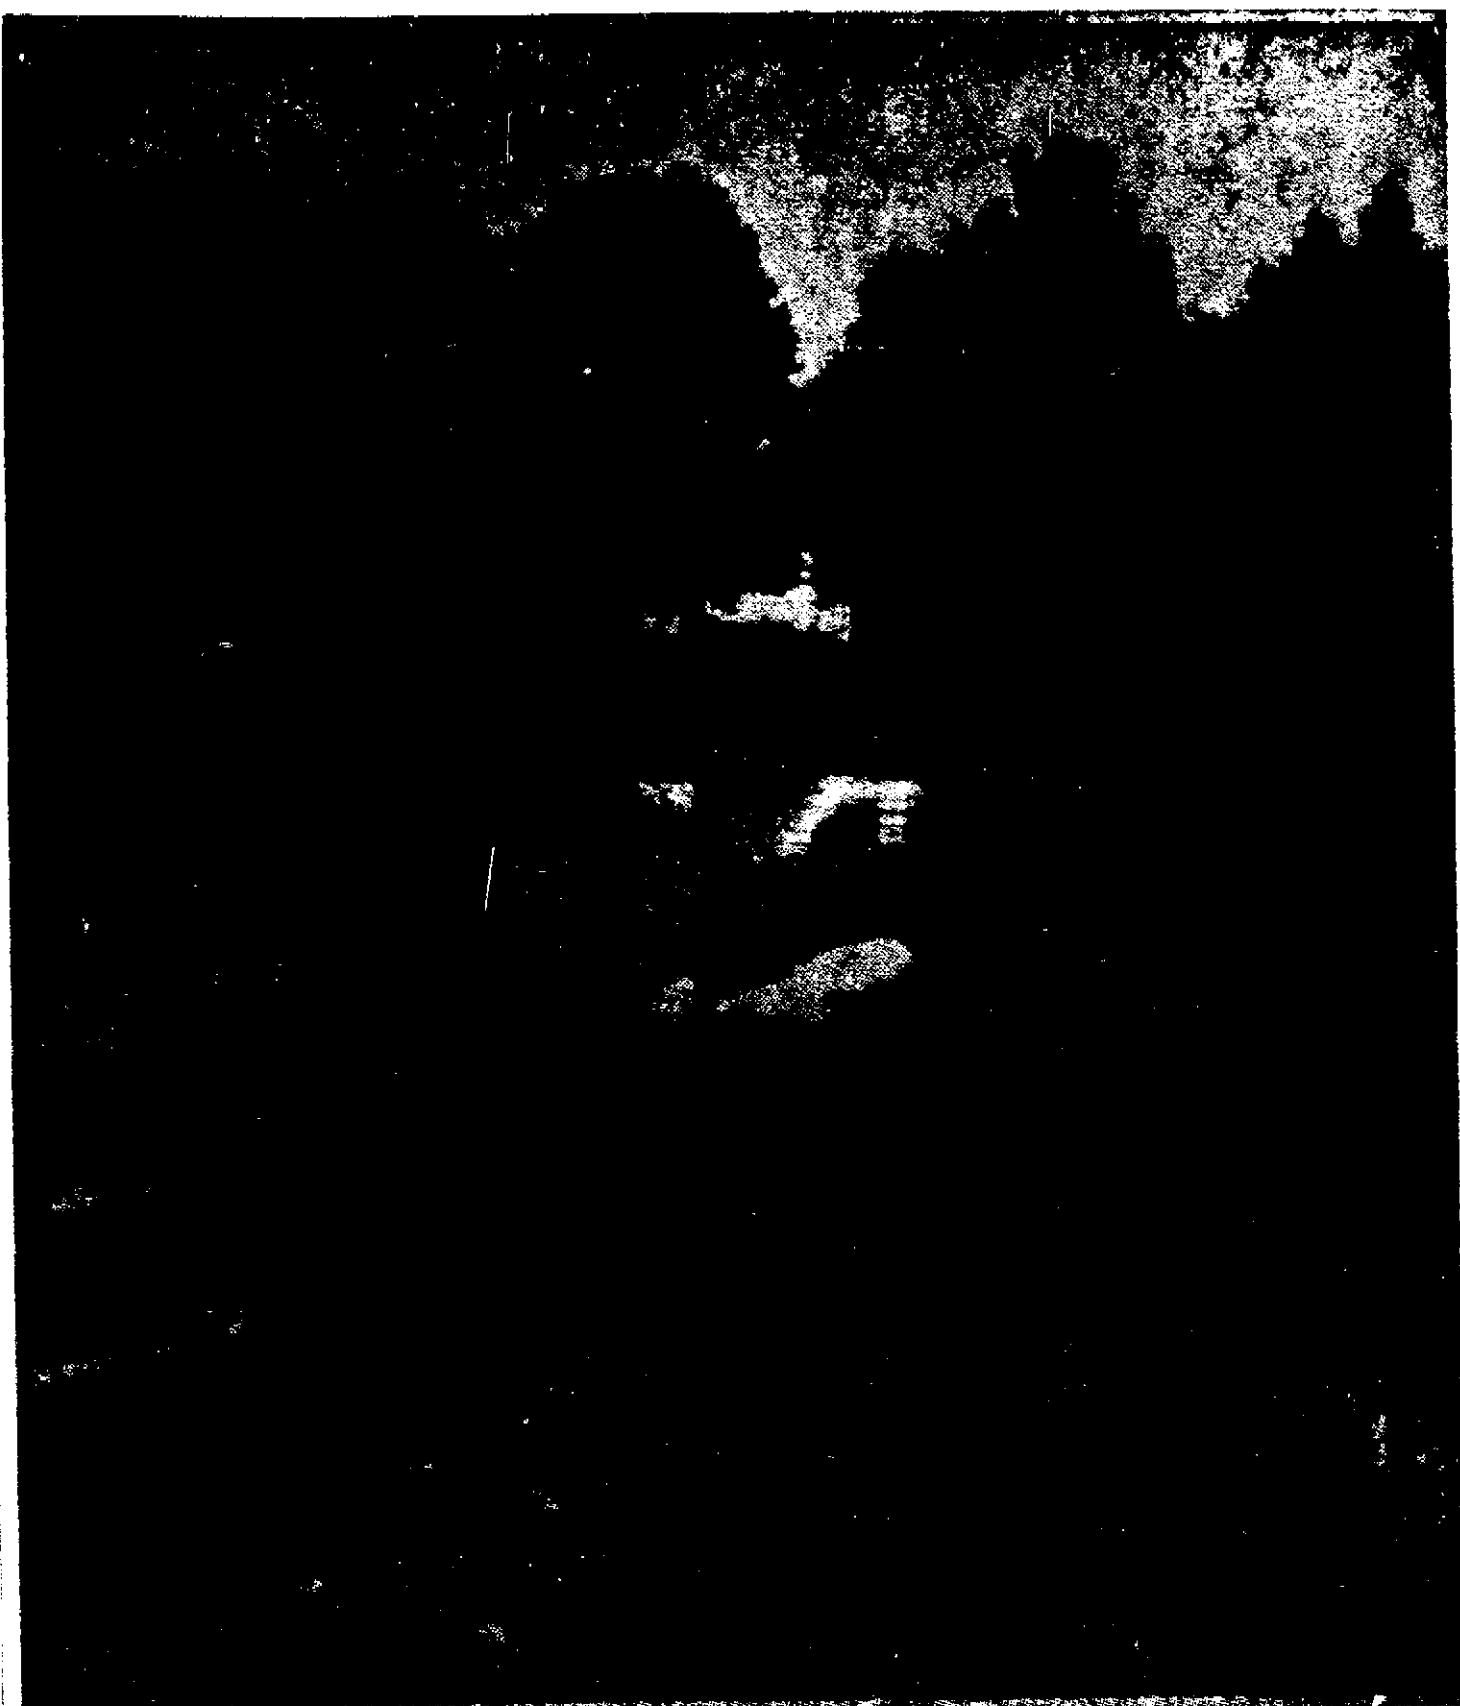

The inventors describe their new machine thusly: "If you want to buy a new hat, you want to try it on first. When you buy a new record, you would like to hear it first. "Melody Vendor" lets you do just that."

Dimes and Quarters

The phonograph plays both sides of the records which are selected. Money deposited in the machine to hear music is credited toward the purchase of the 45 rpm record which is chosen for purchase. It operates on dimes and quarters.

A pilot model of the vendor has been constructed and has been placed in test operation in various locations successfully. The unit is now on display and is being demonstrated by the corporation at its

Construction Hits All-Time
Record Of $9.7 Million

No Letup Seen in Appleton
As Building Permits Pour in

New construction started in Appleton since Jan. 1 skyrocketed to $9,789,391 this past week—an all-time record.

Building Inspector Charles Magnette said Saturday that, based on current new building indicators, the $10 million mark should be topped during the remaining three months of 1963. The previous record for new construction in a single year was set in 1957 when $9,636,081 worth of building got underway.

No Letup

There are two other years in the city's history in which the $9 million mark was surpassed. Last year Appleton enjoyed a Aid Association for Lutherans Building.

However, should the association wait until the early part of 1964 to get a permit, it would mean next year's building activity would be getting off to a flying start.

Magnette issued a permit for the razing of the old AAL building last month. No new construction will be started until the site is completely cleared.

It is interesting to note that in 1952 when the present 10-story portion of the AAL building was erected, new construction in Appleton that year added up to $638,843.

During September, the building inspector's office issued 65 building and remodeling permits with projects amounting to $1,053,685—the figure representing the fifth time this year the monthly total passed the $1 million figure.

Appleton's monthly construction totals for 1963:
January	$1,708,545
February	182,860
March	414,103
April	1,238,462
May	904,991
June	991,683
July	2,211,245
August	1,063,962
September	1,053,685
Total	$9,789,391

During the past month permits were issued for 26 new homes with a value of $439,000.

The project with the highest price tag was a 24-unit apartment building which will cost $225,000. Permits were also issued for two eight-unit apartment buildings valued at $136,000.

Records show that new apartment construction launched in Appleton during September will amount to 52 living units, ranging from one, two and three bed rooms, when completed.

Discuss New Pleasant Acres
Home, Exhibition Building

BY ALLAN ERKVALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — The role of Winnebago county in fairgrounds operations and in the care of its senior citizens, mainly those needing extensive medical care, will be considered by the County Board at a budget session which begins Oct. 22.

Included in the proposed budget, scheduled for a public hearing on Oct. 23, are $145,000 for the construction of an exposition building at the fairgrounds and the purchase of additional land and $100,000 toward the start of construction of a new maximum care home for the aging.

These items are part of the $357,035 outlay section of the proposed Winnebago county budget. The $5,765,804 proposed budget is merely a tabulation of the requests by various county board committees and county departments and has not received official approval.

The fairgrounds request, submitted by the County Fair, Park and Conservation Committee, is for $105,000 for a new year-round exposition building and $40,000 for purchase of land adjacent to the northeast corner of the fairgrounds.

The building requested would be 110 by 160 feet in size and would include plumbing and heating. It would take the place of the produce building damaged by heavy snow in 1962.

Steel Construction

The building requested would be of steel frame and siding and would be used for conventions, programs, trade and home shows and similar events as well as for the fair.

A suggestion that the fairgrounds be relocated has been under discussion in recent months. City of Oshkosh officials have indicated that if the fair is to be located, the city would like to acquire the fairgrounds for park and recreation purposes and for possible expansion of residential and commercial districts.

City officials also have proposed that a year-round building such as the type proposed would be advantageous to the city. The Winnebago County Fair Association, which holds the fairgrounds lease from the county, has stated that it would like to have a chance to purchase the site if the fairgrounds is to be relocated.

The request for the $145,000, approved by the county board for inclusion in the 1964 budget, would commit the county to continuation of the fair at its present site.

Newer Trends

Trustees of the Winnebago County Hospital and Pleasant Acres home and the County Board's Institutions Committee are recommending replacement of the present Pleasant Acres of home with a new facility designed in keeping with the newer trends for maximum care patients.

The present home is an old building remodeled several years ago at a cost of about $375,000. It does not provide for the easy

Oshkosh Man Has Been Swinging
'Headache Ball' for 17½ Years

Demolitionist Victor Lundt's Only
Injury Was 'Belt in Chin' by Brick

Working with the "headache ball" for the past 17½ years has produced very few headaches for Victor Lundt, 43, of Oshkosh.

But it did produce one good belt in the chin for Lundt who is the operator of the 22-ton crane doing the lion's share of razing the old building in downtown Appleton.

Most of the "sidewalk superintendents" watching Lundt swing the 3,600 pound steel "headache ball" into the building commented that the hazardous work involved.

But the missing finger on Lundt's right hand is a result of a childhood accident. In 17½ years of building wrecking, his only accident on the job was getting hit in the chin by a bouncing brick.

That happened on the AAL building in downtown Appleton.

Actually, the job isn't nearly as dangerous as it is skillful. Lundt, nearly two ton weight, "It's all a matter of practice," he said, "the steadier the ball gets, the more accurately I can hit my target. You must learn the principles like in any other job."

"It's a little touch and go at times, but I haven't had any bad breaks. I've never tipped the crane over or anything like that. The only problems I've had with this building (the old AAL structure) is that I've been working in rather cramped quarters."

One thing has amused Lundt while doing his wrecking work in Appleton—spectators.

Can't Get Close

"They always seem to be deep in discussion as they watch me, and I wish I could hear what they say. I know a lot of people would like to give me advice, but they can't get close enough to me."

Lundt's "headache ball" has been the ruin of many well-known buildings in Appleton and throughout Wisconsin.

Some of them have been hotels like the Beaumont in Green Bay, the Park in Madison and the Foeste in Sheboygan. Others have been the old Dane, Wood and Portage county courthouses.

In Appleton the steel ball has crashed into the Appleton Hotel, Columbia Hall, the Greyhound Bus Station, and the old Sherry Motors building on College Avenue where the J. C. Penney Co. now is located.

One of the Biggest

Lundt says the AAL building ranks with the Beaumont, Park and Foeste hotels as one of the biggest buildings he has helped raze.

Times have been good for Lundt, who lives at 2090 Point Comfort in Oshkosh. The Madison Moving and Wrecking Co., his employer, has had a steady stream of buildings to demolish for the past 2½ years.

No sooner does one building get torn down, when the razing crews move on to another.

Perhaps that's a good indicator of progress, Lundt concludes.

Mumps Epidemic in Appleton Predicted;
59 Cases Reported

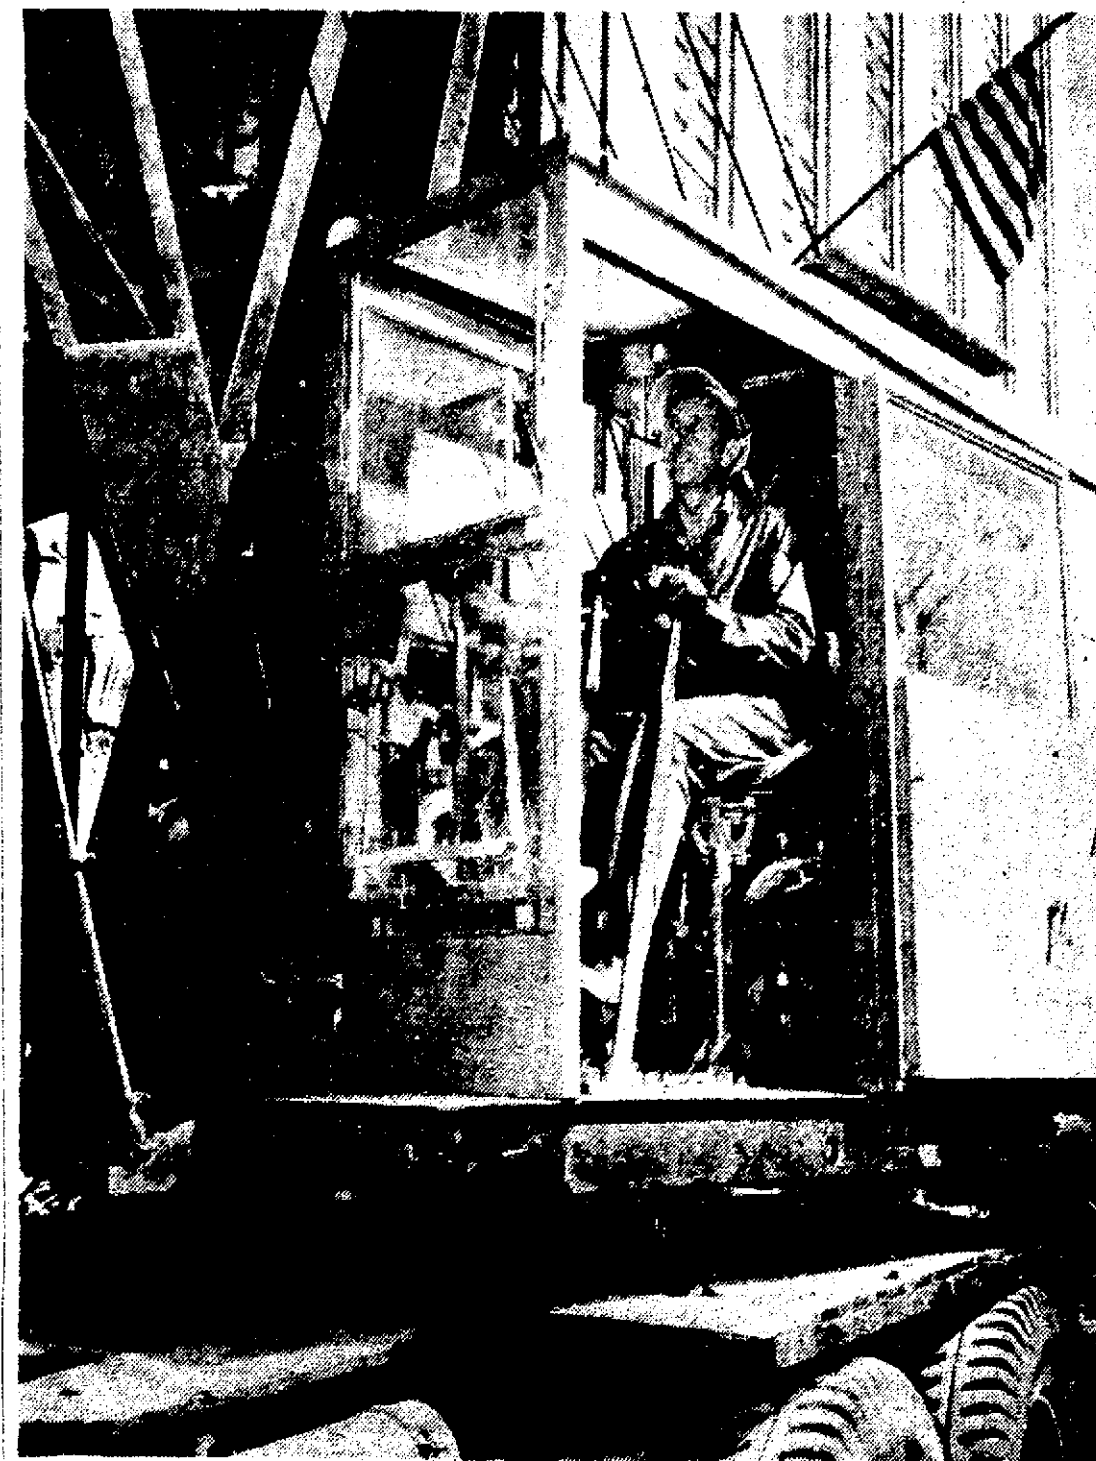

It's open season for the mumps in Appleton.

The health department has 59 cases reported during the week.

There is everything to indicate that the community may be in for an epidemic, according to health officials.

Early symptoms are a cold, sore throat and fever.

Grade school children in all parts of the city have been contracting the disease.

Victor Lundt, 43, Oshkosh, has spent the last 17½ years behind the control of a crane, swinging the "headache ball" to demolish buildings. He sustained the first injury of his career, a brick on the chin, on his present assignment, demolition of the old AAL building in downtown Appleton. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Work on Hospital To End This Year

Theda Clark Remodeling May Be Completed 14 Months Early

NEENAH — The schedule now areas of the first floor of the in effect for the $4.5 million new 1923 building will be completed. The week of Nov. 18 the sched. Theda Clark Memorial Hospital includes completion of the calls for completion of all con- final remodeled areas adjoining tracts by the end of the year.

While a revised schedule esti- mated completion at mid-October, the January completion date still would be 14 months ahead of the original time table.

Work on remodeling of the 1948 and 1923 wings has been receiving most recent attention from both contractors and hospital main- tenance crews in recent weeks.

Move Unit
The schedule this week is plan- ned to move the intensive care unit from the fourth floor of the 1948 building to the permanent location in the remodeled third floor of the 1923 building. New lighting has been placed in the 1923 rooms and oxygen has been piped into each room. Heat controls also have been altered.

The obstetrics and new born nurseries also will be moved this week from their temporary head- quarters on the third floor of the 1963 building to the remodeled third floor of the 1948 building. Three nurseries with a 36-bed capacity will be available. The third floor of the new building will then become the acute medical-surgical nursing care division.

The week of Oct. 21 small chil- dren patients will be moved from second floor of the 1963 building to the remodeled children's de- partment on the second floor of the 1923 building. The second floor of the new building then will be converted into acute medical-surgical nursing care division for young adults and adults.

Also on the schedule for the week of Oct. 21 are completion of surfacing of the parking lot area and the start of operation for the new PBX board.

New Area
The week of Oct. 28 the sched- ule calls for a move of the tem- porary business office to the new area and opening of the new main entrance and lobby area.

The new recovery rooms and remodeled surgery department areas will be opened the week of Nov. 4. The week of Nov. 11 the coffee shop and all remodeled that when a patrol car is in the area, the tendency for juveniles to linger on the streets is reduced. A curfew whistle on top of the fire house blows every night at 9 p. m., the hour established for a curfew several years ago. How- ever, enforcement of the curfew hour is unheard of and most of the youths ignore it.

On Friday nights the youths at- tend a teen-age dance at one of the village business places, but according to one merchant hit by the burglaries last week "it's get- ting to be a gathering place for punks." Most of the village youths "hang around" at one or two filling stations or at a teen-age bar near the village limits.

Road Is Raceway
River Street is a well-paved, wide roadway, a part of State 76 which runs through the village. Recently it has become a race- way for young drivers. Speed lim- it as well as parking requirement signs posted on the street are ig- nored, merchants report.

The village for the main part is quiet and peaceful. Residents work in the larger cities near the village. There are only two indus- tries which hire workers. The village is surrounded by truck and vegetable farms.

"We haven't had any inquiries about opening a business here in many years," a member of the business league said. "We haven't really made an effort to encour- age development." The merchant agreed that perhaps with a police force, other businesses would con- sider opening along River Street.

County Patrol
County policemen patrol the vil- lage streets about once on every shift of duty. Merchants agree their business, one merchant said. "Business is done on a cash basis. We do not encourage the migrant shopper to come hack like we would a regular custo- mer," he said.

There has been some talk about efforts of the businessmen's league in the village to buy pro- tection in the form of a hired nightwatchman, but nothing has developed. Some merchants have talked of supporting a candidate for village president who would assure the village of police pro- tection.

"The citizens seem to think it would be a good idea if we (the merchants) took turns pat- rolling the streets," a man said. "And others have suggested that the village board take turns on pa- trols."

To prevent trouble from mi- grant workers during the harvest season, Shiocton merchants have made it a policy not to encourage the television listing which says its nice to see Anne Baxter act- ing again. But this time she's on a telephone conversation with her lover who is trying to show her how to kill her brutal, drunken husband who is lying unconscious on the floor of her apartment.

Between murders there's a family - style show about a pair of robot fighters who slug it out toe to toe in a boxing ring. Only one of the robots is real and gets shellacked.

There's the return of the hon- est-to-goodness Friday night fights which borders slightly on the violent side.

And then there's the Friday night prince of television, Jack Paar, who Friday night con- fessed he too, was a law break- er in that once he was arrested (in his pajamas yet) for not returning a library book.

Yes, old Joe and find peace- ful relaxation in my living room any Friday night.

Hope is on from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., so the night can't be a total futility.

But Bob has branched into serious drama and we're watch- ing a modern-day western in which a vengeful Indian plans to do in a prominent city fa- ther who possibly lynched the Indian's father.

Again, dialing the channel we find that murder is still fun on one of the shows in which a dashing detective is aided by some-time actress Zsa Zsa Gabor. The victim is found draped on the wall in his home among his hunting trophies.

Zsa Zsa plays the part of a Swedish maid which could pos- sibly be a crime in Sweden.

Back on the serious side, mur- der isn't so much fun on the opposite channel which is pit- ting actress Joan Crawford as a muchly - married woman who returns to her home in Maine to find her demented artist - husband stalking her with a shotgun.

And later, we can agree with Remodeling at Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, is progressing ahead of schedule. This view is taken from the corridor on the third floor of the 1923 portion of the hospital looking into the connecting corridor of the new portion constructed this year. The third floor in the 1923 building will become an intensive care unit.

Television Celebrity Valachi Would Feel at Home With Friday Programs

Post-Crescent Crime Writer

Joe Valachi, himself some- what of a television celebrity nowadays, would have felt right at home in my living room Friday night as I sat with my family and watched television.

We started with a wild war cry by some Indian chiefs on one channel which attempted to revive some hostility in the death of Gen. George Arm- strong Custer. We saw Sittin' Bull torn between war and peace from 6:30 to 7:30.

Of course, if we so chose, we could channel skip into that third part of the five-part mys- tery show which so far has chalked up two murders. Fri- day night's hero escapes with his life by evading a high-speed auto which veers down on him, and we're taunted with the prognostication that our hero is planning "a possibly fatal trip to Europe."

But wait a minute, that old stand-by, slapstick comedian Bob

Shiocton May Hire Police Protection

Roberts turned in his badge. Roberts said he "got tired of the whole thing" last spring after 10 years duty.

Roberts' "police work" was in- cluded in his other village job as street superintendent. He used his own car for patrols and had it equipped with red light and other emergency equipment. Roberts did not clarify why he quit his police job and did not state how much the village paid him for his work. He said he would not re-apply for the job at this time.

Since spring, Shiocton has hired a 77-year-old village resident who acts as a night watchman and checks the doors to see if they are shut. As far as anyone knows, he has never made an arrest.

Groth said the job left vacant by Roberts has not been filled, "because we have not been able to find anyone who can fit the bill." There are some applica- tions on file and the village board will look these over Tuesday night.

Salary Open

The salary for the job is open and will depend on the person hir- ed. "We want to see how much experience the man will bring to the job and how much time he will put into it," Groth said.

The village has been saddled with the heavy expenses of sewer and water construction, and the financing and furnishing of a high school addition. Discussion in other years of more police pro- tection has always been put aside with the excuse that it couldn't be afforded at that time.

Lacking a police force, the Shiocton merchants have taken other steps to eliminate minor "troubles."

Most merchants whose stores have been an invitation to shop- lifters, close from noon to 1 p.m., the hour corresponding to the high school lunch hour when many stu- dents mill about River Street.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 189, Thomas Alva Edison showed a 50-foot, 13-second motion picture film in his New Jersey laboratory. On the same date in 1927, the first talk- ing picture, "The Jazz Singer" opened in New York.

John Allen purchased the Allen- ville School and land for $5,000. The flagpole was sold for $1.

Purchaser of the Butte des Morts School building was the Butte des Morts Civic Association which paid $900 for the building and $410 for the furnace and wa- ter system. Miscellaneous con- tents in this school were sold for $15. Walter Spiegelberg is the owner of the land on which the building stands.

Reinhold Krueger purchased the annex in Winneconne for $200 and its contents were auctioned for $2.25. The building must be re- moved from the property.

Sunny skies brought out large crowds to the auctions, held at each of the school buildings, and produced some spirited bidding, school officials said.

Weyauwega Immigrant Repays Many Kindnesses With Hogs for Costa Rican

Walter Kaminski's Gesture May Alter Latin American Farming

BY JOHN SAWALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

WEYAUWEGA — Walter Kaminski is turning back the pages of history this week.

The German born immigrant farmer is giving Gilberto Rojas, 20, Palmares Alajuela, Costa Rica, a dream—two purebred Duroc pigs, which may change farming on that isle.

In 1926 the situation was reversed. The characters were different. Kaminski was a young two young pigs man who had left Germany and arrived in the United States $300 in debt. Today he is one of the best known breeders of purebred Duroc pigs in Wisconsin. It took determination and kindness from persons who trusted Kaminski to bring him where he is today.

No Program

Rojas visited the Kaminski farm last year during his visit to the sage of a second set of pigs, land of opportunity, set out to Kaminski decided to donate the animals as a warm-hearted gesture of international good will.

The start Gilberto is getting is one Kaminski did not have when he first landed in this country. Kaminski, when he was 16 years old, entered the German army and served during the last months of World War I. After leaving the army he went back to farming in his homeland. Before he came to the United States, his nearly worthless. His brother, who was already here, sent him a ticket. When he arrived in the United States he was "300 in debt."

For three years he worked on his brother's farm near Waupaca and then rented another farm in the same area, which he worked for another seven years.

Helped by Cousin

Mrs. Kaminski, also a native of Germany, came to the United States with the help of a cousin in Dale. The couple, now in the

Beware of Poison Sumac, Ivy On Trips in Wisconsin Woods

If you intend to take a ride this weekend to see the colorful country side and enjoy the expected mild weather, be careful. Not only drive cautiously but if you get the urge to stop and take a walk through the woods or pick some colorful leaves for a fall table decoration know what you are picking. The leaves of poison sumac and poison ivy are just as dangerous now as they are in mid-summer, so if you have no desire to spend several days or even weeks recovering from a painful skin rash avoid picking leaves in a strange area. In many cases of both poison sumac and poison ivy, the victims must be hospitalized.

This time of the year, both can be easily identified. Poison sumac, which causes a more severe skin rash than poison ivy, ranges in color from yellow-red to purple-red and grows in swampy or lowland areas. It bears six inch long, loose clusters of cream colored berries dangling from the junction of the leaf and stem. Common sumac which is non-poisonous has the same colors but bears a dense clump of wine red berries.

Poison ivy leaves have now turned to a brilliant red but the plant resin which causes skin rash is still just as potent and dangerous. The plant which grows along fence lines and ditches as well as in the woods, grows less than 18 inches high and displays three leaflets in each leaf and sometimes has white berries.

Hunters should also be cautious when spotting either of the culprits in the woods.

So if you do decide to take an armful of leaves home and don't watch what your picking within the next few days don't be surprised when your arms or arches start to itch and break out with a rash. If you do happen to be one of the unfortunate ones, consult your family doctor and then learn to identify the two most common poisons of the woods.

Solons Will Study Controls on Lakes

Alfonsi Considered Top Choice As Head of Conservation Unit

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Recreational lake zoning and classification for use controls will be among the principal topics of study of a new interim committee on conservation problems named by the joint legislative council.

Assemblyman Paul R. Alfonsi of Vilas County is regarded as the likely choice for chairmanship of the study group which has a broad mandate to consider current and pertinent issues in outdoors and conservation affairs, and to report to the legislative session of 1965. He has been chairman of the assembly standing committee on conservation for the 1963 legislature.

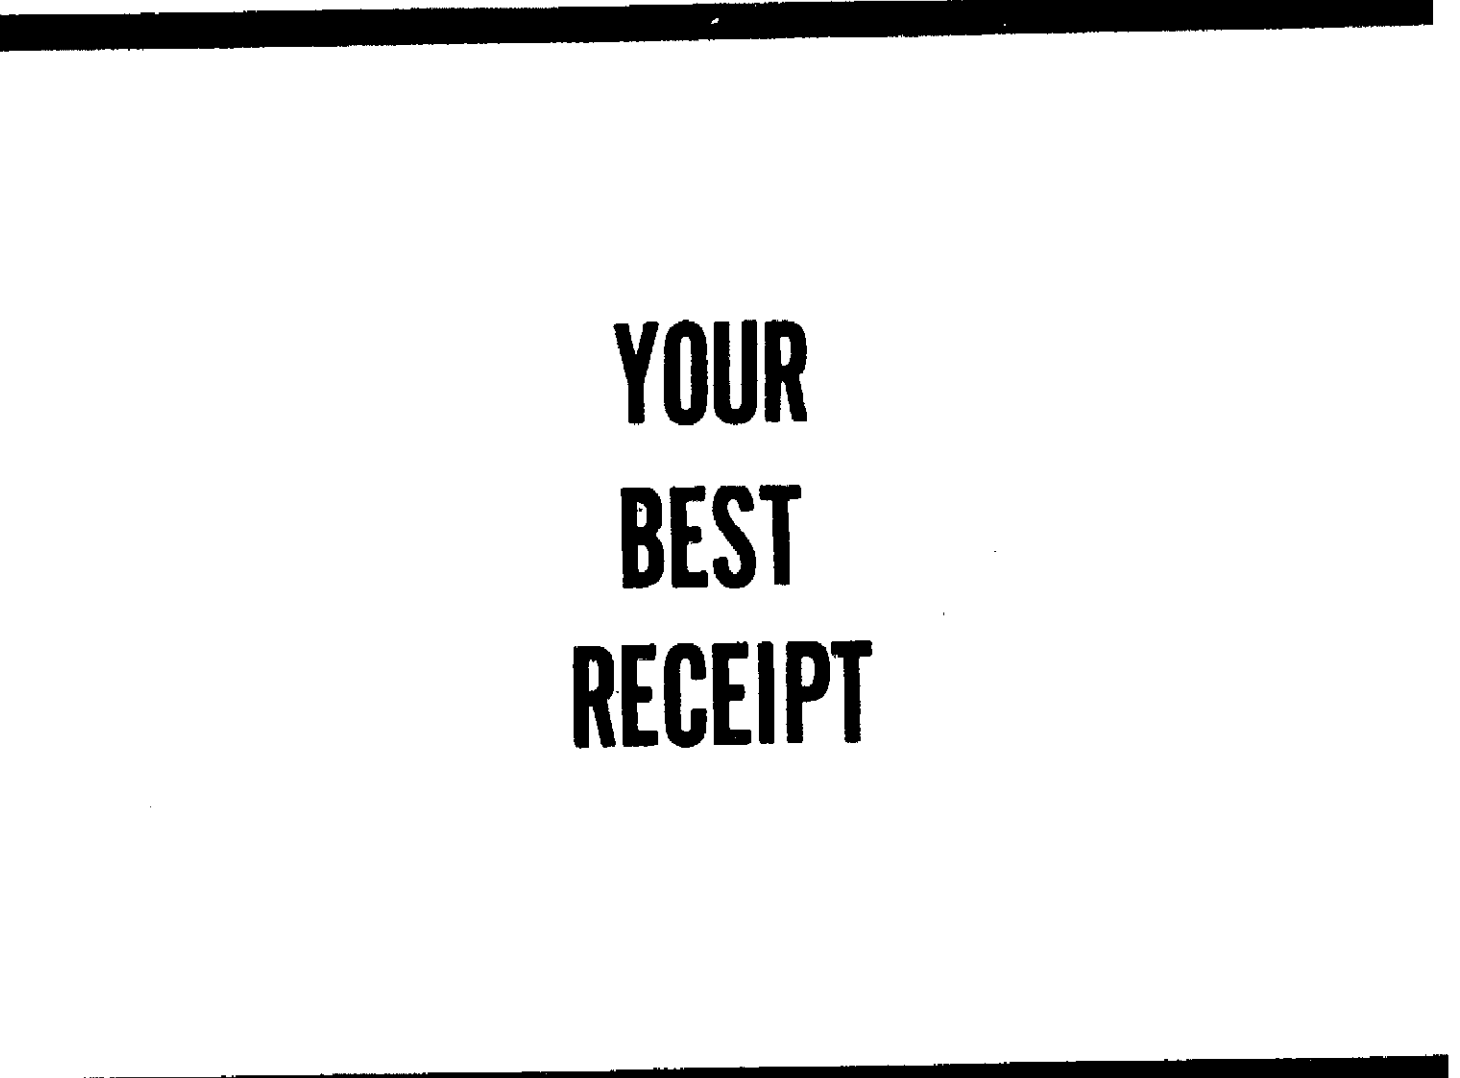

Several legislators have indicated that they are receiving communications from constituents about the issue of lake use control in a period of increasing competition for recreational water opportunities.

opportunities, and especially about the conflicting local ordinances covering boating and other activities in some of the districts of the state popular with tourists.

Another mandate of the committee is to review current problems in the general field of surface water conservation, which has caused more concern from specialists in the field in recent years.

The committee also will act, Alfonsi speculated, as a kind of observer of the enlarged land acquisition program upon which the state government is now embarked and will consider some of the problems in local property taxation resulting from the transfer of private lands to public use of Milwaukee, a union officer and other members of the assembly committee are Assemblyman McKay, where he was chairman of the of Ozaukee County, Shurburt of conservation committee of the Winnebago County, Janke of house.

Appleton Builds Fire Safety into Schools

BY VIRGIL SMITH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Appleton is the only city of comparable size in Wisconsin which has all of its schools, public and parochial, equipped with fire-resistant doors in stairwells, according to State Building Inspector Willard VanHandel.

VanHandel, soon to be classified by the state as a "building safety specialist," inspected fire safety devices in Appleton schools last week. He was accompanied by Capt. Robert Ertl and Photographer James Mauthe of the Appleton Fire Department.

Fire doors, VanHandel explained, are required in stairwells leading to the boiler-room area, usually in the basement. Specifications call for a 1 1/4 inch solid wood door capable of withstanding flames for a minimum of one hour.

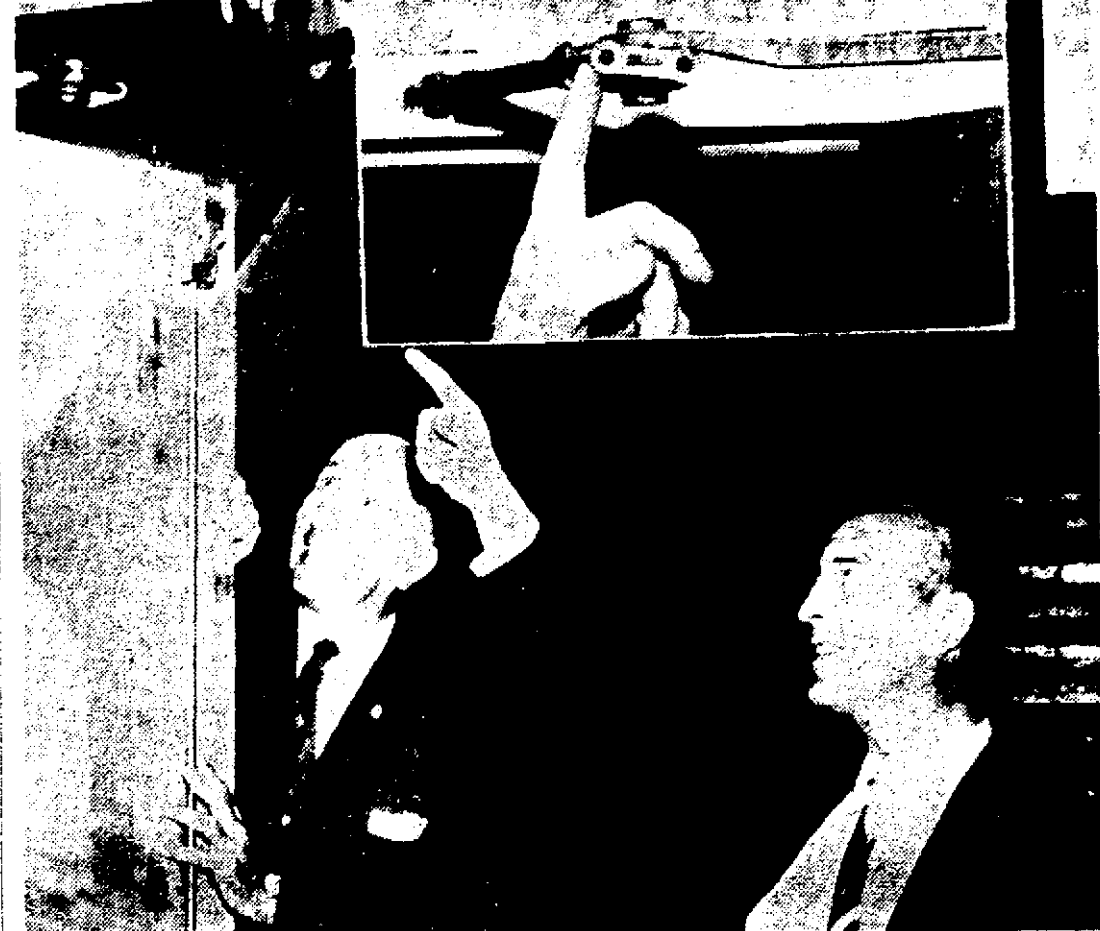

Entrances to all boiler-rooms must have similar doors, he added.

Automatic Closers

All of these doors must be closed at all times, according to state building safety regulations—except those which are equipped with automatic devices to close doors when a fire breaks out.

All closing mechanisms on the doors are activated by heat-sensitive valves which release the doors when the temperature rises above 140 degrees.

VanHandel lauded the Appleton

Fire Alarm Systems in Appleton schools are connected directly to the Fire Department. Appleton Fire Inspector Robert Ertl demonstrates one of the alarms for State Inspector VanHandel at Morgan School.

A fire department inspection agency in its drive to make both Capt. Ertl listed for the state team visits every school once in each quarter, Capt. Ertl said, and a state inspector visits each school once each year.

Other Measures

Other safety measures noted by VanHandel in his inspection of Morgan School at Harris and Oneida Streets, typical of the older school buildings in Appleton, were the fire extinguishers pointed out. Fire extinguishers for a summit meeting of eight on each floor . . . one for each were tested and hung on walls. The purpose of the meeting would be to strengthen regional solidarity in the western Pacific.

Recipients of Aids Wild West Idea Forms Viet Nam Defense Plan

By ROBERT EUNSON

TOKYO (AP) — The strategic hamlets of South Viet Nam are based on a military principle that won the American West: fortify a point and fight off marauders to gain time for final victory.

Yet the plan has run into difficulties in the long war against the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor took a long look at the program when they flew to Saigon to look for an answer to the multimillion-dollar riddle: "What is wrong with U.S. aid programs in Viet Nam?"

$360 Million

The United States is concerned because the U.S. aid mission, which spends about $360 million a year in Viet Nam, and the U.S. military assistance program, costing about $200 million annually, both are investing time, money and supplies in the strategic hamlet program.

The U.S. aid mission is headed by Joseph Brent. A ruddy-faced, amiable American Foreign Service representative, he has 13 years of experience heading missions to Thailand, Formosa, Morocco and South Viet Nam.

The professed father of the strategic-hamlet idea is Ngo Dinh Nhu, closest adviser of President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Hamlet Plan

Considered by high Vietnamese and U.S. officials at the foundation for a successful war against the guerrillas, the strategic-hamlet program was begun last year and is well under way.

The program calls for building 12,000 strategic hamlets, fortified and locally garrisoned. About 8,000 have been built, although not all these have finished the moats and barbed wire enclosures to keep out Viet Cong attackers and infiltrating guerrilla sympathizers.

U.S. military aid for the hamlets ranges from barbed wire through small arms down to flashlights and swabs for the weapons.

Hamlet Chief

The people in a hamlet select their own chief. Villages are organized, and each province has a province chief, selected by his peers.

Although the hamlet militia are not paid, they have been known to fight fiercely in defense of the hamlet in which they live.

Self-defense corps members are paid after eight weeks of training. It takes 12 weeks in Vietnamese boot camp to become a paid civil guard.

Fighting Men

Each hamlet of, say, 1,000 inhabitants usually has about a dozen men equipped to fight in-families have been protected from rats.

Nearly 7,000 baby pigs have been given to farms in six poorer provinces.

Enough chemical fertilizer has been given 200,000 farm families to increase their rice crop 25 per cent.

Better varieties of rice, corn, legumes, sweet potatoes and fruits are being distributed to each of the 8,000 hamlets now organized.

Loans totaling a billion piastres—$12.6 million—are being made to farmers in the hamlet program.

NEW YORK (AP)—The city's first poliomyelitis fatality since 1960 apparently contracted the disease on a visit to the Dominican Republic, health officials say.

Ancient Barn Walls Line New Gallery in Oshkosh

16-Artist Exhibition Opens Latest Art Showroom in Fox Cities Area

BY JAY JOSLYN
Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

OSHKOSH—The Collector's Gallery North will open today with a show of works by 16 painters that range from world-renown modern masters to a Fox Cities area primitive "discovered" by Mrs. William Brown, the proprietor of the gallery.

The gallery is located in a remodeled store just north of Irving Street on Main Street. The decor makes it something of a unique establishment in the Fox Cities area.

Mrs. Brown has lined the walls of her shop with the weathered walls and doors of an ancient barn. Incidental color is provided by pots of flame-red geraniums.

Antiques Also

Collector's Gallery North is more than an art gallery. It also includes an extensive framing service and the display of antiques.

However, the art collection show of works by 16 painters that highlights the gallery's opening event and Mrs. Brown has several other shows of state-wide interest scheduled for the months to come.

Seven works, perhaps, highlight this first show. They are three pieces from the Vincent Price collection and four works by Aaron Bohrod, artist-in-residence at the University of Wisconsin.

Price collection pieces are two works by Reginald Marsh and a painting by the modern Italian master Ossi.

strongly designed. The casein is quite a departure from the super-realistic style with which Bohrod has won his later fame. It is a scene of a dejected Negro man sitting on a curb in front of a dilapidated house in a run-down neighborhood.

Robert Von Neuman, the dean of Wisconsin printmakers, is represented with a beautifully balanced lithograph of fishermen. Glen Krause, a young printmaker gaining considerable favor in southwestern Wisconsin, has six of his whimsical bird prints in the show.

Works by Fox Cities area artists are also to be displayed including work by Mrs. Brown, who has had a career of teaching in Winneconne, Oshkosh, Appleton and Menasha.

Oshkosh Painters

Oshkosh painters in the show include Kenneth Shields, Maurice Brown—an Oshkosh State College

Paperweight Display Works of Wisconsin Glass Blower in Show

NEENAH—An exhibit of glass and from the Toledo Museum of Art for travel and research in the Bergstrom Art Center Saturday. Of special interest to visitors: schools in northern Europe and of the home of the famed Berg conducted seminars in glass. The collection is the fact that 20 of the 40 Littleton pieces on display are paperweights.

Littleton, associate professor of during the last year in the art and art education at the University of Wisconsin, has in the last 18 years achieved considerable fame as a potter. He has exhibited and won awards in numerous national and international exhibitions and is represented in some 20 museum collections.

He is a craftsman trustee of the American Craftsman's Council.

Education

He won his bachelor of design degree from the University of Michigan and his master of fine arts degree from Cranbrook Academy of Art, Bloomfield Hills, Mich. He also studied at Brighton School of Art in England and taught pottery at Ann Arbor's Potter's Guild and at the Toledo Museum of Art before joining the staff at the University of Wisconsin in 1951.

Littleton's interest in glass as an art form dates back to his youth in his home town of Cornish, N.Y., but he location of one of the nation's oldest and largest glass houses. It was only three years ago, however, that he actively began the research which has placed him in the position of the leading revivalist of creative glassblowing in the United States.

Imaginative, Small Producers Win Young, International Fans

BY JAMES AUER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The motion picture, for years the majority art of the American entertainment industry, is rapidly becoming the dominant international minority art.

Sellout houses at the New York Film Festival held at Carnegie Hall: the rise of an "underground" of low-budget, intellectually oriented film-makers throughout the United States; the

Two years later Erich von Stroheim moved his camera and crew out of the Metro-Goldwyn studio and into the streets of San Francisco for an epic dramatization of Frank Norris' realistic novel, "McTeague," later released in tragically emasculated form under the title, "Greed."

Passion for Accuracy

Von Stroheim, his passion for accuracy outstripping his sense of what the studio chiefs would bear, "commandeered" whole blocks of houses, even tearing out the walls to facilitate the photographing of interiors," as Arthur Knight tells it in "The Liveliest Art."

"For the finale, set in Death Valley, he took his principals, Gibson Gowland and Jean Hersholt, into the Valley itself, where they worked for days under the blazing sun. Hersholt has recalled the experience as the most grueling of his long career."

Yet under the archaic system of the 1920s and 30s, when most film studios owned the theaters, at which their "product" was shown, the creative growth of such personalities as Flaherty and Von Stroheim was smashed and stunted.

Artists Crushed

Flaherty, disillusioned by his experiences with the major studios, turned to industrial films for sponsorship of his documentary projects, and Von Stroheim, virtually blackballed because of his reputation for temperament and extravagance, eventually moved to Europe and earned his living as an actor.

Only with the U. S. government's "trust-busting" action, which split up the production-distribution-exhibition combines and fostered the creation of independent film-making organizations, with entree to the nation's theaters on an individual basis, did the full flowering of the film medium become a possibility.

Now the creative entrepreneur—whether he be an Otto Preminger, shooting "The Cardinal" on a lavish scale in Germany and the United States, or a Frank Perry, directing "David and Lisa" on a rock-bottom budget—can be reasonably assured of a distribution tieup and, if his picture clicks, a satisfactory financial return for the investors.

Success Secret

But success in any creative medium involves more than technology, markets, financing and the ultimate audience. All these are merely vehicles for the most important art of all—the art of seeing.

Great motion pictures have been made with slow film, inexperienced actors, low budgets, obsolete equipment. But no great film has ever been made by a director who, regardless of his technical resources, is imperceptive to the life around him, and who lacks an original, creative vision of what he wishes to put on the screen.

Underlying the creative growth of the motion picture as an art medium is the nature of the film itself—an infinitely flexible, infinitely adaptable vehicle for human expression. But ultimately that expression must depend, not on lenses, not on emulsions, not on directional microphones and "flea-weight cameras," but on the human being behind the camera.

Now that modern technology has been placed at the disposal of knowledgeable directors, with intelligent audiences waiting for intelligent films, there is every possibility that the next 50 years will be to the motion picture what the Elizabethan Age was to the English-speaking theater.

Most of the pieces in the Bergstrom exhibit have been produced during the last year in the concrete block shed on Littleton's farm near Verona.

There he taught art to six graduate students. The University of Wisconsin is the first school to include glass blowing as one of the fields in which credit is given toward the master of arts degree.

The pieces in the display have been on exhibit at the Art Institute in Chicago since June 15. The exhibit will continue at Bergstrom for about six weeks.

The current one-man show at the Bergstrom Center consists of the works of Robert Ekholm, art Mich. He also studied at Brighton School of Art in England and taught pottery at Ann Arbor's Potter's Guild and at the Toledo Museum of Art before joining the staff at the University of Wisconsin in 1951.

Littleton's interest in glass as an art form dates back to his youth in his home town of Cornish, N.Y., but he location of one of the nation's oldest and largest glass houses. It was only three years ago, however, that he actively began the research which has placed him in the position of the leading revivalist of creative glassblowing in the United States.

A year ago he received grants from the University of Wisconsin rapid increase of college and university film courses and retrospective series (see separate stories on this page)—all these indicators, and more, point up the burgeoning cultural importance of the film as a medium of artistic expression.

"The new generation of moviegoers," Time declared in a recent survey of the international film scene, "believes that an educated man must be cinemate as well as literate."

And Variety, that engagingly raucous "Bible" of show business, put it another way:

Phenomenal Profit

"The phenomenal profit patterns being set by the shoe-string, budgeted 'Balcony' and 'David and Lisa'—that is, net earnings in relation to initial production investments—are seen by many industry observers as being among the most significant developments on the film scene this year."

"The success of the two pictures as well as at the box office, reportedly has loosened the purse-strings of both private investors and major company backers. As a result, a whole raft of 'quality' low and medium-budgeted indie pictures are in the offing."

What has beought about this upsurge in independent 'quality' film production throughout the world?

Why, in the first half of the 1960s, have directors of the stature of Sweden's Ingmar Bergman, Japan's Akira Kurosawa, Poland's Roman Polanski, Italy's Federico Fellini, France's Alain Resnais, Britain's Tony Richardson and America's Frank Perry, emerged, largely outside the "power structure" of the established film industry, to find a mature (yet youthful) audience awaiting their mature (yet youthful) art?

Interested Audience

The answer would seem to be that both revolution and evolution have played a part in the growth of the motion picture as a minority art, produced on "shoe-string" budgets and supported by an audience that is apparently as interested in making films as in viewing them.

Revolutionary is the word to describe the technical developments which have made possible "candid" motion picture photography and improvisational techniques of direction and acting. Evolutionary are the modes of seeing, of storytelling, of exploring the human condition and sensibility, that characterize the best of the new films.

The film historian knows, for instance, that carrying a motion picture camera into a city street or into a middle-class living room to film a scene is a device that has been available to directors almost since the invention of sensitive film.

In 1922 Robert Flaherty carried

Bergstrom Sets Art Film Series

American, British, French Movies Start At Brin Next Sunday

NEENAH — The third Friends of Bergstrom art film series has been announced and the first of three films will be shown next Sunday evening.

The art film series has been used by the auxiliary organization of the Bergstrom Art Center to raise money for a national, invitation, juried art show to be held at the Bergstrom Center in the future.

This year's art films will be shown at the recently refurbished Brin Theater in Menasha on the second Sunday, Monday and art faculty member—Mrs. Katherine Heintz and Mrs. Sally Witzke. Sue Westlund of Neenah will be represented by several moody watercolors.

Golden Age painters will be represented by octogenarian Mrs. Emma Comstock, formerly of Neenah, and Miss Emily Groom, 90, of Milwaukee, one of Mrs. Brown's teachers.

Mrs. Brown's "discovery" is Alois Marshalek, whose primitives will have their first public showing today.

A Grand Rapids, Mich., artist is likely to steal the limelight of the show not only for the excellence of his drawings and watercolors but also because of his technique. Warren Van Ness is a paraplegic paralytic polio victim who renders his works by holding his brush or pen in his mouth.

Valley Potters To Show Wares

Milwaukee Artist, Mel Kishner, Hangs One-Man Show

The second public exhibit of Appleton's new art center, the Reneita Galleries, opens today with a ceramic and potter display by Fox Cities area artists. Complementing the display is an exhibit of oil and casein paintings by the well known Wisconsin artist, Mel Kishner of Milwaukee.

The Fox Valley potters are members of the Clay Art Guild. They have been meeting for several years to improve their techniques and further their knowledge of clays, glazes and other materials used in ceramics. They also study and work on new forms, shapes and colors as demonstrated in the interesting exhibit.

Their work ranges from glazed and ceramic knickknacks to more utilitarian bowls and vases. The articles on display show they have mastered the ancient art and adapted modern techniques to it.

Appleton Potters

The Guild includes nine Appleton potters, eight of them husband and wife teams. They are Lilian Embrey, Al and Dore Bennett, Ted and Vivian Heintz, Everett and Marion Stecker, Franz and Marty Vaurio. Others include Oscar and Ruth Adler of DePere and Roger and Marguerite Russell of Menasha.

It stars Keir Dullea and Janet Margolin in a story of two emotionally disturbed adolescents finding peace of mind through love. The film will run Oct. 13 through 15.

The Nov. 10 through 12 offering is the Margaret Rutherford laugh vehicle "Mouse on the Moon," a British spoof of space travel.

The Academy Award winning best foreign film of 1962, "Sundays and Cybele," is the offering Dec. 8 through 10. The French film tells the story of a wounded and disturbed pilot who attempts to find peace through the love of an abandoned wife.

Oshkosh High School To Stage Music Man

Production Scheduled for Thursday, Friday,
Saturday at City's New Civic Auditorium

BY JUDY RUSSELL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — The countdown has begun and all systems are go for Oshkosh High School's production of "The Music Man" which will be presented Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the new civic auditorium.

The show, presented by the high school's A Cappella Choir, under the direction of Frederick Leist, will open with a twilight matinee at 7 p. m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday's performances will begin at 8 p. m. A dress rehearsal showing for students is planned for 9:30 a. m. Wednesday.

Producer-director Leist stated that opening night is almost sold out and tickets are moving fast for both the Friday and Saturday performances. He termed rehearsals excellent and said that programs given at two Kiwanis Club luncheons during the past week were well received.

Double Cast Used

A double cast is being used to give more students the opportunity to perform. Since the school's production of Brigadoon in 1954 double casts have been employed. The only exception was last year when three completely different casts and choruses presented Flower Drum Song. Other "double cast" productions were "Rose Marie" in 1955, "Carousel" in 1956, "Oklahoma" in 1957, "La Traviata" and "The Vagabond King" in 1958, "The King and I" in 1959, "Show Boat" in 1960 and "Son of Norway" in 1961. The Music Man is the school's 20th production in 17 years.

Theatre-in-the-Round

The last four productions of the choir were given in the theatre-in-the-round. The Oshkosh group was among the first high school groups in the country to do musicals in this medium.

This is the school's first production in the new auditorium. Earlier shows were given in the old recreational gymnasium and later at Webster Stanley School auditorium.

Co-starring in the feminine lead of Marian Paroo, the River City librarian, will be Susan Leist, Rhoda Laabs and Susan Miller, for the Thursday, Friday and Saturday shows, respectively. Professor Harold Hill will be portrayed by Jack Kuester and Roy Lewis. Scene stealers in the role of Winthrop, the lispng younger brother of Marian, are Richard and Steven Verhoeven, sons of the show's choreographer, Richard Verhoeven. Richard is nine years old and Steven is 11. "Normally, we use smaller high school students for children's roles but Mrs. Verhoeven asked if the boys could try out for the show. They were so good we decided to put them in the cast." Leist declared. The boys sing "Gary, Indiana" and dance in the show. The boys did so well we added an extra bit of the song and dance, the director stated. (see page D-8 for a color picture of the two Winthrops).

Stage Props

The stage props were designed by Thomas Evans, a teacher at the school although the art classes painted the sets. The library set is a particularly authentic-looking piece, complete with its volumes.

Members of the sets and design committee are Ruth Doner, Roxanne Fulmer, Jean Koffman, Sandra Schmedt, Betty Scott and Jo Ann Short.

Stage crew members are Dave Elbing, Kurt Fiebig, Tim Gunn and Gordon Hefeman. Steve Mosling and Larry Smerling. On the properties committee are Ellen Becker, Nancy Bugin, Gaye Richman and Terri Tanave.

Make-up committee members are Carol Allen, Marcia Bocher, Jo Ellen Dorsey, Jackie Goerlitz, Gloria Jensen, Pamela McAllister, Cheryl Rasmussen, Bonnie Schlaak, Joy Weber and Sue Zingler. Costumes are being handled by Phyllis Furber, Sally Flack, Eleanor Lueck, Sue Spiczewski, Janice Stromme, Bonnie Wagner, Sue Wahlgren and Sharon Wischow.

34-Piece Orchestra

Tickets for "The Music Man" can be obtained from choir members or at Heid's and Wilson's music stores.

OSHKOSH — Scoring from seven yards out on the opening play of the second quarter and returning a punt 40 yards in the third quarter gave the Knights of Lourdes High a homecoming victory over Abbot Pennings of De Pere, 14 to 7. The Squires scored their only touchdown on a 7-yard off-tackle smash with few minutes left in the final period. The invading Squires also moved the ball up to the 4-yard line in the closing minute of the third frame but came about an inch shy of a first down. The Knights dominated the first quarter, allowing Pennings only the opportunity to kick off and to run one play which they fumbled. Lourdes recovering on the 8-yard line to set up its first touchdown. Lourdes that quarter moved the ball from its own 18 to the Pennings 6 when it lost the ball on downs, a yard short of a first down. Jerry Weiland, Pennings quarterback fumbled and Lourdes took over on the 9. A pass from Tim Purtell to halfback Tom Baum for seven yards opened the second quarter with a Lourdes touchdown. Tackle Chuck Grable converted. Pennings lost the ball on another fumble when Grable recovered on the 39 to halt a 43-yard advance by the Knights. Lourdes got the ball up to the Pennings 36 when Steve Madison intercepted a Purtell pass to give the ball to the Squires. Pennings got off only four plays when the half ended.

Dodgers Win Third in Row From Yankees

Tresh and Bouton two times each and also got Boyer on a third strike. Besides Mantle's bunt single in the second, the only Yankee hits were singles by Tony Kubek in the sixth and eighth innings. Bouton, a sturdy young man who graduated from the Yankee bullpen in May, had trouble with better fate. The Dodgers got only his control. But he deserved a four hits off him in his seven-inning string and all four were singles. All in all, this third game had few exciting moments except for the tried and true Dodger fans who tooted away with their trumpets and yelled "charge" when the occasion presented itself.

Schrage Draws Praise

OHS' Strasser Makes Believers Out of Ships

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH — Fullback Myles Strasser made believers out of Manitowoc Friday night. "We knew he was good," Ship Coach John Heineke commented, "but we didn't realize he was that fast."

The senior star bull dozed for 135 yards on 31 carries, most of them through the middle of the Manitowoc line. One of his major assets is his quick starting. Oshkosh Mentor Harold Schumert said Strasser runs the 40-yard dash in 5 seconds—faster than most halfbacks. Heineke said they had set a special defense for Strasser, assigning a floating line backer to cover the fullback. He ruefully admitted the plan hadn't worked.

Credit must also be given to the Indians' line which was opening up holes for the fullback. All three of Strasser's touchdowns were scored over the left side of the line where Bill Fries, Pete Ziebell, Jack Mc Carthy and Jerry Kirkpatrick were operating. Schumert also revealed that center Steve Scheuerman, one of the steadiest performers all year for the Indians, almost missed the important tilt. While working on homecoming decorations Thursday night, Scheuerman sliced off the end of a finger in a paper cutter. He played the entire game on offense, however.

Pat Schrage, a 190-pound junior tackle, drew praise from Schumert for his play at defensive end. He refuses to be blocked out, the veteran coach said. Manitowoc was threatening to tie the score in the closing seconds of play and had second down on the Oshkosh 18. Schrage broke through and dumped halfback through the uprights from 21 yards out. Myers collected most of his aerial yardage in the last quarter, hitting on 17 for 32 and 218 yards for the entire game. His tosses to Steve Murphy and Chuck Logan shot the Wildcats on a 48-yard thrust, but finally, he started missing and Stamison's 37-yard field goal try was wide. For 51 Yards Still in the last quarter, Mike Taliaferro's pass to Fearn was good for 51 yards, but Grabowski fumbled on the next play and Northwestern's Bill Swingle recovered on the Wildcat 14. The "Cats moved 51 yards behind Myers' pitching, only to be shoved back by Illini chargers: Dick Butkus, Don Hansen and 250-pound Archie Sutton, and were forced to punt. Myers again whipped up a threatening aerial attack in the fading minutes. Mike Dundy ended it with an interception on the Illini 16. Northwestern was tossed for a loss of 57 yards rushing and had a net of 89, compared with Illinois' 121. But the Wildcats picked up 218 in the air against 127 for Illinois and ran off 79 plays compared with 54 for the Illini. Burman was Myers' main target, taking 6 tosses for 92 yards. On the ground, the top Wildcat gainers were Jim Mc Cauley with 54 yards in 13 trips and Willie Stinson with 42 in 17. Al Wheatland, with 49 yards in 8 rushes, and Custardo with 25 in 6, headed Illinois' running. Taliaferro hit 4 of 8 for 77 yards and Custardo 2 of 7 for 18.

Eau Claire State Beats Stubborn Titans, 19 to 13

Stays Unbeaten in WSCC With Rally; Dick Emerich Scores

EAU CLAIRE—Eau Claire re-edged in first downs. The winners mained unbeaten in the State College Conference Saturday night. Oshkosh connected on 11 of 25, but they had to fight off a stubborn Oshkosh team before taking a 19-13 decision. Eau Claire is now 3-0, just a half game behind Stevens Point. Oshkosh has lost three and tied one. Oshkosh took the lead in the first quarter when Jim Jaeger's 3-yard plunge climaxed a short drive. Paul Hansen kicked the extra point which gave the visitors a 7-0 lead. Eau Claire bounded back quickly. They scored in the first period on a 21 yard pass from Jim VanGordon to Bob Ganka, but missed the extra point. The touchdown which put Eau Claire ahead to stay was set up when Appleton's Dave LaViolette returned a punt 27 yards. The score was finally made by Larry Drott on a 21-yard pass from VanGordon. Jim Trotzer kicked the extra point and the hosts led at halftime, 13-7. Eau Claire's final touchdown came in the third period on a one yard run by Ray Cheyke. The extra point attempt was blocked. The Titans scored their final touchdown in the fourth period when New London's Dick Emerich caught a 19-yard aerial from Jaeger. The kick failed. Appleton's Jerry Gendron was a busy end for Eau Claire. He caught six passes for 71 yards. Eau Claire gained 338 yards to 218 for Oshkosh and had a 19-11

Sorority Rush—Awesome Experience

OSHKOSH — Choosing a sorority to pledge is a big, and sometimes difficult, decision for fledgling college freshman or even for the more experienced upperclassmen. Coeds at Wisconsin State College here have had from the beginning of the fall term through Friday to decide which sorority best fitted their needs. Friday, the girls who are rushing and who attended the Round Robin and Informal Teas turned in their preference cards. A series of 12 informal teas began on Sept. 18. All six sororities — Alpha Phi, Gamma Sigma, Kappa Gamma, Lambda Chi and Phoenix — sponsored the get-togethers. Lambda Chi members held the final tea Thursday evening in the English Room of the Athearn Hotel. Many of the teas were costume and appreciation and Lambda Chi to promote interest and appreciation of music. Kappa Gamma sponsors the play contest and Lambda Chi sponsors Campus Carnival.

Phoenix, the oldest sorority on campus, was organized in 1874. It promotes literary work and music and stresses high social and scholastic ideals. Every year it presents a traveling scholarship trophy to the society whose members have the highest grade point average. It opened the first sorority house on campus.

20th Century Club To Mark 67th Year

Nuns to be Feted by Serra Club

OSHKOSH — Nuns from six different orders in Oshkosh will be feted at the annual Serra Club banquet for the religious at 6 p.m. Thursday at the Columbus Club.

Approximately 65 nuns, primarily those of the teaching profession, will attend. Sisters from Mercy Hospital and Marian Home of Oshkosh have also been invited.

The Rev. Alfred Lison, spiritual director at Xavier High School, Appleton, will be the principal speaker.

The first banquet of this type was started seven years ago to acquaint the Serrans with the nuns so that they might work together. Besides helping the Serra Club members, the banquet also serves as a "recognition of the work that the nuns do."

The special events committee is in charge of the dinner. Committee chairman is Dr. Frederick Kronzer. Members are Edward Kitz, William Mertz, Dr. James Meli and Dr. Raymond Klaeser.

OSHKOSH — Fire drills, evacuations, and the House of Hazards safety program will highlight Fire Prevention Week this week according to Chief Otto Stoegebauer.

Judge Sitter Aids Defendant

Prepares Information For Those Who Are Arraigned in Court

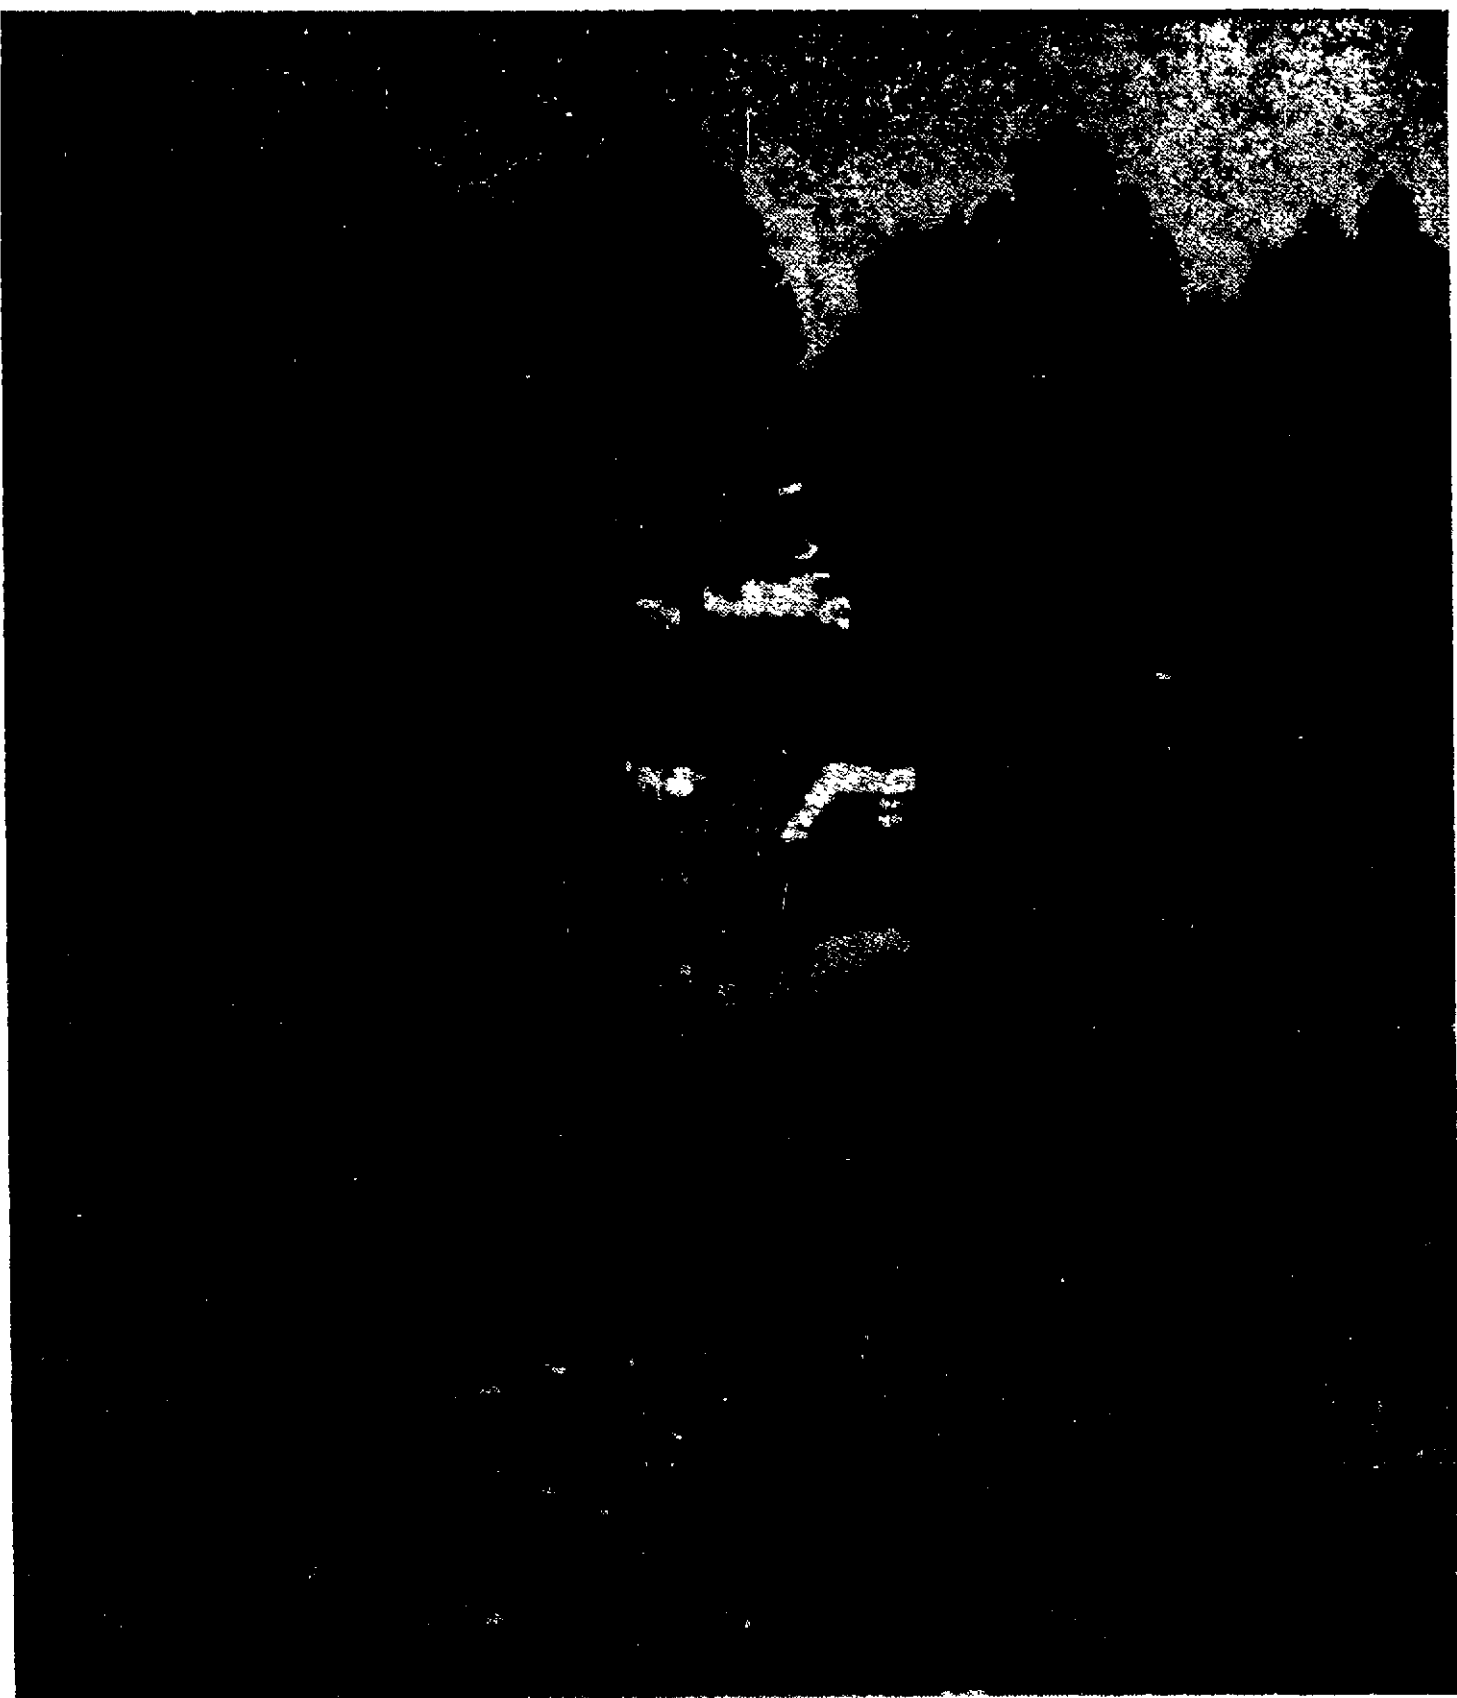

OSHKOSH — Courtroom appearances often are terrifying to the uninitiated.

It is with this thought in mind that County Judge James V. Sitter has had prepared a sheet of information given persons who have been arrested and are brought before his court on traffic matters.

The sheet tells the person what to do when his name is called. Judge Sitter takes the person through the various steps such as the reading of the charge and then the question by the judge about whether the defendant knows exactly what he is being charged.

He explains the three types of pleas, such as guilty, not guilty or no contest, which the defendant can make to the charge.

Judge Sitter explains in his information sheet about the point system and includes a schedule of the various violations, pointing out that the law requires him to explain to the defendant how many points are involved in the charge and how many points are required before the driver's license can be revoked by the state.

Oshkosh Young Lady Gives Much Of Her Time to Palsy Victims

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH—If a way could be found to increase the length of a day, Judy Britton would immediately start looking for things to do to occupy the extra time.

And, as likely as not, it would be something to help others.

This girl of boundless energy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Britton, 437 Linde St., has devoted much of her free time to helping others, particularly cerebral palsy victims, and at the same time, thoroughly enjoys herself.

Her range of activities has gone from winning tennis tournaments to winning a Young American Award for community service to producing a junior theater musical to being selected for a first chair of America honor for her clarinet playing in the Oshkosh High School concert band.

Now a sophomore at Oshkosh State College majoring in sociology, Judy, who is 20, is in her fifth year of volunteer work with cerebral palsy victims and is chairman of the friendship circle.

A cerebral palsy young peoples group sponsored by United Cerebral Palsy of WinnebagoLand. As chairman to the group, Judy plans the program and activities for Friendship Circle's semi-monthly meetings. One program she didn't plan, however, was last Tuesday night's event in which she was a "this is your life" victim.

Members of the club, in appreciation of Judy's help, made up a scrapbook, with aid of Mrs. Britton, of Judy's brief, but hectic life thus far from mementoes and clippings of her activities, dating from grade school days. The scrapbook was quite thick for covering such a short span.

Most Treasured Award
Among the events covered in the book is her most treasured award, the governor's Young American Award for community service presented to Judy for her work in cerebral palsy. She also won an Oshkosh Community Council award in 1961 for this work.

Her start in cerebral palsy work came about quite by accident. While a sophomore at Oshkosh High School, Judy had to write a paper for a physiology class. Seeking a subject, she suddenly remembered a neighbor who had cerebral palsy and her interest was born.

Clarence Stern, then physical therapist at the Mercy Hospital rehabilitation center, invited Judy to observe the physical therapy program and day school for cerebral palsy victims and also the friendship circle. During high school days she did this during her lunch hour.

The previous summer she had worked at a playground conducted at Webster Staley Junior High School for deaf and hard of hearing children.

Just to prove her versatility, Judy combined to win the Oshkosh girls 15 and under tennis championship.

The board of education budget has not yet been submitted and the city's share of the county tax will not be known until after the county board adopts its budget. Less Than '62 Rate

Gartman said anticipated revenues from sources other than the tax levy would amount to $2,527,180. He said the city's portion of shared taxes probably would be less than last year.

Two of the big items in the proposed budget are personnel services and capital outlay. Salaries and fringe benefits to employees are expected to increase about $54,000. Most of this, Gartman said, is the result of normal wage increases under the pay plan and in four additional policemen which are being requested.

Expected capital outlay for all departments is up about $145,000 over the 1963 budget. Major items are $50,000 for trucks for the Jewelry in bronze designed and cast by Michael Brandt, chairman of the Oshkosh State College Art Department, is being shown in a fall exhibition at the Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York City, and is entitled Creative Casting.

Brandt taught at Lawrence College in 1962.

Professor Brandt was invited to exhibit several pieces of his work as representative of new work in metal by Americans. The show was conceived in order to focus attention on the current interest in the direct use of the casting process itself as a means of expression.

Acting Director of the museum, Paul J. Smith, reports that an extraordinary amount of original work is being done by artists themselves, creatively experimenting with every phase of the casting process. The show has attracted national attention reflecting a widespread excitement with the discovery of the potential inherent in the lost-wax, sand, and styrofoam casting.

Professor Brandt's work attracted attention earlier this year in New York, when several of his bronze cast pins won an award at the jewelry International Show of 1963.

Instructor at OSC To Attend Course on Processing Machines

Dr. Gordon Drake, associate dean of instruction and director of institutional research at Oshkosh State College, will attend a five-day course on data processing machines at Milwaukee next week.

The course relates to the electronic data system to be installed at Oshkosh State soon.

Offered in cooperation with the Milwaukee Public School system, the course covers machine systems, their operation and class scheduling by computers. It is designed for management personnel.

OSHKOSH — The role of Winnebago county in fairgrounds operations and in the care of its senior citizens, mainly those needing extensive medical care, will be considered by the County Board at a budget session which begins Oct. 22.

Included in the proposed budget, scheduled for a public hearing on Oct. 23 are $145,000 for the construction of an exposition building at the fairgrounds and the purchase of additional land and $100,000 toward the start of construction of a new maximum care home for the aging.

These items are part of the $357,035 outlay section of the proposed Winnebago county budget. The $5,765,804 proposed budget is merely a tabulation of the requests by various county board committees and county departments and has not received official approval.

The fairgrounds request, submitted by the County Fair, Park and Conservation Committee, is for $105,000 for a new year round exposition building and $40,000 for purchase of land adjacent to the northeast corner of the fairgrounds.

The building requested would be 110 by 160 feet in size and would include plumbing and heating. It would take the place of the produce building damaged by heavy snow in 1962.

Steel Construction
The building requested would be of steel frame and siding and would be used for conventions, programs, trade and home shows and similar events as well as for the fair.

A suggestion that the fairgrounds be relocated has been under discussion in recent months. City of Oshkosh officials have indicated that if the fair is to be relocated the city would like to acquire the fairgrounds for park and recreation purposes and for possible expansion of residential and commercial districts.

City officials also have proposed that a year round building such as the type proposed would be advantageous to the city.

The Winnebago County Fair Association, which holds the fairgrounds lease from the county, has stated that it would like to have a chance to purchase the site if the fairgrounds is to be relocated.

The request for the $145,000 if approved by the county board for inclusion in the 1964 budget, would commit the county to continuation of the fair at its present site.

Newer Trends
Trustees of the Winnebago County Hospital and Pleasant Acres home and the County Board's Institutions Committee are recommending replacement of the present Pleasant Acres home with a new facility designed in keeping with the newer trends for maximum care patients.

The present home is an old building remodeled several years ago at a cost of about $75,000. It does not provide for the easy

Oshkosh Man Has Been Swinging 'Headache Ball' for 17½ Years

Demolitionist Victor Lundt's Only Injury Was 'Belt in Chin' by Brick

Working with the "headache ball" for the past 17½ years has produced very few headaches for Victor Lundt, 43, of Oshkosh.

But it did produce one good belt in the chin for Lundt who is the operator of the 22-ton crane doing the lion's share of razing the old building in downtown Appleton. That happened on the AAL building job.

Most of the "sidewalk superintendents" watching Lundt swing the 3,600 pound steel "headache ball" into the building comment-

matter of practice," he said, "the steadier the ball gets, the more accurately I can hit my target. You must learn the principles like in any other job."

"It's a little touch and go at times, but I haven't had any bad bleaks. I've never tipped the crane over or anything like that. The only problems I've had with this building (the old AAL structure) is that I've been working in rather cramped quarters."

One thing has amused Lundt while doing his wrecking work in Appleton—spectators.

Can't Get Close
"They always seem to be deep in discussion as they watch me, and I wish I could hear what they say. I know a lot of people would like to give me advice, but they can't get close enough to me."

Lundt's "headache ball" has been the ruin of many well-known buildings in Appleton and throughout Wisconsin.

Some of them have been hotels like the Beaumont in Green Bay, the Park in Madison and the Foeste in Sheboygan. Others have been the old Dane, Wood and Portage county courthouses.

In Appleton the steel ball has crashed into the Appleton Hotel, Columbia Hall, the Greyhound Bus Station, and the old Sherry Motors building on College Avenue where the J. C. Penney Co. now is located.

One of the Biggest
Lundt says the AAL building ranks with the Beaumont, Park and Foeste hotels as one of the biggest buildings he has helped raze.

Times have been good for Lundt, who lives at 2090 Point Comfort in Oshkosh. The Madison, Moving and Wrecking Co., his employer, has had a steady stream of buildings to demolish for the past 2½ years.

No sooner does one building get torn down, when the razing crews move on to another.

Perhaps that's a good indicator of progress, Lundt concludes.

Club. While she still plays tennis occasionally, she no longer competes in tournaments.

Interests Varied

While her avocation is working in cerebral palsy, Judy's interests have been many and varied since grade school day.

Her musical interests date back to clarinet lessons while at Longfellow Elementary School and progressed through three years of band and orchestra at Webster Stanley Junior High and three years in the concert band and orchestra at Oshkosh High.

Expanded on her interests. Judy was active on the student paper at Longfellow and then editor of the paper at Webster Stanley and worked on the Oshkosh High School yearbook.

Spare Time Activities

Spare time activities found Judy active in the Science Club, chorus and Badger History Club at Webster Stanley and in Drama Club, Junior Red Cross and American Legion Junior Auxiliary (including a term as president) at the high school.

Outside of school, one of her main interests has been in the Job's Daughters organization. She has been a member since junior high school days, served one year as an officer and sang in the choir for more than three years.

Not neglecting the more glamorous aspects, Judy was voted Valentine Queen at Webster Stanley Junior High and Queen of the State American Legion Convention which was held in Oshkosh in 1962.

Interested in Theater

The theater also has held her interests, but not from the acting standpoint. A veteran of behind-the-scenes activities of Junior Theater, Judy was executive producer of last summer's musical, "Annie Get Your Gun" and, in December, will take over as treasurer of Junior Theater.

For some unexplained reason, Judy said she has not had time to get involved in too many things at college besides the band. But if she should happen to get 15 minutes of free time you can bet she will find something useful to do.

Name Oshkosh Native New U. S. District Judge in Illinois

Abraham Lincoln Marovitz Takes Oath at Ceremonies in Chicago

CHICAGO — Moving day for Chicago attorney, Albert S. Austrian, counsel for the Democratic Party, who watched him fight one Lincoln from the Cook County night.

Courthouse to the federal court building took place last week. His advice to his young employee was to study law instead. He backed up that advice by during his 1932 visit, taking pictures of the federal court building.

Reason for the moving was that Abraham Lincoln Marovitz, born near the corner of Irving Avenue and N. Main Street in Oshkosh Aug. 10, 1905, was sworn in Tuesday afternoon as the newest judge for the U. S. District Court for Northern Illinois. He had been since 1950 judge of the Superior Court of Cook County.

Present for the swearing-in ceremony were Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois, Mayor Daley, Msgr. Kennedy of Chicago and the Rev. Preston Bradley of People's Church, both long-time friends of the new federal judge, the chief justice of the Illinois Supreme Court, Democratic leader Jake Arvey, and some 1,400 others, including Mr. and Mrs. Simon Horowitz, Oshkosh, also long-time friends.

Parents Move

The new federal judge's parents moved here after their marriage. He was one of five children born here. The family moved to Chicago — there was more opportunity for the family there, the mother thought — when Judge Marovitz was five years old. His father was a tailor who came here from Lithuania and his mother, who later operated a candy store, came from Russia.

Judge Marovitz received his first name in the Jewish tradition of using Old Testament names and the second name after the president, since his mother thought that name could be an inspiration. The combined names inspired him to begin his collection of Lincolniana when he was 16 years old. He is board chairman of the Lincoln National Bank at Chicago.

His entrance into the law field resulted from an unimpressive showing as a young boxer. He was office boy for a prominent

Car Makers Offer Luxury Features In Newly-Introduced 1964 Models

DETROIT (AP) — Practically all the 1964 cars are in dealer showrooms now and the auto industry is awaiting first sales reports to see how the customers react to them.

In general, the industry appears convinced the average buyer no longer wants a stripped down car, but rather wants to outfit it with all the extra things he can afford.

Practically all the new autos are longer overall than their 1963 predecessors and the number of models, colors, power plants and transmission options have been increased.

The overall basic car prices are running about the same as 1963, but the average buyer probably will run the price up pretty well by the time he gets through adding options.

American Motors was the last of the major companies to hold a press preview of its 1964 models and even AMC—original advocate and chief exponent of the compact car theory—has lengthened the overall car. The Rambler American, for example, was upped four inches—to 177.

Luxury Features

AMC's explanation echoed that of other auto companies . . . that it had "to meet a growing demand for personal transportation with more convenience and luxury features."

That was evidenced too at General Motors where the wheelbase of the Olds F 85, Pontiac Tempest and Buick Special were upped three inches to 115. The Chevelle, Chevrolet's new line, will have a similar wheelbase.

The industry, whose sale of compact cars last year ran to better than one out of three cars, appeared to be striving this year for compact cars that did not look so compact.

As Studebaker said of its new line, "the cars have lost all traces of the 'compact' appearance they once had and for 1964 are almost six inches longer than 1963.

Illustrating the wide choice available to buyers is the 1964 Chevrolet line which includes 43 models in five series—standard size Chevrolet, Chevelle, Chevy II, Corvair and Corvette. This compares with 33 models in four lines last year.

Chevrolet has seven engine options, ranging from a 140 horsepower six to a 425 horsepower turbine fire V8.

Said Chevrolet, "The options and custom feature accessories represent the most complete range in Chevrolet history, permitting a 1964 Chevrolet to be virtually custom-built to personal tastes or specific requirements."

Ford echoed the remarks as it pointed out that customers are becoming more and more individualized in their selections. For example, 5 per cent of Ford customers last year paid $188 extra for a floor mounted shift; 10 per cent paid from $232 to $415 for air conditioners and 70 per cent paid from $50 to $500 for V-8 engine options.

Heavier Cars

Ford Division of Ford Motor Co. offers 44 models in its 1964 Ford, Fairline, Falcon and Thunderbird lines. Their general styling reflects longer hoods, considerable new sheet metal and heavier, quieter cars.

Chrysler has 55 models in its Chrysler, Plymouth, Valiant and Imperial with seven different style bodies on four separate wheelbase lengths.

All the way through the auto press previews, various officials stressed the personalized car and the things they were offering in 1964 to meet the market. They ranged from sporty cars with four-on-the floor shifts to an ever increasing variety of colors.

Seat belts will be installed on all 1964 cars, with the customer picking up the tab. One of the most unusual additions this year is a reminder light in the Thunderbird. . . . It lights up when the ignition key is turned on and keeps flashing to remind the driver to put his seat belt on.

As one GM official put it, "never has the variety of cars been greater, whether a customer wants luxury or austerity."

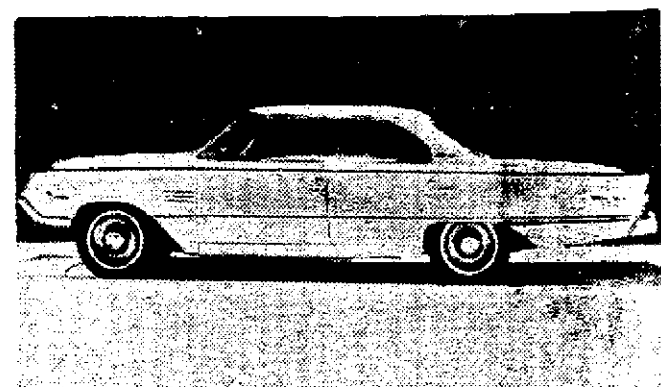

At GM, he said, some 146 body styles are offered in 1964 models compared with 75 just five years ago.

"When you take into account the 802 different interior trims at GM, the multiple choices of engines and transmissions and all the other optional equipment, we could go through a model year without making any two cars exactly alike."

It's virtually impossible to sum up in one story all the changes in the 1964 models, but it's a pretty safe bet that the overall length of your 1964 car will be a bit longer, that there will be much more use of such options as bucket seats, air conditioning and peppy engines. From there, it's up to you, your pocketbook and your car salesman.

Fun, Skill Blended in Sports Car Rally

The night owl rally of the Fox Valley Sports Car Club had 16 autos entered. Pictured in a Triumph TR3 is driver Walter Angell, Neenah, a trophy winner, checking the course with acting navigator Tom Falk, Appleton. (All Photos by Virginia Schmidt)

Officiating finisher of the night rally was Wayne Philipsen, Little Chute. He is pictured checking the time with Lee Schmaltz, navigator, and Joanne Haene, driver, both of Kaukauna, as they arrive at Fremont.

Trophies presented at the rally were displayed on a Porsche. Pictured viewing them are Jim Garrits, left, Kaukauna; Joanne Haene, Kaukauna; Bette Peterson, Menasha; and Les Behm, Appleton. Behm was awarded first place trophy after the results were tabulated later that night.

'Night Owl' Event Held By Fox Valley Enthusiasts

All of the night owls in the Fox River Valley don't roost in trees. Some of them own sports cars, and drive them in the daytime and "night owl" rallies sponsored by the Fox Valley Sports Car Club.

One such night rally—with sports cars following a timed and measured course leading from Winchester to Fremont—was held by the club Sept. 30.

Chairman of the event was Elwood Leach, Larsen, assisted by Beverly and Ralph Giebel, Neenah, and Mary Jane and Wayne Philipsen, Little Chute.

The rally concluded with an hour of sociability held at River View resort, Fremont.

Trophy Winner

First place trophy winner at the rally was Les Behm, Appleton, followed by Clem Johnson, Oshkosh, and Wally Angel, Neenah. Rudy Feth, Wisconsin Rapids, placed fourth, and Joe Road, Green Bay, fifth.

For the first time this year the club is affiliated with the Mid-West Council, Sports Car Clubs of America. Don Hendry is president of the club; Les Boehm, vice-president, and Mrs. Elwood Leach, secretary-treasurer.

The club's principal goal is to increase its membership of 60 to 100.

"Sports car ownership is not a prerequisite of joining," a spokesman for the club emphasized. The club meets the first Tuesday of every month.

Highlights of the past year's activities include many rallies, similar to the night owl event, and a gymkhana held at Oshkosh in conjunction with the Miss Wisconsin contest.

Future Rallies

Future rallies are scheduled for Oct. 30 and Nov. 24. An economy run will be held Oct. 20, and the annual Christmas party, Dec. 15.

The Mid-western council of sports car clubs has announced that a night race will be held Oct. 12 at the State Fair Park, Milwaukee, and a hill climb Oct. 19 at Rockford, Ill.

S.C.C.A. events include a race at Wilmot Hills, Wilmot Wis., this week-end, and a divisional race at Indianapolis Raceway park, Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 12-13.

Sports car enthusiasts traveled to Pewaukee last weekend to attend the "Oktober Rennen," a unique sports car race held at Lynndale Farms road racing course.

Race for Sedans

The "Oktober Rennen" was originated as a closed event on Elkhart Lake's Road America in October, 1959. It included a race for compact sedans—including Fiats, Jaguars and Buick Specials—and a final race for big modified cars.

The Lynndale course was carved from a natural amphitheater, and engineered to take advantage of the countryside, both for the driver and spectator. With its rolling meadows and rambling brook, Lynndale has kept the beauty of its natural setting, and is perfectly adapted to European road racing.

A 2.5 mile course, Lynndale also offers a "barn," a two-level concrete garage for the convenience of drivers, and a paddock located on the outside of the track, just south of the pagoda, where owners and crew can keep track of the cars and see all signals.

Officers of the Fox Valley Sports Car Club are Les Behm, vice president, left; Mrs. Elwood Leach, secretary treasurer, Joe Eberle, board member; Gale Mielke, public relations; Elwood Leach, activities chairman; and Tom Folk, public relations. Don Hendry, Winneconne, president, was racing at Meadowdale when the picture was taken.

'What to Do' After Accident

In all states, the emphasis of traffic safety is on the prevention of accidents. Yet one out of four Americans will be involved in a traffic accident this year.

So it is fitting that motorists should be advised what to do after the crash.

Here is a somewhat abbreviated checkoff list of things to do after you are involved in a traffic accident:

1. Turn off the ignition.
2. Get the other car's license number and the names of the other driver, owner and names of the occupants.
3. Record the make, year and model of the other car.

Note Direction

4. Note the direction in which vehicles were going and the approximate speed.
5. Note the presence of traffic lights, signs, etc.
6. Note the weather conditions, type and condition of the road.
7. As accurately as you can, list the damage to the other car.
8. Get name and badge number of any policeman present. Get the name of any doctor or receiving hospital.

ARNOLD EVANS "Insurance Question Box"

QUESTION:
Can we reduce premiums on a family car driven by our 19 year old son?

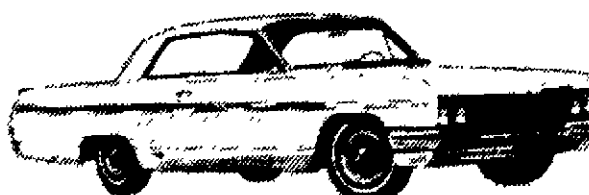

ANSWER:
Yes! 1. A certificate showing successful completion of a state approved Driver Education Course (offered by our Appleton Vocational School) rates a 10% discount. 2. A family's clean driving record may rate up to 15% discount under our Companies' Safe Driver Plan. 3. If he drives a "compact" car, you rate another 10%.

'Stanley Steamer Myth' Is Evaporated

Founder's Son Tells Of Early Struggles

BY CHARLES C. CAIN
Associated Press Automotive Writer

DETROIT (AP) — One of the most fascinating cars in the early days of American motoring was the Stanley Steamer.

It chugged its way into the attention of the motoring public in 1897 and remained in production until 1925.

Through the years, stories about the Stanley grew in number and detail and the cars became almost legendary chariots of great speed and beauty.

Against this background, a retired Boston banker has made a new appraisal of the Stanley car which was developed by his father and his uncle.

He is Raymond W. Stanley, who retired recently as an executive of the First National Bank of Boston. His father, F. E. Stanley, designed the first Stanley Steamer in 1897. Two years later, he and his brother, F. O. Stanley, formed the Stanley Steamer Co.

Other companies were in the steam car business at that time. In fact, steam cars were far more numerous and more accepted in this country then than were gasoline buggies.

Amazing Brothers

The Stanley brothers were amazing in many ways. Identical twins, they dressed alike and even trimmed their beards alike. Their business actually was the first successful automobile corporation in America.

The main value of the Stanley and other steamers was they were a silent, smooth-running machine which needed only water and anything that would burn as fuel.

The steamers had their shortcomings. It sometimes took as much as half an hour to get boiler pressure to start. There were all kinds of valves to set and keep clean. The cars needed a vast amount of water and filling stations were few and far between.

Gearing and transmission were relatively simple, but the cars had an annoying habit of dropping into reverse by themselves. There were many stories of explosions and fire hazards in the operation of the steam cars. Many of them were untrue, but they led the public to turn from the steam engine to the internal combustion gasoline engine.

Like many other early car makers, the Stanley brothers took to the race track to prove their product and that was where the myths began.

Banker Stanley delved into his family's diaries and business papers to background his story, "Evaporating the Stanley Steamer Myth" which is published in Automobile Quarterly, a magazine devoted to the romance of the automobile—past, present and future.

World Record

Stanley confirmed that his father's car did set a world speed record of 127.659 miles per hour on a test run at Ormond Beach, Fla. in 1906. This was the first time any man ever travelled two miles in less than a minute and the mark stood until 1910 when Barney Oldfield did 131 miles an hour in a Benz racer.

The attention which the racing drew for Stanley helped their business considerably and the brothers resolved to try another run in 1907.

Stories of that day told how the red Stanley racer hit a speed of 197 miles an hour as it roared down the Ormond beachline on Jan. 25, 1907. Through the years, stories have been told of how the racer sailed high into the air and crashed to the ground.

Banker Stanley, who as a boy witnessed the disastrous 1907 run, writes that his father's stop watch

This 1904 Stanley Steamer, owned and driven by Zachary H. Hande of Salisbury, Conn., slows up a truck as it climbs a hill. The Steamer was a participant in the Glidden Tour of oldtime autos as it took off for a day's journey from Rochester through Western New York. (AP Wirephoto)

Auto Driver's License Won by Million Youths

BY CHARLES C. CAIN

DETROIT (AP) — More than a million high school students in 45 states got a passing mark this year in their classrooms on wheels.

Their reward was not a diploma, but rather their auto driver's license.

The million-plus students took part in driver education courses which had an average of 30 hours of classroom work and six hours of supervised practice driving.

Details on the teaching program were collected by the auto industries Highway Safety Committee, a non-profit group sponsored by the five major U.S. auto companies and the five major tire manufacturers.

The committee, which was set up in 1947, has made the student driver training program one of its chief projects through the years.

Its report from the 1962-3 school year covered all states but New York, Alabama, North Dakota and Wisconsin, which reported their final figures were unavailable.

Education Cars

The AIHSC said auto makers and new car dealers in the 45 states loaned 8,315 high school driver education cars to various public, private and parochial schools for the program. Another 5,000 were rented, leased or purchased by the schools making over 13,000 cars available for the overall program.

Victor Holt Jr., chairman of AIHSC and vice president of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., said, "Industry makes it possible for thousands of high school students to receive a complete course in driver education. Proper instruction by a qualified teacher is one of our best hopes for building a nation of better drivers and combating the rising toll of traffic accidents."

Holt said the current training program includes not only behind-the-wheel work, but also training films, publications and other classroom aids.

Fletcher Platt, manager of Ford Motor Co., traffic safety department, pointed out that in addition to the million students who take part in training program during the school year, other thousands undertake driver training during the summer.

The National Education Association estimated that more than 250,000 students took part in the program in the past summer.

Platt said there were five major reasons for the popularity of the summer courses:

1—The first wave of Post-World War II children has reached the mid-teen bracket and some schools can not cope with the numbers of students who want driver training during the regular school year.

2—Both teenagers and their parents are becoming more interested in formal driver training inasmuch as some auto insurance companies offer lower rates to families whose teenagers have taken such courses.

3—Many students deliberately defer driving instruction until summer because they are carrying heavy schedules during the regular academic year.

Parents Sympathetic

4—More and more parents recognize the wisdom of having a skilled professional instructor teach their children driving skills.

5—Some schools do not offer driver training during the regular school year. Those who want the classes must enroll elsewhere when time permits. Often, this means summer classes.

A growing number of states give youths who have completed driver training a head start in obtaining drivers' licenses. In Michigan, for example, the law permits a person who has passed such a course to be licensed at 16. Without such a course, he must wait until he is 18.

Speedway Offers Stock Car Thrills

Many Fenders Bashed In Outagamie Races

A battered fender or smoking engine would almost certainly bring a groan to the lips of the average Fox Cities motorist.

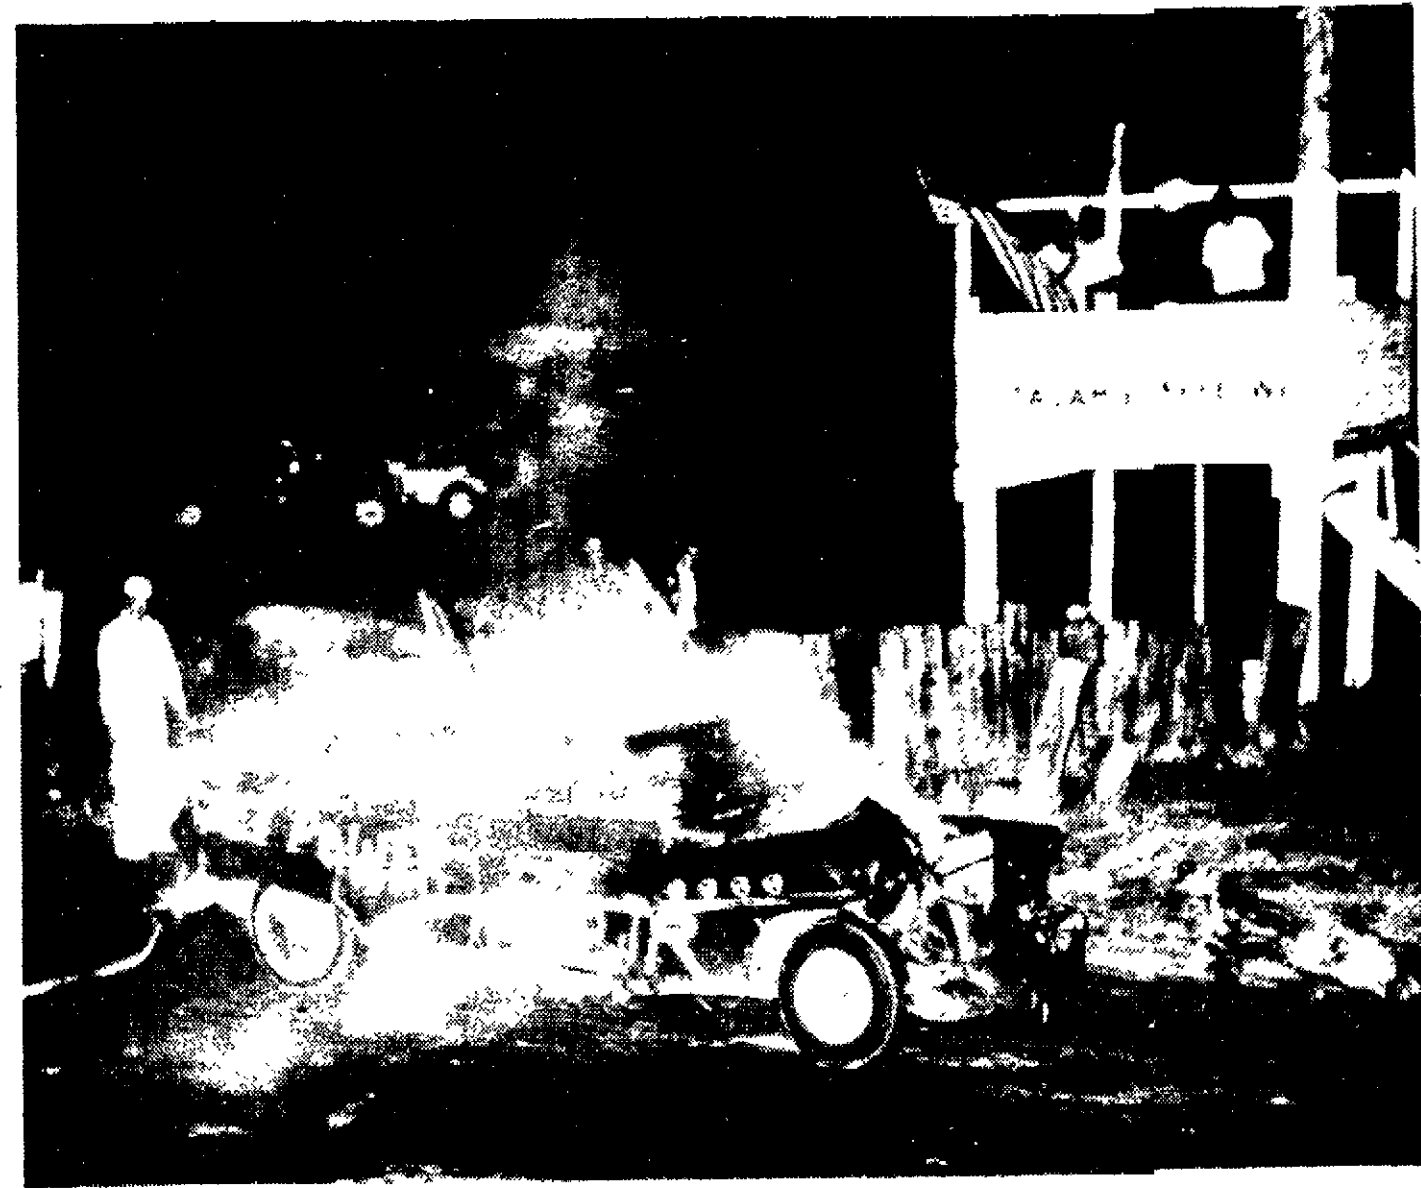

But for members of the Fox Valley Stock Car Club, whose cars compete weekly in races at the Outagamie County Speedway, Apple Creek, these tokens of clash and conflict are accepted philosophically, as the price of enjoyable competition.

Stock Car racing, which is assuming the status of a major spectator sport throughout the Fox Valley, brings thousands of thrill seekers annually to speedways at Apple Creek, Oshkosh, Shawano and Shiocton.

Here they watch drivers compete in time trials, heats, semi-feature and feature races. Big crowd pleasers are the demolition races, in which drivers intentionally smash into each other with the survivor crossing the finish line to collect his share of the take.

The winners' prizes are determined by a set ratio, in which the gate money is divided between the club and the owner of the track. A point system, based on how drivers place in individual contests, determines the payoff.

As a safety feature, neither time trials nor a race can be held unless an ambulance is at the scene. Any auto body or engine, from 1955 or older, is eligible for use in stock competition.

There's More to Tires Than Rubber, Air

You may get more mileage out of your present tires—increase your driving comfort and safety—and save money when it comes time to buy new tires, if you know a few facts about tires and the basic principles of tire wear and care.

The introduction of heavier, faster cars, the use of smaller wheels, and the building of roads that permit higher speed without let-up for hundreds of miles, have radically increased tire requirements. In the past six years alone, stop and start stresses have increased 25 per cent to 67 per cent. Passing on turnpikes exerts 27 per cent more side thrust on all four tires.

Tire engineers have kept up with these fast-changing requirements by developing tires that are not only stronger but longer wearing and more comfortable to ride on. But for all the work that goes on in the tire laboratory and on test tracks, the one important test remains. How well do the tires perform on the road for their owner?

The answer depends to a great extent on how the owner uses them. Here are some pointers presented by tire engineers that will improve your tire performance.

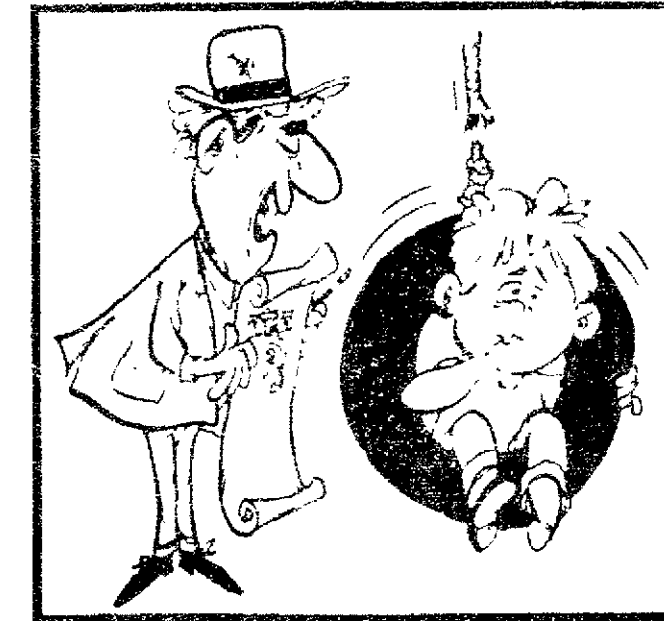

Right Inflation

1. What is the right tire inflation? Check the owner's manual for your car. Use its recommended tire inflation for it works best for your car. One exception, however: If you plan to drive long distances at high speeds, your tire pressure should be increased by four pounds. Do not bleed tires.

2. Why is inflation important? Underinflation overworks the tire, creates heat that weakens the structural cords. There is uneven wear along the outside edges of the tread. Overinflation robs the tire of its ability to flex and absorb road shock making it more susceptible to fabric breaks. The tread wears excessively at its center.

3. Why is wheel alignment important to the life of your tires? Poor wheel alignment causes excessive tread wear on one side of the tread surface. It's smart to check wheel alignment every 10,000 miles.

4. If a feathered edge develops on one side of the tread surface, what's wrong? Your wheels are out of adjustment and are suffering from excessive "toe-in" or "toe-out" effect. Have your serviceman check out the problem for you.

Unbalanced Wheels

5. What is the effect of unbalanced wheels on your tires? Your car develops a shimmy or vibration which makes riding uncomfortable and cuts down tire wear. Tire and wheel balancing takes perhaps 30 minutes at your tire dealer and can save you lots of future headaches.

6. Are tubeless tires safer than those with tubes? Yes, say tire engineers. Tubeless tires run cooler than tubed types and heat is a major enemy of tire wear. They resist punctures better, too. A tube is like a balloon—subject to quick deflation when punctured by a sharp object. If a sharp object penetrates a tubeless tire, the inner liner is relaxed and tends to grip the sides of the object preventing quick loss of air. Did you ever try to push a paper clip through a pencil eraser?

7. What function does a tread perform? If all your driving was done on a dry pavement, there would be no need for a tire tread. But the tread is vital when the pavement is the least bit wet or oily. The cuts and grooves that form the tread design act as thousands of gripping edges that "squeeze" out the water giving sure, positive traction and stopping power.

8. What's the difference between premium and first line tires? First line tires of major manufacturers are those which are mounted on new cars. Premium tires give longer, safe, trouble-free performance but they sell at a higher price than first line casings.

9. What does a thin red circle around the sidewall of a tire mean? It's a quick, positive identification for all premium tires made by U. S. Rubber Co. It is designed to eliminate confusion in buyers' minds as to just what tires deserve to be called premium.

Double Strength

10. How can two-ply tires carry four-ply ratings? The tire cord used in two-ply tires can have twice the tensile strength of the cord used in four-ply tires. By doubling the strength per cord, one ply can have the strength of two, two plies the strength of four.

11. What effect does high-speed driving have on tires? Sustained high-speed driving builds up high temperatures and reduces overall tire strength and wearing qualities. At 80 m.p.h. you get only 20 per cent of normal tread wear as a result of the temporary heat distortion in the shape of the tires. Some tires are made with a new high-strength bonding agent called CVC, which means much safer driving on turnpikes and highways at sustained high speeds.

12. What's the key to getting even wear on all your tires? Tire rotation will give you maximum wear out of each tire. Ideally, tires should be rotated every 5,000 miles to equalize tread wear.

Be sure this periodic rotation includes the spare. The uneven wear caused by not rotating your tires can also lead to shimmy, vibration, noise and a bumpy ride.

Let's EXPLORE Your Mind

By Sylvanus M. Duvall, Ph.D. and Evelyn M. Duvall, Ph.D.

DO YOUR MENTAL POWERS DECLINE RAPIDLY AS YOU GROW OLDER?

NO ☐

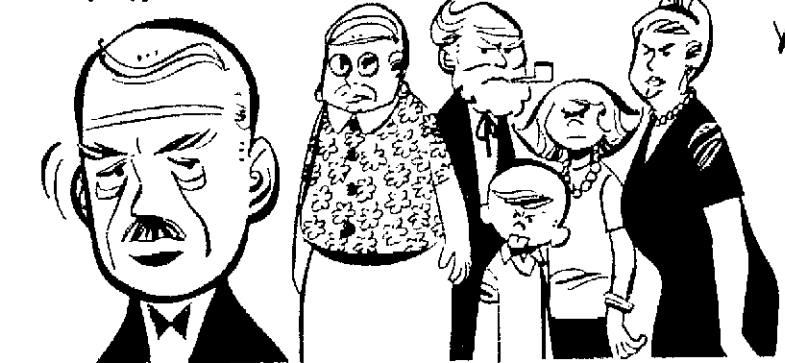

No. In an experiment at Columbia University, for instance, older people learned Russian quite as quickly as did the younger students. The main thing was the desire to learn. Apparently the possibility of learning is at its peak at 22, but it declines little for some 60 years. If you really want to, you can keep your mental powers well into old age.

CAN FAMILIES SOMETIMES "DRIVE A MAN INSANE"?

NO ☐

Yes. The relatives of those in mental hospitals sometimes don't want them cured. They want them out of the way. Families have been known to "gang up" on some member whom they disliked, to drive him insane and keep him that way. If he returns home "cured," they do their best to make it hard for him so that he'll have to be recommitted. They may try to believe that the case is "hopeless" as a salve for their consciences.

TEACHERS SHOULD BE MORE FRIENDLY WITH THEIR PUPILS!

GOOD ☐ BAD ☐

Good, provided the friendliness doesn't lead to lack of respect. In many instances, pupils have failed to appreciate teachers who tried to be too "palsy-walsy." One teacher in a London school had all kinds of trouble until he made a practice of calling each pupil Miss or Master, and insisted that he be respectfully addressed. People usually get along better if real differences in position are recognized and respected.

Records in Re-view

BY JACK RUDOLPH
Press Gazette Staff Writer
PIANO - HOROWITZ

The Horowitz Collection: Vladimir Horowitz, pianist. RCA-Victor LD 7021 (Stereo LDS 7021).

Horowitz is no longer with RCA but the company owns a large library of his recordings, made over a period of 25 years but much of it now out of print. Several of these, made between 1942 and 1955 when the pianist was in his prime, have been reissued under RCA's Soria Series label.

The selections range from Mozart to Samuel Barber, and the performances are what could be expected from an artist of Horowitz's caliber, with reprocessed sound to match. The "Collection" in the title refers principally to Horowitz's personal gallery of paintings, several of which are presented in color in the elaborate brochure.

HAYDN

Symphony No. 44 in F Minor (Tragic), No. 49 in F Minor (La Passione); Orchestra San Pietro, Renato Ruotolo conducting. Decca DL 10069 (Stereo DL 710069)

The Orchestra San Pietro is a young chamber ensemble from Naples whose first U.S. tour in 1961-62 included Milwaukee. It plays these two early Haydn works with clarity and style but not too much imaginative feeling. The pieces themselves (No. 49 was actually written nearly four years before No. 44) are more intense and melancholy than is usual with Haydn but his essential good nature refused to be completely obscured.

BEETHOVEN

Symphony No. 4 in E-Flat Major, Leonore Averture No. 3; Cleveland Orchestra George Szell conducting. Epic LC 3864 (Stereo LSC 1264).

Although Szell pushes too hard in an effort to get more out of this symphony than it really contains, the quality and precision of his musicians are evidenced by the brilliant polish and fine balance of the performance. The overture is a nicely controlled reading which builds to a surging climax. Not an outstanding recording but thoroughly satisfying.

BRAHMS

Violin Concerto in D Major; Zino Francescatti, violinist, with the New York Philharmonic, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Columbia ML 5871 (Stereo MS 6471).

Francescatti's strong, powerful playing, notably in the first movement cadenza, adds up to a brilliant performance, suitably supported by the orchestra. His interpretation may not placate the die-hard purists but it is exciting. The recording is a replacement for an earlier one he made with the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1956.

MUSICAL — OFF BROADWAY CAST

"The Boys From Syracuse," with music by Richard Rodgers, lyrics by Lorenz Hart and book by George Abbott; starring Ellen Hanley. Capitol TAO 1933. (Stereo STAO 1933).

Last season's Off Broadway revival of "The Boys" honored the 25th anniversary of the original production and picked off a Vernon Price Award for outstanding O.B. achievement. This cast album is a pretty good example of what enthusiasm can do plus the indestructibility of a good song. Although—as is too often the case with modern musical casts—there is little singing talent in evidence, the music stands up remarkably well.

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

"Halloe der, Chahlie! Hunting you are going maybe? Vot kind of bird iss giffing you da bird ven you miss mit das schuss gewehr (shotgun, to you foreigners)?"

This pseudo-Baron Munchausen opener sort of goes along with the chuckles which accompanied the first good look at one of Canada's 1957 special issues. It was the "hunter" stamp of their Outdoor Recreation release of four different sports—swimming, fishing, skiing and upland hunting—which prompted the guffaws from the observant critics.

It was the dog that didn't belong in the scene, they said. Obviously a retriever for waterfowl hunting, what's he doing on point—like a setter? The terrain looks marshy though so it could be that he's alerted his master to some paddling coots on the pond ahead.

Crazy Mixed-Up Gun?

That nimrod is aiming awfully high, though, as if he's expecting a sudden flush of sharptails or quail. Nice gun—except that it has the stock and fore end of a double over-and-under—and there's only a single barrel. Ah well, some days a stamp designer just can't win.

While that gun barrel is pointing out there, though, we ought to take a guess at his quarry. Romanian peasant, I mean pheasant, or European game cock, or Cuban quacker, or that nice, fat Czechoslovakian partridge . . . or, say how'd that desert ostrich get in here?

Oh, well, maybe he's just a spectator taking in the fun. And that's what hunting is—fun. Just so the mistakes are kept on stamp designs and not in the accident statistics. Okay?

Hunting Via Stamps

Hunting via stamps affords another interesting sidelight. Game birds as well as migratory waterfowl aren't noticeably particular about the politics of the land in which they thrive; the ringneck pheasant, for example, hails from China, but has made itself at home from England to New England, from Canada to southern United States.

It's even less particular whose shotgun pellets it gets in the way of — as evidenced by the historic "shoot-out" between Nikita Khrushchev and our own Pierre Salinger with Nikkie the winner on the most birds downed.

You say you still can't figure what that ostrich is doing with a lineup of game birds? Neither can I. So what are you grouching about?

Luxury, Power, Sleek Styling Are Featured

There's "something for everyone" in the showrooms of Fox Cities auto dealers this fall as American manufacturers unveil their sparkling new 1964 models.

Extensively re-designed models, featuring new power and transmission options, permit the buyer virtually to "custom-build" his purchase to his own personal specifications.

Gone are the styling trends of yesteryear, with large amounts of chrome obscuring the basically sleek lines of the compacts, full-sized and luxury models. Instead, ornamentation is kept at a minimum, tastefully pointing up the designer's intentions.

All manufacturers emphasize increased durability and trouble-free performance in their 1964 lines, and engines using either regular or premium-grade gasoline are available in most models.

Virginia Allen Is Lawrence Minstrel

BY MARK E. OLIVA

Lawrence College has a national reputation as a leading music school. So it comes as no surprise that Virginia Allen, one of the better collegiate folk music talents since Joan Baez, is a Lawrence student.

But to anyone who has heard Ginny's amazingly pure voice, it's certain to come as a surprise that folk song runs a distant second to her acting interests. Her stage appearances at Lawrence have far outnumbered her folk concerts.

Ginny first became interested in folk music after her arrival as a freshman on the Lawrence campus in 1960. Unlike most young artists, who started by copying Kingston Trio records, Ginny's interest developed from an appreciation of flamenco.

Missouri Grandfather

She began her folk music career by buying a guitar, learning to play it and then starting to sing. She learned her earlier numbers from Joan Baez records and from songs her Missouri grandfather sang.

Today Ginny's repertoire consists of Irish, English and Scottish ballads and folk songs from the Appalachian Mountains. However, her newest project is an enlargement of the range of her material.

Many Fox Valley folk music fans already are familiar with Ginny's pure voice and guitar mastery through her appearance at the Lawrence hootenanny in May, a performance at New London recently and two radio programs in which she took part.

If studies allow, Ginny may take part in local folk festivals during the school year as well as any folk concerts at the college. She also plans to make more appearances on local radio this year.

Saying her father is a news announcer for WOOD-TV, Grand Rapids, may explain part of the reason for Ginny's love of the stage. The rest of the reason may be accounted for by the well-known Red Barn Theater in Saugatuck, a professional equity theater.

Theater Apprentice

She began working at the Red Barn, without compensation, at the age of 15, "painting sets and emptying garbage cans." At 16, when she became an apprentice at the theater, she played small parts in some of the Red Barn's summer musicals.

At Lawrence, since 1961, she has appeared in "The Three Sisters," "Ticket-of-Leave Man," "The Flies" and "The Bald Soprano." Part of her theater talent may have come from her forensics work in high school. As a senior, she won top honors in interpretive reading in a regional contest.

Ginny loves writing as well as drama. Her short story, "Nancy Goes to Rehearsal," won the school's Hicks Award for fiction last year.

Ginny spent the summer in a fashion many students may dream of but few achieve. Immediately after school closed, she took a bus from Chicago to the East using only her "cash on hand" and the money from the Hicks Award to support herself.

Sold Books

When her cash supply dropped to $3, she began selling books in the Boston and Cambridge areas and earned much more than anticipated. She also learned a few new folk songs on her two-month tour.

Ginny is an English major at Lawrence, but is unsure what she will do after graduation. She has five goals she wants to meet: studying drama; writing; seeing the West; seeing Scotland, and roaming.

Ginny Allen is among the performers appearing on this week's radio edition of Marshall Gramos' VIEW column. The People Sing. The program, The People Sing Hootenanny—Part II, was recorded at Emanuel Lutheran School, New London, Sept. 22. Performers include Lawrence student Rob Mahney, the Islanders of Neenah, Bruce Bisler of Appleton, professional Marce Zelonkey and P. K. Allen, also a Lawrence student. The show will be aired at 2:05 p.m. today over WAPL.

Stars Applaud 'Kooky' Singer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — She bends notes like Ella Fitzgerald, makes kid's songs like "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" sound sexy a la Lena Horne and she belts like Judy Garland.

She's also kookier than Shirley Mac Laine.

And Barbra Streisand is only 21 years old. One of the biggest movie turnouts in months greeted her Hollywood debut at the Coconut Grove. She's the new pet of the movie crowd.

As she looked over her audience, which included everyone from Sue (Lolita) Lyon to Henry Fonda, she said:

She's a Nut

"I'm the kind of nut who reads movie magazines—and here you all are alive. If I had known you were coming, I would have had my nose fixed."

She's no beauty—until she sings—and then she gets prettier.

Producers swarmed over her at a party afterwards.

"I'm not interested in movies—I've got a job."

She's going to play Fannie Brice on Broadway next season in "Funny Girl."

Soviet Poet Tells Of Doghouse Woes

A Precocious Autobiography. By Yevgeny Yevtushenko. Dutton $3.50.

Hind sight adds interest to the reading of Yevtushenko's statement of his position and beliefs. For it was the publication of this book (in Russian) during a Soviet "thaw" that led to his present doghouse troubles.

In the outside world, Yevtushenko is the best known of the Russian poets — doubly interesting because he dared to raise some political questions in such poems as "Zima Junction," and to attack anti-Semitism in "Babi Yar."

But last spring the Russian bear, Premier Khrushchev, began cuffing around intellectuals, writers and artists. One of his targets was this poet, principally because of this book. Yevtushenko's plans for a 1963 trip to America suddenly evaporated.

Autobiographical Sketch

In this short autobiographical sketch — he was only 30 this summer — Yevtushenko describes his origins, his experiences as a teen-age rebel, his apprenticeship as a hack poet, and his sudden conversion to more serious themes.

Western readers will feel a certain sympathy with his vigorously asserted claim that a poet is a truth-seeker, regardless of the political consequences. His posture is appealing. He likes some modern art in preference to "socialist realism." He has only contempt for entrenched bureaucracy. He soaks up the attention of the "little people."

But Western readers are likely to reflect that Yevtushenko also is a little slippery, ideologically speaking. He says he was shocked at Stalin's excesses even before the party line swerved abruptly to a denigration of Stalin. Well, maybe.

He professes to a complete dedication to Leninism, but says Soviet politicians have betrayed the "real" Leninism.

Hits 'Dogmatists'

You'll have to credit him with saying some sharp things about the very people who have put him into eclipse since this book was written. He calls them

World of Books Rising Status of American Scholar Traced by Harvard's Nathan Pusey

The Age of the Scholar. By Nathan B. Pusey.

"What I am trying to suggest is that the scholar in America has for some time been growing into a new position of importance and increased influence as our society has developed. . . . Indeed it is not too much to believe that we may now be coming into an Age of the Scholar, for we have created for ourselves a manner of living in America in which a little learning can no longer serve our needs."

This trend of education, particularly at the university level, is the theme of Dr. Nathan Pusey's series of essays in The Age of the Scholar.

The essays, which were written over the last 10 years, deal with such subjects as "What Makes A College Good?", "The Joint Responsibility of Public and Private Universities", "Science in the University" and "College Education and Moral Character," all of which are being widely discussed in academic circles today. These "observations on education," as Dr. Pusey refers to them, are pertinent to the myriad of problems which confront educators and students in the ivy halls pressured by the population explosion and debates over the hows and whys of education.

Educational Role

But of greater importance, at least to the layman, are the essays dealing with philosophies behind the educational role as Dr. Pusey sees them. The first essay, "A Faith For These Times," ably reveals the difference between the "easy optimism" that characterized the humanistic religion of Harvard's Dr. Eliot and our concerns today. "It is not that we do not have faith, or at least want to have faith, but that certainty (or progress) escapes us, and that all things have been brought into doubt, and that fearing to be victimized we are inclined not to believe at all. We simply are not the 'true believers' of whom President Eliot spoke, and this suggests that his was not a religion for the future. . . . It is leadership in religious knowledge, and even more, in religious experience . . . of which we now have a most grasping need. . . . Theology should not be thought of as a minor intellectual exercise among other intellectual exercises. . . . It is expected to carry an answer to our deepest hungers and needs."

Academic Freedom

In "Freedom, Loyalty and the American University," written in 1954, Dr. Pusey refutes the arguments of those who were charging there was considerable Communist influence in universities. He points out that free inquiry has been essential throughout the history of education and is no modern whim. "A scholar or scientist has an obligation to investigate and report new ideas. . . . Time after time, in the progress of the Western world, it has been the work of a single scholar, doggedly holding out against the prejudices of others, that has given us the great new idea which has advanced our knowledge of ourselves and of our world."

Academic freedom involves the responsibility to

"dogmatists," and pictures them as blind theorists unaware of human realities.

It is an interesting and valuable experience to listen to what this man has to say. If nothing else, American readers can get from a careful study of his book some enlightening information on what it means to be an individualist in a regimented society.

Miles A. Smith

October 6, 1963 Sunday Post-Crescent 23

use one's mind as best one can in the service of truth; and it is of course the people who have learned this who are the lifeblood of democracy." Basic to all education is free inquiry and Dr. Pusey points out that the university cannot thrive in its major responsibilities in an atmosphere "of fear and restriction." In listing the major contributions of Harvard graduates not only to science and letters but also to various community and charitable organizations and the cause of justice and liberty in World War II, Dr. Pusey successfully argues that the contribution of the university has been immense.

The book is a solid addition to the thoughtful consideration of American education in a busy and confusing decade. The reader cannot help feeling that, all in all and despite the always great need for improvement, American education has been heading in the right direction with men like Dr. Pusey to defend it and show the way.

College Students Like Knowles Tale

Reports from various campuses point out that another novel is joining "Lord of the Flies" and "Catcher in the Rye" as a favorite among college and university students.

The book, "A Separate Peace," by John Knowles, was recently re-issued in a $1.75 paperback by Delta Books.

Like the two earlier books by William Golding and J. D. Salinger, Mr. Knowles' novel concerns itself, in a broad sense, with young people and the agonies of adjusting to manhood in a difficult world. The setting is in a prep school at the time of World War II. The author, in flash back, recalls his friendship with and hero-worship of another 16-year-old boy. The atmosphere of the school is vividly recreated, and Mr. Knowles has probed sharply into the feelings of youth.

Edna Ferber Affectionately Recalls Start of Career as Crescent Writer

A Kind of Magic. By Edna Ferber. Doubleday. $5.75.

Appleton proudly claims the title of "Edna Ferber's home town." Although she was born in Kalamazoo Mich., her childhood was spent in Appleton, where Jacob and Julia Ferber operated a general merchandise store.

Her previous autobiography, "A Peculiar Treasure," which was published in 1939, showed a picture of a middle-class Jewish family in America and Miss Ferber's establishment as a successful novelist and playwright. In "A Kind of Magic" she tells of her life as a writer, starting with her days as a cub reporter on the Appleton Daily Crescent.

Fox Cities readers will take special delight in the author's early experiences. ". . . in love with my job, I was the town scourge, a plump seventeen, my hair tied back in a bunch of wiry black corkscrew curls, I daily ranged the news spots from the jail and courthouse to Pettibone's Drygoods Store."

Growing Knowledge

And she continues. ". . . the advantages . . . of a reporter working on a small-town daily afternoon newspaper were many . . . contact with every variety of human being . . . a rapidly growing knowledge of these humans . . ."

From the Appleton Daily Crescent, she went to "the big-city splendors of Milwaukee . . . I worked like a horse, happily galloping the city from Lake Michigan to West Allis . . ."

Overdoing it a bit, she returned to Appleton to recuperate. But she could not keep her hands off a typewriter, and that is when she began "quite without plan or intention, the fifty and more years of novel writing, play writing, short story writing." (She still types with four fingers.)

Miss Ferber tells of the four national figures who

Atlas Combines Maps, Text

Although the commemoration of the four-year centennial of the Civil War is less than two years old, students of the conflict already have been so buffeted about the war that it will take them the duration—and bruised by the barrage of books, good and bad, plus a few years—to read only the worthwhile ones.

Among the best of the recent offerings is "The West Point Atlas of the Civil War," edited by Col. Vincent J. Esposito (Praeger, $12.50). Although not actually a new work (the contents are an abbreviated version of Volume I of the 1959 two-volume "West Point Atlas of American Wars"), the book is an excellent reference for the serious Civil War buff. It contains 192 maps outlining troop movements in 19 of the war's major campaigns and battles.

One of its greatest advantages, and one usually not found in any such combination of text and maps, is that the text referring to each map is confined to the facing page. It permits the reader to follow the action easily—not having to hunt for a map to which the text may refer.

Arms, Equipment

Jack Coggins' "Arms and Equipment of the Civil War" (Doubleday, $5.95) is an interesting aside from the major course of the conflict. A profusely-illustrated book, it pictures quite sketchily the tremendous conglomeration of equipment of all types used by both armies. Mr. Coggins has undertaken to treat cursorily in 160 pages such a vast field that he has barely been able to skim the surface.

Two other books turn to the nautical aspects of the conflict. "The Confederate Navy: A Pictorial

Edna Ferber

This was not only a best seller, but a popular musical with music by Jerome Kern.

"Cimarron" (1929) is another well remembered story: "Come and Get It" (1935) was a romantic tale of Wisconsin lumbermen; "Giant," a story of Texas which roused a storm of ire and was also made into a movie; and her most recent novel "Ice Palace", set in Alaska.

Every novel Miss Ferber has written (except "Show Boat") carried a message, whether it was political chicanery, national plundering, anti-Semitism, waste, callousness, carelessness or inhumanity.

She visited Buchenwald and Nordhausen shortly after the liberation, describing her reactions in stark black and white. "Shocked, emotionally injured, I had resigned from the human race."

She was unable to write for 10 months. "A Kind of Magic" acts as a soapbox for Miss Ferber's opinions on wide-spread subjects.

Still sharp of wit, eloquent, Miss Ferber writes as a professional; she loves her work; likes living in a New York apartment, and has no desire to live on any other planet. She says, "World, I love you. I have always loved you . . ." "I not only work here I live here I love it here . . ."

Comedian Kaye Finds TV Schedule 'Rough'

BY ISOBEL ASHE

HOLLYWOOD—Danny Kaye of the tousled hair and agile body has done something fans never expected. He's doing a weekly television series, as viewers now know, from having seen his new Wednesday night hour-long program on CBS television.

"But I never said I'd NEVER do a weekly series," Kaye disclaimed in Hollywood a few weeks ago. "I always qualified it with 'at this time'. I said I'd do it only when the time was right. And five years ago it wasn't.

"I was doing movies then, working with children for the United Nations, appearing in theatres six or ten weeks a year. And I realized I'd have to curtail all these activities to do justice to television.

Needed Stimulation

"Then about a year ago I realized I wasn't sufficiently stimulated. I wasn't busy enough. It was then I knew the time was right.

"I have never worked so hard in my life, and for the first time in my life I go to the office every day!" he said with a trace of wonderment in his voice.

It is also, Kaye disclosed, the first time in 25 years he's spent this much consecutive time at home. "And it's fun. Creativity begets creativity and I'm enjoying it."

The behind-the-scenes story of Kaye's appearing on CBS Wednesdays is an interesting one, too. All three networks were advised "within two minutes of each other," Kaye says, of his availability.

CBS made the first offer and was accepted. And then, a floor-covering company bought the show for alternate week sponsorship, they explain, because they "were impressed with Kaye as a performer of world renown, as a great human being and as a great humanitarian."

There never was any intention on Kaye's part or that of his associates that he would duplicate the one-a-year specials he'd been doing for the past three years.

"We couldn't attempt to do it that way, because it wouldn't come off. When we did one-a-year, we rehearsed four weeks.

"Now we rehearse five days and then start all over again. While it's a rough schedule, it's a stimulating one."

Kaye feels, as do many of his fellow entertainers, that a show a week is actually easier than one a year.

"You have the luxury of doing a bad one occasionally and you needn't worry about being run out of town.

He's a Realist

"I'm a realist. I know every show can't be great. We'll try to make all of them great, of course, because I strive to do things as well as I know how, but undoubtedly there will be some not quite great.

"No one can judge this, only the audience. We all have different tastes and preferences, in television shows or food," he points out.

There will not be as much special material on the weekly Danny Kaye shows as on the one-a-year offerings.

"I don't want to overpower the audience. The television audience must learn to know more about me. I feel communicating with people at home is different than in movies, theatres or clubs. The more they learn about you, the closer they feel. It's fine to entertain and do sketches, but at one point I want to sit down and communicate with the people rather than perform at them. If it doesn't work, we'll have to find something else."

For the same reason, Kaye refused to be pinned down on an exact format for his show.

"If we have a formula, it's to do as entertaining a show as we can every week. The format will evolve itself after a few weeks, and the exciting thing is that it can change from week to week. We're obliged to take more chances."

It was for this reason that Kaye insisted on taping his show, rather than filming it, as do many comedians.

"If I had my way I'd do it live on tape from Hollywood at 7:00 Wednesday nights, so it would reach the east at 10. That's as live as you can get.

"As it is, we have only the time from Saturday night when we tape at Television City until the following Wednesday when you see the show.

No Rigid Form

"I don't want a rigid form. If the scenery falls down, and it might, at some time or other, I'll keep on talking until it's repaired.

"On one of our shows, I just know something will happen—in the audience or with a guest—and it'll all go sky high.

"But I'd rather take this chance than to risk losing the audience with stopping and starting. Worse yet, the audience may lose me and that's equally as devastating."

Kaye has no fear, as do some stars, of over exposure. Rather, it's his opinion that an entertainer's obligation is to reach as many people as he can, and only through television can he attain that goal.

Danny Kaye, who in 20 years won acclaim throughout the world for his versatile entertainment talents, is now launched on his first regular television series on CBS-TV. His Wednesday night comedy-variety shows also feature top guest stars.

"Let's put it this way: there comes a time when you must take your life and career by the scruff of its neck and shake it up.

"That's what I'm doing now. I'm not underestimating the pressures, pitfalls and work, but hard work has never fazed me.

"There IS an emotional adjustment, of having to be in one place for the 40 weeks we're doing the shows.

No Hysteria

"But it's fun, finding guests that we can showcase to the best possible advantage: possibly finding a television 'family' who will work on several shows with me.

"I must say, we have a highly unantiseptic atmosphere. There's no hysteria. "We leave the goofs as they are. I think this is the way we can come closest to the live feeling. As I said, unless an enormous disaster occurs, we won't stop the tape."

Although as Kaye says, there will not be as much special material he has no intention of dropping some of his tested skits.

"I'd be a fool to abandon things I've developed and perfected," he says logically. "And it's odd how some of them did develop.

"The tea-drinking routine, for example, started when I was appearing in London.

"I'd played golf late that day and had gotten to the theatre just in time to change clothes and go on.

"During the show, I commented to the audience, 'I haven't had a cup of tea all day,' and went on with my act.

"Suddenly I turned around: someone backstage had sent a girl out with a cup of tea. I had to do SOMETHING.

"So I accepted the tea with thanks, asked the orchestra for 'a little tea music, please.' I got a chair, and did a pantomime of two girls in a tearoom watching another girl they didn't expect to be there.

"Little hits like that, you don't drop: you've invested too much into them emotionally and I think people enjoy seeing them again."

It's a full-time job Kaye has taken on with the new series, but he seemingly doesn't regret curtailment of some of his other activities.

He doesn't get to watch so many surgical operations any more. He's first to admit he's a frustrated doctor, an interest engendered as a youngster by the Doctors Mayo who founded the Minnesota clinic bearing their name.

He abandoned medicine for show business, but still loves to watch operations and even offer unofficial diagnoses.

"And I do have a claim to fame. I'm the only person I know who flew himself to his own appendectomy!"

It happened a few months ago when Danny was touring in the midwest in his own plane and fell ill. He did his own diagnosis that time, flew to Rochester to the Mayo Clinic and the surgery was performed.

"It could make for fine dinnertable conversation. But I don't talk about my own operation. Only those I've watched," he laughs.

Will "Glynis" Be Another "Lucy"?

BY EDGAR PENTON

HOLLYWOOD — Although there is an air of mystery (liberally spiced with comedy, of course) in Destu's new Wednesday "Glynis" series over CBS-TV, there is no mystery about the choice of the series star.

Glynis Johns, after starring in some 40 motion pictures including "The Sundowners" for which she received an Academy Award nomination, was one of the most sought after personalities for a television series.

The South African-born actress flew here from Europe more than two years ago prepared to spend ten days filming one segment of the "Adventures in Paradise" series, after which she was to return to the Continent.

Offers of roles in pictures and television came so thick and fast that Glynis is still roosting in Hollywood.

When writer-producer Jess Oppenheimer heard that Glynis was in Hollywood he telephoned her saying: "Don't leave town until we talk I've an idea for a television series that would be perfect for you."

Oppenheimer is a man who can speak with considerable authority on television. He has an enviable record of success.

He created the famous "I Love Lucy" show for which he was the recipient of two Emmys and the Sylvania Award.

Oppenheimer worked frantically to complete his outline for the series, expecting that Glynis would be flying back to Europe momentarily.

When he finished he brought it to America's liveliest lady president, Lucille Ball, who heads Destu Productions, not telling her who he had in mind for the starring role.

Lucy took the outline home, read it and the next day called Oppenheimer.

"I love it," she said, "and you know who would be perfect in the lead?" Oppenheimer held his breath. "Glynis Johns," said Lucy.

The next day the three met and Glynis agreed to star in a television series. Oppenheimer became the executive producer.

Oppenheimer feels he has another "I Love Lucy" in "Glynis."

That crime can be comical is the basic premise of "Glynis," the new Wednesday night mystery-comedy television series on CBS TV. It stars British actress Glynis Johns as a writer of mysteries and Keith Andes as her attorney husband.

"For one thing," he says, "we have an established star. We don't have to build one."

"And Glynis is one of these rare people with great personal dignity who can run the whole gamut of emotions from drama to comedy. She has kind of an Irene Dunne quality."

About the series, Oppenheimer continues: "We are trying to generate comedy through mystery situations."

"We will use good solid actors and place them in situations of jeopardy that audiences will feel are genuine but which also will be highly amusing."

In the series Glynis is a mystery writer married to attorney Jim Granville, played by Keith Andes, who brings a variety of experience to the role of the harried husband.

Educated at Oxford, in England, and Philadelphia's Temple University where he studied voice, he enlisted in the Army Air Corps in 1942. He was assigned to the Air Corps show, "Winged Victory," which played in New York for 18 months and then took to the road.

When the show played Los Angeles, Andes was signed to a contract by David Selznick. His first movie role was in "The Farmer's Daughter" with Loretta Young and Joseph Cotten.

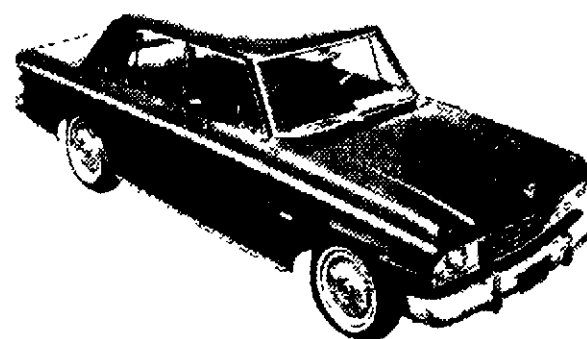

Andes' big break came when he became Alfred Drake's understudy in "Kiss Me Kate."

When Drake became ill, Andes played the role 22 times, enough to win himself the lead in the national company opposite Anne Jeffreys.

Two years ago he returned to Broadway to star opposite Lucille Ball in "Wildcat."

Glynis' other partner in crime, or rather in solving crime, is her apartment house manager, Chick, played by veteran character actor, George Mathews. Chick is a retired policeman, sweet and gentle, but frustrated that he never became a detective.

Stanley Steamer Made Significant Contribution to Auto Development indicated the racer was doing about 150 miles an hour when it hit two ripples in the sandy beach.

Stanley wrote:

"The red racer, with a plume of steam attached to its tail, hit the little ripples on the sand and gave the front wheels a slight upward toss. Pressure on the underside of the body caused it to glide along for 103 feet with only its rear wheels on the ground. Then it rolled over towards the sea and was dashed to pieces.

Since there was no speedometer on the Stanley, it was impossible to determine from the driver, Fred Marriott, just how fast he was going when his auto almost became an airplane.

Since even 150 miles an hour was faster than man ever had gone before, there was much discussion in newspapers of the day about the speed which the Stanley hit. A team of scientists from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology calculated the car was doing 190, but Banker Stanley disputes that figure.

Banker Stanley concludes that the car which his family developed made a significant contribution to the automobile industry.

The 1906 "gentlemen's roadster," for example, could do 84 miles an hour and sold for $1,350.

Among the stories which Stanley dismisses as myths was one that train and steamboat whistles were attached to the early Stanleys to scare away dogs and make up for the fact that the cars otherwise were so silent that they would sneak up on pedestrians.

Uncle Jack's Garden Diary

BY UNCLE JACK

One of the characteristics of those men and women who write the instructions for home gardening in the manuals and catalogs is to express themselves in absolutes.

Fall is the time for starting a new lawn, they will say so positively that the beginner is likely to assume that he will make a fool of himself by trying the job at any other time. The truth is that autumn, indeed, provides the best opportunities and conditions for the germination and growth of good grasses with the least effort of the lawn-maker and lawn-tender, but it is not the only time, by any means.

I have just completed a demonstration in my own yard. A new street construction and curb and gutter project was completed in early July. The hottest season of the year was upon us, coupled with the worst drought we have had in our neighborhood for some time. I had a choice of regarding the barren section next to the street during the remainder of the summer, or trying to start a lawn in defiance of the admonitions of the professional experts.

I chose defiance, and I am pleased to say that the results were startlingly good.

Before anybody assumes that the old rules about lawn-making are entirely wrong however, I should hurry to add that making a lawn in the summer-time is a good deal more laborious than in the fall, or even in the spring. It is not the thing to do before departing on an extensive vacation, for example, for it requires daily watering to maintain a fair chance of establishing a new turf. It also takes extra care in other directions, such as providing a mulch of clean straw to provide shade and some degree of coolness for the tender young sprouts of the grass you hope you can transform into a rich carpet during the next year.

But my project was successful. Now as the orthodox lawn-making season begins, I have a healthy and attractive stand of new grass where otherwise I would have invited a tangle of weeds during the same period.

To repeat: if you have a convenient choice, fall is the best time to start a lawn, spring is next best. But if you are impatient, or the victim of an accident such as I was, it can be done anytime, with additional investment of energy and time.

The Stanley brothers sold their firm and retired in 1917.

What happened to the steam car? Other companies made them successfully. There were such names as a White, a Mac Donald, a Detroit, a Coats (which lasted into the 1920's) and the Doble which was built until the 1930's. One of the final blows to the steam car was the invention of the self starter for the gasoline engine.

The steam car then drifted out of production and became a well-remembered relic of motoring.

Many Accidents Not Caused by Driver's Error

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Speed and carelessness are two words which appear on more automobile accident reports than any others, but not every accident can be blamed on these two gremlins.

While both are often contributing factors, some accidents might never have happened if a third element had not been present at the time.

A case in point occurred in Outagamie County last year where, among the debris of a two car, three-person fatal accident, the body of a dead rat was found.

Theories advanced at the scene were that the rat was in the car (which was often parked in a barn where rats were known to live) and became frightened when the car was being driven down the road.

The rat may have jumped into the driver's lap causing the driver to swerve into the other lane of traffic and collide with the second car.

Coroner's Report

An investigation by the coroner's office and the sheriff's department skipped lightly over the dead rat and placed the blame on carelessness and speed, mixed with a high reading of alcohol in the driver's blood.

Whether or not the rat's body lying among the debris on the highway was a third element in the case is not really known to this date.

Today's modern automobile is equipped with a great amount of power. The power in the machine is transferred to speed with the pushing of the accelerator. Often the power in the machine is the third element in the accident.

A second case in point, again in Outagamie County, showed where a light American-made compact car was involved in an accident after the car began "jumping wildly all over the road," according to one of the passengers.

The driver increased his speed to pass a truck, the light car began bouncing across the highway and into the path of an oncoming car. Three persons were injured and one died. Speed of course was the reason given for the accident, but a larger car might have passed the truck with ease.

Sudden Reactions

In all too many instances, the cause of an accident is the unexpected. There are no records kept which show how many animals or children dart onto the highway in the path of an oncoming motorist which makes the motorist suddenly react to an emergency situation.

In Outagamie County early one sunny Sunday morning, a convertible suddenly went off the road, hit a culvert and flipped over, killing one person and seriously injuring another. Authorities said the driver may have gone to sleep, but some witnesses to the accident recalled seeing a small dog lying beside the mangled car seconds after the accident. The dog was never found.

It could have been the motorist spotted the dog, swerved instinctively to miss him, hit the culvert. The dog, wounded by his ordeal could have limped off to mend his wounds or to die miles from the accident.

No Earl Austin of Tulsa really isn't holding up the front end of his lumber truck—but he was held up in making deliveries. It seems the load of lumber on the truck shifted as he started to drive up a slight grade. This caused the truck to get up in the air. Austin said it wasn't a sudden move, but that it "just tilted back." The truck had to be unloaded to get it back to earth. (AP Wirephoto)

No account is kept of the numbers of minor accidents in which the driver is suddenly "leaped upon" by a bounding deer from a roadside ditch. Cows which wander onto the county and rural roads during the night are frequent causes of accidents when motorists swerve to avoid contact.

Other factors such as highway and street planning are third elements in the accident. One case in Outagamie County last year involved a head-on accident in which four persons were injured and one person died.

The driver of one car on a blacktopped road which had not been marked with a yellow line in the middle of the road, apparently was never aware of the fact that his car was traveling at a high rate of speed somewhere to the left of the center of the road. He drove his car into a sudden curve and crashed head-on with a second car.

No Markers

The road had recently been blacktopped and the yellow lane markers had not been painted, pictures taken at the accident showed.

City police are aware of accidents being caused by motorists who divert their attention from the road for one second to light a cigaret, tune in the radio, punish children, attempt to read street signs or house numbers, drop a cigaret or watch a pretty girl.

There is not enough time in the course of an investigation to show how many accidents are caused when the brakes fail, or when the headlights suddenly go dim and the driver loses contact with the road. Insurance studies, however, show that the mechanical failure in a car does not get the credit due it for causes of automobile accidents.

Take to the Road . . . View Nature's Scenery

October is a beautiful month for a family junket by car over Wisconsin highways and byways. Autumn is at her glowing best in any direction . . . a huge natural painting there to enjoy for those who will but look. Make it a worthwhile trip long enough to get out and stretch and eat one last picnic meal. Food is no problem if the half-way point meal is centered on the multi-purpose "Car-Wich" with wholesome cookies, fresh fruit and thermos jug of hot cocoa, coffee or cold milk and pop if preferred.

PICNIC MEAT LOAF "CAR WICH"

- 1 cup tomato juice
- 3/4 cup grated carrot
- 3/4 cup instant mashed potato granules
- 3/4 cup finely chopped celery
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- 1 tablespoon instant minced onion
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 2 pounds ground Beef

- 1 loaf of dark bread, sliced
- Mustard and butter
- Sliced tomatoes
- Pickle slices
- Lettuce

In mixing bowl combine first nine ingredients, mixing thoroughly. Add meat, mixing mixture well. Pack into greased loaf pan. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven for an hour and 15 minutes. Chill before slicing "loaf" for sandwiches.

Cut two slices for each Car Wich. Spread one slice of meat with mustard, the other with butter (or mayonnaise). Insert meat slices. Wrap each sandwich made at this stage in moisture proof material to keep them fresh. Carry them packed in portable refrigerators or cooler. Wrap the lettuce, tomatoes and pickles separately in plastic bags or transparent film wrap. These can be added to the meat sandwiches at the picnic site, just before serving time.

PINEAPPLE DROP COOKIES

- 3 cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 3/4 cup vegetable shortening
- 3/4 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 2 eggs
- 2/3 cup drained, crushed pineapple
- 1 cup walnuts, chopped

Sift together flour, salt, baking powder and soda, set aside. Cream shortening, add brown and white sugars gradually, creaming thoroughly with each addition. Blend in lemon peel and eggs, beating well. Add crushed pineapple, then flour mixture, blending thoroughly. Fold in chopped nuts. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheets. Bake in preheated 375 degrees oven from 12 to 15 minutes. Recipe makes about four dozen cookies.

Taxing Nonresidents

Gov. Reynolds has somewhat indignant-ly rejected a bill passed by the legislature earlier in the year that would have modified the requirements upon nonresidents to pay Wisconsin state income taxes, and excuse some of them altogether.

As we see it, the technical points of the dispute between the lawmakers and the governor on the tax liability of persons who do not live in Wisconsin are immaterial. The issue the state should face, as a matter of community conscience and self-respect, is whether it has any right whatever to claim income taxes from persons because of the circumstance that they may earn an occasional dollar here.

A fair and decent rule for taxation should be that liability should accompany eligibility for the public services which are provided by the tax collections.

To illustrate: A truck driver or a railroad engineer employed in Chicago might in the course of his employment be required to drive his truck or his train over Wisconsin routes to reach a destination in Minneapolis. Under present law he owes the Wisconsin state treasury a pro rata share of income taxes.

When John Unitas comes to City Stadium at Green Bay to perform for the Baltimore Colts in competition with the Packers, in a technical sense under present

Wisconsin law he owes the state treasury a tax on that share of his salary attributable to that game. Or when Joseph Cotten performs at a Milwaukee theatre, he has a bill to settle with the state income tax department.

This can become a ridiculous harassment for many transient visitors to Wisconsin. What is even more demeaning, in our view, is that it is not quite honest. Mr. Unitas, if he decided to take some post-graduate training, would be assessed a non-resident fee at the University of Wisconsin or any one of the state supported colleges. If he said that he was a Wisconsin taxpayer he would be laughed out of the registrar's office. Similarly, the Chicago driver who "earns", arithmetically speaking, a small part of his weekly wage because he made a round trip to Minneapolis is not eligible for Wisconsin public services because he is a nonresident.

This scheme of taxing nonresidents — and nonvoters — was quietly written into the income tax laws with the enactment of the withholding law two years ago. It was one of the reasons why the authors of that law were able to claim that it would increase yields. But it is a sneaky and troublesome device, which will irritate thousands of persons and contribute unfavorably to the Wisconsin "image" about which our policymakers pretend to be so concerned.

France and the Future

In a speech last week before a cheering throng in Lyons, France, President de Gaulle dug the gulf between France and her allies a little wider, at least on the emotional side.

De Gaulle referred to the United Nations as "a useful forum" but that France would never consent to it becoming a superstate "that would pretend to impose on us anything that concerns us." Most of the other members of the U.N. probably feel the same way. The U.N. simply does not have either the strength or the leadership to warrant much power.

But De Gaulle also emphasized that "we reject" anything connected with NATO which would order the disposition of French troops or take away any responsibility for "our defense." He has no intention of signing a nuclear test ban treaty since in so doing "we will turn over to the Anglo-Saxons all our chances of life and all our chances of death, and certainly our economic possibilities of tomorrow." Only toward West Germany did De Gaulle hold out promises of more cooperation than now exists.

De Gaulle has done a remarkable job for France. He brought it back from the brink of political chaos with his constitutional reforms. He managed to get it out of its North African colonies without too great a loss, either of manpower or national pride. He has put France in a position of economic leadership within Europe and dictated much of the way the Common Market would go. He must be counted as one of the great leaders of the decades since World War II.

Nor do we challenge very much his attempt to restore some semblance of national pride to the French. Almost everyone needs something to which he can swear allegiance, and loyalty to home, community, church or nation is not in itself either evil or dangerous. De Gaulle is not threatening to conquer the world.

But De Gaulle is not a young man. His days of leadership cannot go on much longer. Now that he has rebuilt France—and much of it has been through his image of arrogance and remarkable self-assurance—he must be most seriously concerned with tomorrow. Can the French leaders who come after him actually maintain this isolationism in the divided world of this century?

De Gaulle is understandably trying to woo the West Germans from their reliance upon the United States. He wants France to be the dominant power, militarily and economically, in Europe. But how can France afford the tremendous cost of building a really effective nuclear power? We must suspect that this, too, is primarily for the effect of building and maintaining French national pride. De Gaulle undoubtedly relies upon the belief that, in any case, the other NATO members would come to France's help if she were attacked.

But the assumption is dangerous. In part France was left to her own appallingly backward military resources when Nazi Germany became aggressive because of the enemies she had made in victory after World War I. The United States isolationism grew not only from its own history but from its disillusion over the Treaty of Versailles.

De Gaulle has also suggested that France's independence and strength might prove of use to nations "cut in two or three" by foreign powers. This was obviously a reiteration of the French offer to give some sort of help to the government of South Viet Nam if it desires unity and peace. Again it was a challenge to the United States which may not be doing very well in Viet Nam but our record is so far better than that of the French who lost all of Indochina at Dienbienphu.

How much difference De Gaulle's attitude makes in the economic agreements within the Common Market is hard to determine. It is likely that there will be little change since the EEC is advantageous to France and obviously so. And it so far is no threat to the loyalty to France of Frenchmen. De Gaulle's attitude may in fact help the U.S. in its economic dealings with the Common Market.

But nuclear weapons in French hands give France the opportunity of plunging all of us into war. De Gaulle wants this right. But in his sneering at the West he has conveniently forgotten that "Anglo-Saxons" saved his nation in two major wars and the United States aid through the Marshall plan gave France the opportunity to build itself back to economic health. De Gaulle might be wise enough not to lead France toward another war—and he obviously now believes there is little to fear in the near future from Soviet Russia. But will the Frenchmen who come after him who have been led to believe once again that France is invincible?

The Kennedy Round of Tariff Talks

Despite the unsettled poultry dispute, plans are moving ahead for the so-called Kennedy round of tariff talks next year. At a conference in Geneva the whole level of tariffs between the United States and the European Common Market will be considered. The United States enters the discussions armed with the authority granted by Congress to reduce American tariffs by as much as 50 per cent if the Common Market will grant similar concessions.

Appointment of a steering committee to expedite the discussions is now being considered by high officials of the Common Market in Brussels. The group would be composed of envoys armed with political power from the EEC, the United States, from third countries and from the international trade organization known as GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade).

The steering committee would be empowered to make the necessary political decisions to expedite tariff agreements. It is designed to prevent the conference from bogging down while technical experts wrangle over details. Several years ago similar negotiations threatened to collapse until representatives with political authority met privately and made necessary basic decisions, leaving the technicians to work out the details.

The idea is said to have received encouraging support from the United States.

At the same time pressure is building up from the outside on the Common Market to enter into the discussions with a constructive attitude. The so-called "Outer Seven," members of the European Free Trade Association, told the United States their group would prove to be "the real partners" of the U.S. when the talks get under way. EFTA members are Britain, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Austria, Switzerland and Portugal.

Gunnar Lange, Swedish Minister of Commerce, said that "every single EFTA country is solidly behind the effort to make the Kennedy round a success." And then he warned that the greatest danger to success of the talks stems from the fact that the Common Market has not yet arrived at a common agricultural policy. He intimated that the current poultry dispute is just one example of the difficulties the United States will have in negotiating with the Common Market, particularly on agricultural items.

The French veto of British membership in the Common Market brought the EFTA nations closer together, Lange continued. And by implication again, he hinted that EFTA is ready to do business with the United States should the Common Market find difficulties doing so.

The EFTA position arms United States negotiators with another weapon when they sit down next spring with Common Market representatives.

President's Foreign Policy Remarks Reveal New Maturity

BY ERIC SEVAREID

The President made many conservation speeches during his politics-cum-conservation swing, and he talked politics in many private conversations, but nothing he said on either subject matches in importance and fascination what he said about the world at large. More specifically, it is what he said about America's attitude toward the world that marks some kind of turning point in the thinking of this young President, who has been conducting his education in public these three years.

Sevareid

He emphasizes the hard necessity of building in this country an economic, moral and intellectual society strong enough to support American involvements all around the world. This may sound unexceptional, but it is not; somewhere along the line since the war, the cart and the horse have changed places. For a number of years after the war the preaching was the opposite: that we were fighting and spending and containing in order to establish and preserve a world structure that would allow our own domestic structure to remain strong in freedom. Our foreign policy was called one of enlightened self-interest. Now, perhaps, we should call our domestic policy one of enlightened world interest. It comes down, of course to one coin with two sides, yet this switch of emphasis is something the historians will mark.

HE'S OLDER PRESIDENT

His Salt Lake speech struck me as the reflections of an older President, as the conclusions of a man far removed from the brash, optimistic New Frontiersman who believed that problems are to be "solved," not merely ameliorated, no matter how far away they are, no matter how fundamentally resistant to alien influence. Mr. Kennedy is a wiser, if not a sadder man today. His phrases at Salt Lake were a series of little trip hammer blows to those who had come to believe he would never recognize these truths:

"We must acknowledge the realities of the world" . . . "We cannot remake other nations in our own image, nor can we enact their laws, nor can we operate their governments, nor can we dictate their policies" . . . "We must recognize that every nation determines its policy in terms of its own interests" . . . "The purpose of foreign policy is not to provide an outlet for our sentiments of hope or indignation; it is to shape real events in a real world."

This, in a fairly compact nutshell, is the philosophy of foreign policy that a number of American observers have been trying to encourage in the last few years, and who have, often enough, been called cynics or "tired liberals" for their pains.

There is an irony in the President's Salt Lake speech that seems to have gone unnoticed. It was duly reported that the speech was directed at the extreme right, at Goldwaterism, at those who blindly insist that we somehow cause Castro to vanish, that we simply stop doing business with all iron curtain countries, that we sign no papers with Russia, that we swat left-wing upstarts like Sukarno back into place.

LIBERALS ALSO TARGET

No doubt, Goldwaterism was the President's intended target, and he hit it. The irony of the affair lies in the fact that he also hit Goldwater's left-liberal opponents, whether he intended to or not. He struck all those who believe that if only we had been nicer to Castro at the beginning all would be different with Cuba, that we have somehow bungled the Dominican Republic out of its infant democracy, that recent events in Argentina, Peru and Brazil are somehow the fault of Washington, that we can not only eliminate Diem in Viet Nam but guarantee his replacement by a regime not only democratic but full of military ardor and efficiency.

When the President warned that our policy "seems to have lost the black-and-white clarity of simpler times" he was warning — or he should have been warning — all those, both left and right, who simply cannot bring themselves to accept that the world, in Mr. Kennedy's words, "is full of contradiction and confusion." He was warning not only those on the right who think "the American way of life" is a convertible currency, but those on the left, who, with equal arrogance, believe all the modern equivalents of Woodrow Wilson's famous remark, "We will teach the Mexicans to elect good men."

In one other phrase, the President expressed what the basic American world posture should be because it must be: "Our interest is best served by preserving and protecting a world of diversity in which no monolithic power can acquire the ability to dominate freedom."

An all-conquering tyranny we shall resist to the end. Petty, local or temporary tyrannies we shall often have to abide.

Winston Churchill, a better phrase - maker than anyone around the President, wrote the recipe in four words: "Tolerance, variety and calm."

Editor, Post-Crescent:

On Sunday, Sept. 29, you printed a letter from a Mr. Herbstreich attacking the League of Women Voters' opposition to the "Liberty" Amendment. Like any good democratic leader, Mrs. Clausen had a consensus of the expressed opinions of her constituents at hand and in mind when she testified. Neither she nor Mr. Byrnes is undemocratic for failing to take a vote on each item before speaking. I know of no more articulate group of women than those who belong to the League of Women Voters and if Mrs. Clausen's testimony was out of line, she has heard about it. This member is quite satisfied with her stand.

That amendment of the Constitution is possible is testimony of the wisdom and humility of its authors. The first ten amendments grew from the experience of Americans with authoritarian government. The fourteenth and nineteenth amendments reflect social change. The eighteenth reminds us that principles not policies should be so spelled out. We do not attack the right of any group to propose changes; we have an obligation to express an informed opinion about the wisdom of such proposals. To the end of public understanding, I would have liked Mr. Herbstreich to devote more space to an explanation of how the Wisconsin Economic Freedom Committee wish to amend Liberty. Voters as a whole deserve an opportunity to learn more about it.

I am writing to express my own opinion and do not represent the League of Women Voters.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success; Packer Story Today a Fantastic One

BY JOHN TORINUS

The Packers have been getting such gobs of nationwide publicity in the last few years that some of us active in the Packer corporate management wish some of it could be saved for lean years which may be lingering in the wings ready to make entrance in the future.

It was not so many years ago when the new stadium was built at Green Bay. I was publicity chairman for the community celebration that was arranged to observe the event. We were trying desperately to get a story in Life Magazine. I had several personal contacts in the management of Life and even went to New York to try and sell the idea. They listened, but they finally said no. The reason: They said the Packer story was too well known already; there was no point in repeating it.

Back in those years when we were winning one or two ball games a season the executive committee used to sit around for hours trying to figure out new gimmicks to sell tickets. The old-timer on the committee, Lee Joannes, who was president for about 15 years back in the formative days, would lay it on the line: "Look boys, the only way we're going to sell tickets is by winning a few ball games."

How right he was. Even Lee couldn't anticipate the team winning three division championships in a row and the success it would bring. The current prosperity of the Packer organization can be described in no less a term than "fantastic."

One of the high points in nation-wide publicity was reached a few weeks ago when Business Week Magazine carried a feature story about the Packers. This certainly is one of the last places one would expect to find such a story. It was written on the theme that pro football today is big business, and it analyzed the unique way in which the Packer corporation functions.

As we here so well know, the team is owned by some 1,600 stockholders, most of whom reside in this area. But no dividend can ever be paid these stockholders out of profits, and even in the unlikely event the corporation was liquidated, they would not get even their $25 per share back. The Articles of Incorporation specifically provide that in the event of liquidation all proceeds go to the Green Bay American Legion post and to the Community Chest.

This is why it was always silly to talk about Green Bay losing its franchise. National Football League franchises are irrevocable; the league never can call them in or sell them. The only way the franchise ever could be transferred out of Green Bay is if a majority of the stockholders, all residents of this area, would vote to sell the team, in the full knowledge that they would not receive a dime in return from such a sale.

Actually bankruptcy was the only danger to the existence of the Packers. And while this was a real threat several times in the past, Packer fans from the whole area always came up with the necessary funds to bail things out. The present management is salting away current profits in reserve funds so that this never will be necessary.

I have always thought that the real reason that Green Bay is the sole remaining charter member of the National Football League (the Bears were chartered as the Staleys of Decatur) is the management of the corporation's affairs which has been contributed gratis over the years by the principal businessmen of this area, those who have served as directors, executive committee members and officers of the corporation. Having no personal financial interest in Packer affairs, they have contributed farsighted vision to its management in large quantities.

Today, Vince Lombardi, as general manager, contributes as much to this financial success as he does as head coach. But still the final policy decisions are in the hands of volunteer corporate officers and the teamwork between the general manager and the executive committee has been as effective as the teamwork on the field.

There is another major factor which has contributed to the Packer success story. It is the team's support at the gate which has come from this entire area plus the Milwaukee area.

If the Packers had been dependent solely on the Green Bay metropolitan area over the years they would have folded long ago. The Packer management was foresighted in this direction and decided way back in the 1930's that games had to be divided between Green Bay and Milwaukee to achieve this state-wide support.

The proximity of Fox River Valley communities like the Fox Cities and Oshkosh is part of the Green Bay story. Actually this is a larger metropolitan area than Green Bay (113,339 population compared with 101,266, according to Standard Rate and Data). This was dramatically demonstrated when the new stadium was constructed on Highway 41, making it almost as accessible to the Fox Cities as sections of Green Bay.

There were members of the Packer board who were horrified at the thought of building a new stadium of 32,000 seats compared with the capacity of the old stadium of about 24,000. They feared the seats never would be filled. And the fact that 42,000 are now sold out on a season ticket basis is as much due to the rapid growth of this area as it is to the success of the ball game.

Business Week quotes Mr. Lombardi as saying that the population potential justifies the Packers planning ultimately for a stadium of some 56,000 capacity.

There is one little irritant in this regard. In all the publicity that the Packers and Green Bay are getting these days, this matter of support from a large area, particularly the Fox River Valley, is seldom mentioned.

I know the Packer management recognizes the value of this support. But sometimes the publicity boys are apt to forget it.

Limited Access Proposal Debate Expected in Fall

A proposal to permit counties to establish limited access county trunks and another proposal to merge county police patrols with the state patrol are scheduled for debate or action in the state legislature this fall.

Bill 321-S, the proposal to permit counties to establish limited access, has been passed by the Senate and is awaiting fall action in the Assembly.

The proposal allows the county board to designate as controlled-access highways, the portions of the county trunk system on which studies find the average traffic is in excess of 2,000 vehicles per 24-hour day.

The designation should not be on any portion of the highway which lies within an incorporated village or city.

The power of designating the access roadways has been previously left up to the state highway department and counties do not have the power to change them.

Bill 488-A, the merger of county and state police units, did not receive any vote and was held over until the fall session of legislature.

The bill provides that county police shall become state employees under Civil Service and salaries shall not be below the minimum of the scale of traffic patrolmen.

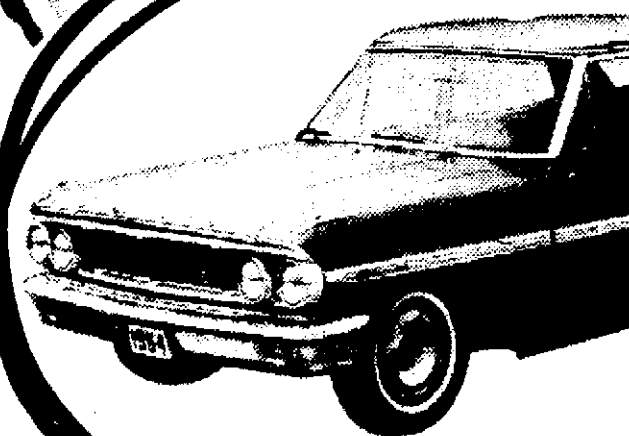

Each county would be allowed to choose to come under the system and the motor vehicle department which has control of the state patrol is to provide a traffic police force in the county at least equal to the force patrolling in the county before the transfer is made.

The motor vehicle department also would purchase all the county's police equipment which would become surplus to the county.

much of the KHS Broadcaster photography and processing. This year he was appointed photo editor of the high school yearbook, the Papyrus.

In September, 1961, he began his present job, as a photographer and darkroom worker for Lattimer Studios, Kaukauna. Today he is a full-fledged professional, doing much of the studio's work.

For the last year, Dale's by-line has appeared frequently on his free-lance photos on the pages of the Post-Crescent. This summer, in addition to his job at the studio, Dale also was employed on a part-time basis at the Post-Crescent. He now is handling many of the Kaukauna Post-Crescent office's photo assignments, going to school and working at the studio.

Looking to the future, Dale says he one day hopes to take a part-time job as a rock-and-roll disk jockey under the name Daley Bugle. He has a good start here, too. He has been handling the engineering end of the radio version of Marshall Granros' VIEW column, the People Sing, at WAPL.

As far as his career is concerned, Dale's not certain what field he wants to enter. But after graduating from high school, he plans either to study liberal arts at St. Norbert College, or, if he can obtain a scholarship, enter the Conservatory of Music at Lawrence College.

Teen of the Week

Musician, Photographer, Engineer, Dale Sachs Develops Many Talents

It's not uncommon to read about a teenager who possesses some extraordinary talent, but it is rare to find a youth still in his teens who has developed a multitude of talents to a higher level than most adults.

Such a youth is Dale Sachs, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Sachs, 109 E. Ninth St., Kaukauna. Although he is only a senior at Kaukauna High, Dale already has a host of trades—musician, photographer, radio engineer—and he does a profession job at all.

Dale's first love was music. He joined the Kaukauna Junior Band while still in fifth grade at St. Mary Catholic School. When he was in eighth grade, at the band director's request, he was excused from some classes to practice his trumpet with the high school band.

Music Citations

Since he started high school, Dale has won a number of music citations. In his freshman year, he won third place in class C trumpet solo at the regional band festival. As a sophomore, he took the same award in class B trumpet. He also took third place with three other KHS trumpeters in a class B trumpet quartet.

This summer, Dale was one of three KHS students awarded a Band Parents Association scholarship to the two-week University of Wisconsin Summer Music Clinic. He says the clinic was one of the better experiences in music he has had, because he received a better understanding of music theory and a better knowledge and appreciation of classical music, as well as having the experience of playing under renowned conductors.

The big folk music boom also has reached Dale. He currently is learning to play the guitar along with a friend who dropped from a Kaukauna rock and roll combo. His folk music idols are Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs.

In his freshman year, Dale decided photography might be interesting, so he joined the KHS Kamera Klub. With only a few weeks of practice, he took over The forthcoming Bloodmobile visit is discussed by Wayne Long, Neenah Red Cross Chapter Blood Bank chairman, and Mrs. Fred Grupe, chairman of volunteers for the Neenah Chapter. Long is also chairman of the executive committee of Badger-Regional Bloodmobile.

Blood Bank Center Fills Vital Need for Twin City Residents

NEENAH — The circulation of blood through the body at the rate of five quarts per minute has been often called an "amazing transportation system." Equally amazing, however, is the transportation of blood from Twin City donors to the Red Cross blood bank center, then to hospitals and through them into the veins of persons who need that blood to regain their health.

This transportation of donated blood from the veins of Menasha and Neenah donors fulfills a vital human need and represents the very basis of American Red Cross chapter activity — neighbors helping neighbors.

Theda Clark Memorial hospital, for example, last year used over 1,000 pints of blood for its patients. This is Twin City donated blood, given by donors to the blood bank program to help restore other Twin City residents to health. The blood to those who need it is given without charge except for the nominal fee charged by the hospital for administering the blood.

First Visit

The first fall visit of the Badger-Regional Bloodmobile in Neenah-Menasha will be Oct. 14 and 15 at the Neenah Presbyterian church fellowship hall. Donors are needed to give 148 pints each of the two days for the visit quota of 296 pints.

The blood bank hours will be from noon to 5:30 Monday, Oct. 14, and from 10 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon Tuesday, Oct. 15.

Both Menasha and Neenah blood bank chairmen emphasize that the important part of the blood bank program is in the keeping of appointments by the donors. "We get enough donors scheduled during the two day visits but something happens to the donors. They fail to keep their appointments."

"Because of this laxness, we failed to make our quotas during the last two visits by the bloodmobile," said the Twin City chairmen. "We cannot stress strongly enough the importance of keeping appointments by our Twin City donors."

"Ways to recruit new donors and to get people to keep their appointments will be among the topic discussed by area chapter chairmen and blood bank volunteers during the Badger Regional's annual meeting at Madison Oct. 9."

Executive Committee

Wayne Long, Neenah chapter blood bank chairman, is chairman of the Badger Regional executive committee. Highlights of the program next Wednesday will be a talk and demonstration by Dr. William Young, head of the heart surgery team at the University hospital in Madison. His demonstration will be of the mechanical heart-lung machine used during heart surgery.

Vernon Ostenby, administrative director of the Midwest Blood Bank program, will discuss new developments in the blood program of the Red Cross.

The Twin Cities also will be represented at the meeting by Mrs. Fred Grupe and Mrs. Robert Tuttrup of the Neenah chapter blood bank program, and Mrs. Carl Forslund and Mrs. Anthony Thelen, of the Menasha chapter.

Long said that the Neenah chapter is making plans to follow through on blood recruitment during the Oct. 14 and 15 visit.

Mrs. Anthony Thelen, left, and Mrs. Carl Forslund are co-chairmen of Blood Bank volunteers for the Menasha Chapter, American Red Cross.

Two employees of Badger-Regional Blood Center, Bill Johnson and Edward Ripp, set up equipment for the Neenah-Menasha visit.

Canteen workers for the Bloodmobile visit included Mrs. Walter Brous, left, canteen chairman, Mrs. Al Lang and Mrs. Frank Staniak.

New Ways to Aid Your Dog Told by 'Vet'

BY BUD LARIMER

During a recent conversation with one of our local vets, we touched on the astonishing number and variety of laboratories and experiment stations that are "big business" as they create and perfect new ways and means to aid your dog to be happier and healthier.

We thought that you dog owners might be interested in hearing about a few of the more recent developments. These products are on the market at nominal cost, and further information about them is available to all interested persons.

Our friend the vet set down a comment or two and a brief description of the following five:

"It seems that the American public has been educated to seek out 'the new'—six headlights on the new buggy as opposed to four on the old one, and so forth. The same pressures apply in the drug industry in that a company that discovers and markets a new drug may make a sizeable profit.

"However, in the race to do this it is inevitable that some of the discoveries are not going to be as useful as others. Many old remedies have withstood the onslaught of waves of 'new' and are still first in their class. So let's not ignore old and proven drugs or procedure in the effort to keep up with all the new things.

"Of course, progress and improvements are made and should not be overlooked. Following are examples of some new products which seem to have merit.

"1) Oral insecticide for fleas, lice and ticks. The medicine is absorbed from the intestinal tract of the dog or cat and is taken into the insect's body from the dog's or cat's blood stream.

"2) An injectable drug for control of estrus in bitches. The manufacturer claims that an injection of the drug will delay heat in a bitch for six months. Or if the bitch is already in heat, it will take her out of heat. This should be a boon to hunters whose dogs have a cycle which puts them in heat during the hunting season. It can also be used on female cats which tend to be rather noisy and bothersome during heat.

"3) Geriatric pills. The palatable pill has a balanced formula of male and female hormones, vitamins and minerals, and has a definite rejuvenating action in the older dog.

Lack of Nausea

"4) An injectable wormer. It is used only for hookworms. The advantages are a lack of nausea that oral wormers sometimes cause, and the fact that it can also be used on dogs where it is impossible to worm orally.

"5) An oral fungicide. Ringworm is quite common in cats, and a three week to one-month treatment with this, drug is quite effective. It is also used on fungus dermatitis in the dog."

Sept. 15 was a delightful day for the Manitowoc Kennel Club's equally delightful show. This was an unbench, joint show and every one seemed to be enjoying himself very much.

As seems to be inevitable, the judging ran late, but everyone was co-operative in getting wins polished off with time left for those intensive after-show "post mortems" that are so much a part of adherents of the rings and their hobby.

There was a nice turnout by members of the Oshkosh Kennel Club. A black-and-tan Doxie bitch owned by Mrs. Vera Schultz went Best of Opposite Sex; a black cocker bitch owned by Mrs. William Pryor won the American Bred class; a red-and-white parti-cocker owned by Mrs. John Bengston got Best of Variety and an Afghan Hound owned by Dr. Earl Winter won Open Class, Winners Male.

Several other members were present to observe and root for those handling. Two six-month-old Giant Schnauzer bitches owned by Mrs. Lucille Kummars got their second C.D. leg with really astounding scores.

Their scores at Cambridge, Wis., the previous week-end were equally impressive, for their first leg. They will compete a third time at Waukesha Sept. 28, and if they pass there, will have gained their

C.D. Degree just short of seven months in their first 28, and if they pass there, will have gained their three shows—a unique record, we would think. Both dogs are also being shown in conformation classes.

Good luck and happy hours to all those sporting breeds who will be out now, hustling and bustling to put up those darting targets for their panting owners to miss!

FLASH—Dr. Earl Winter's Ch. Afghan "Shiek" went Best in Show at Beverly Riviera Calif., with an entry of over 3,000!

Bullwinkle—TV Star With Antlers!

Bullwinkle Moose is the only moose in the world who walks on two legs. He is also the only moose who stars in his own television series, "The Bullwinkle Show," on the NBC-TV Network.

Bullwinkle spent his early childhood in the North Woods, an area bounded roughly by the Arctic Circle and the Mason-Dixon Line. At an early age he attended Philpott School for Exceptional Students. He qualified as exceptional, as the only one with antlers.

Later he was graduated from M. I. T. (Moose Institute of Toe-dancing) and immediately entered the armed forces, where he had the distinction of serving in both the Army and Navy. Always inventive, Bullwinkle strung wire between his antlers and spent nine months on the bridge of a destroyer serving as a radar mast. He became the only sailor ever discharged from the Navy for salt-water corrosion. He completed his military career serving as a hattrack in the Fort Blunder Officers Club.

Guided Moosiles

Returning to his home town of Frostbite Falls, Minn., he met Rocky Squirrel and they became fast friends—although everyone knows Bullwinkle is the slower of the two. When they were not engaged in their North Woods pursuits, Bullwinkle at various times served as National Director of Guided Moosiles, as one of the Three Mooskeeters and as a Wyoming worm-rancher.

He is a charter member in the BAMBAMS (Big American Mooses' Benevolent Artistic and Marching Society). Always the sport, Bullwinkle recently qualified as the world's best golf-playing moose by winning the Thundermoose Open.

His strength is amazing. One of his favorite stunts is to tear in half the Frostbite Falls telephone directory, which consists of 12 pages, including the yellow section.

For relaxation, Bullwinkle enjoys curling up in front of a cozy fire with a pile of good books. "They burn so nice and slow," he says.

Sheinwold on Bridge

Bid Vigorously With Good Suit

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Contract bridge is a bidder's game. A player who bids aggressively will get better results than a player of equal skill who bids conservatively.

Mind you, I'm not advising you to bid whenever your turn comes regardless of the cards you hold. When you have a good trump suit, decide all close points in favor of a bid rather than a pass: when you have a poor or doubtful trump suit, watch your step and pass rather than bid.

It's pleasant to be dealt a solid suit of your own so that you can rely on a strong trump suit that you can see with your own eyes, but far more often you must rely on your partner's trump support. From this we get two basic principles of bidding:

1. Never raise partner's suit without proper trump support.

2. When you do hold a proper trump support, raise partner's suit as vigorously as your cards permit.

I discussed the single raise of an overall in this column recently, but didn't mention double and triple raises. They're all very easy to deal with if you assume that your partner has roughly the value of an opening bid for his overall.

For example, suppose that dealer, at your left, opens with one diamond. Your partner overcalls with one heart, and the next player passes.

You should raise with almost any hand that has three or more hearts. Raise to two hearts with a weak hand—say 6 to 9 points. Raise to three with a fair hand—10 or 11 points. Raise to game with 12 or more points.

Here are some typical raises in the bidding situation just given:

S—9 6 2, H—J 8 7 2, D—5, C—A 9 7 4 2.
Raise to two hearts. You have 5 points in high cards (4 points for the ace and 1 point for the jack) and 3 points for the singleton. Your support for hearts is excellent.

S—9 6 2, H—J 8 7 2, D—5, C—A 9 7 4 2.

Raise to three hearts. You have 8 points in high cards (4 points for the ace, 3 points for the king, and 1 point for the jack), and 3 points for the singleton. This double raise invites partner to go on to game, but lets him off the hook if he has made a shabby overall.

S—9 6 2, H—K 8 7 2, D—5, C—A 9 7 4 2.

Raise to four hearts. You have 10 points in high cards (4 points for the ace and 3 points for each king), and 3 points for the singleton. You are willing to try for game even if partner is mildly ashamed of his overall.

Wicked Falsecard

"We must all answer for our wickedness sooner or later," my friend Warren Blank remarked the other night as we hoisted our ice cream sodas after a late game at a Los Angeles bridge club.

"This isn't so wicked," I reassured him. "If you stick to one flavor of ice cream, you're a favorite to get home safely. Just keep under 50 miles per hour when going through red lights."

"I was actually thinking of a bridge hand," Blank broke in. "It happened in the Vanderbilt Team Championship several years ago."

"We were playing against a very good Eastern team," Blank reminisced. "They got a little too high on this hand, but it's hard to censure any particular bid. Both of them pushed a trifle, and the net result was a slight overbid."

"Not so terrible," I agreed. "They should go down one or two tricks if the trumps break reasonably. With the bad break and a diamond opening lead, they should go down two tricks."

"They got a diamond lead," Blank recalled. "My partner led the deuce of diamonds, and I won with the queen. I returned my singleton trump, and here's where the wickedness developed. Declarer played a low trump, and my partner won with the queen of trumps instead of the ten."

"A wicked play, if I ever saw one. Who was this monster of iniquity?"

"Duke Dautell—but don't tell anybody I said so. Just put it in your column."

Swallows Bait

South swallowed the bait. He ruffed the diamond return and led another trump, since a 3-2 trump break would allow him to get out for down one.

Dautell won with the ten of hearts and drew the rest of South's trumps with the ace and king. Then he led his last diamond to let Blank take four diamond tricks.

South was down six, for a loss of 1700 points. His team never recovered from this blow, and the rest of the match was a massacre.

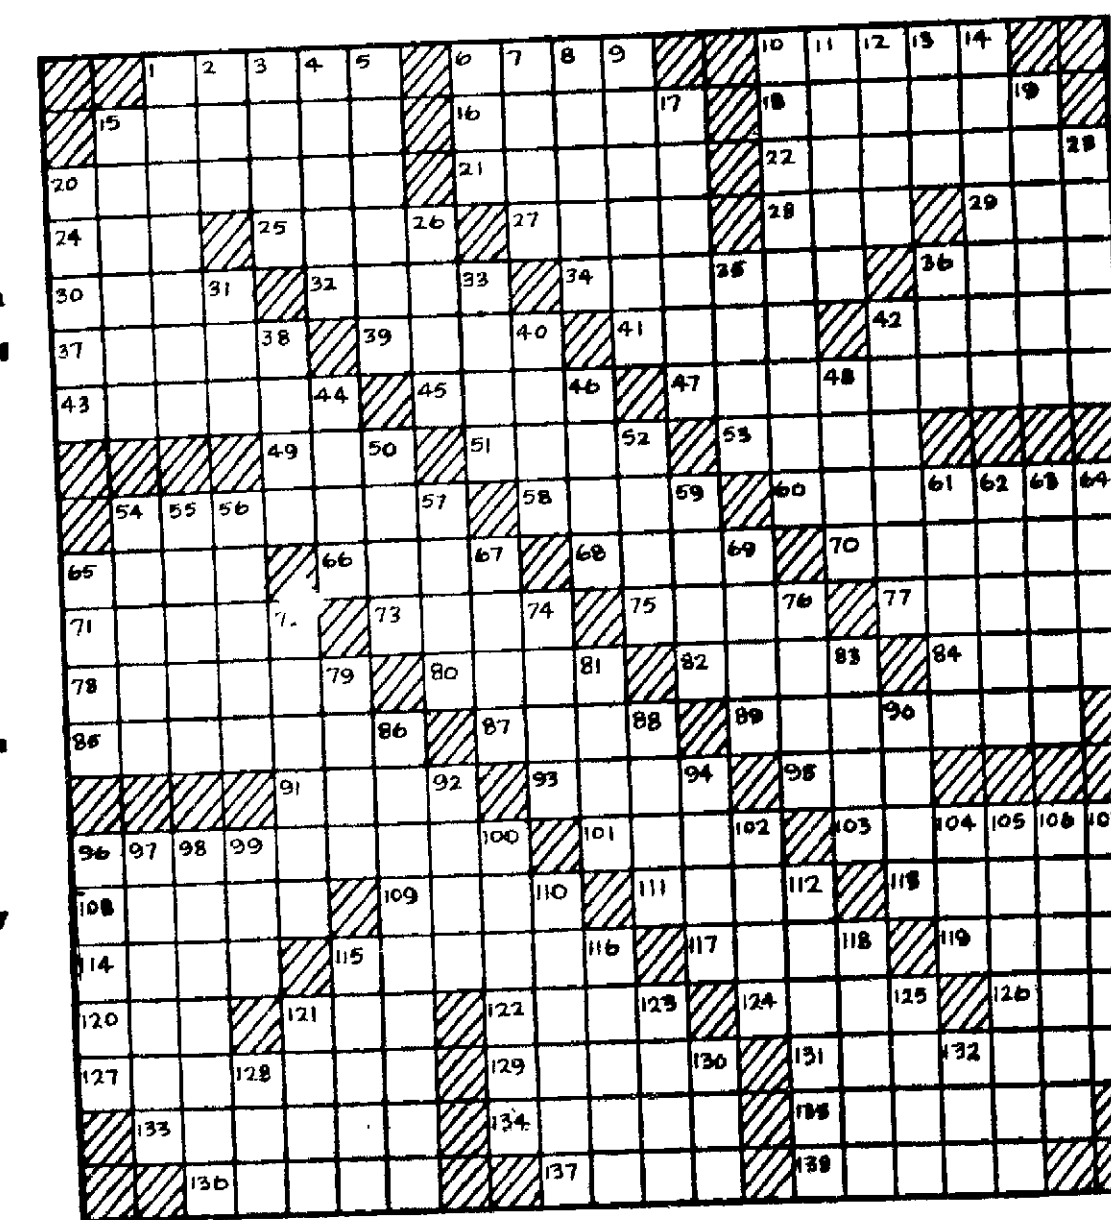

If Dautell had won the first trump with the ten, South would have been warned to leave the trumps alone. He would run his side cards, allowing West to make his trumps by ruffing. This would have kept the loss down to 500 points.

"I sometimes remind him of his wickedness," Blank sighed. "But he just laughs. Do you think a man can sleep peacefully at night with something like this on his conscience?"

I know I wouldn't. I'd have to wake up and laugh now and then.

Store-wide Savings of not less than 20%

Beginning tomorrow, Jandreys celebrates its 97th Birthday with a store-wide sale! Don't miss this exciting event. Come in and save! Quality, as you know, has been a Jandreys policy for these ninety-seven years . . . we want to keep it that way. This year our offerings are most attractive . . . all at prices that save you money . . . always good news! If its quality plus bargains, you'll find them here during this Anniversary Sale.

Comparative prices used in this tabloid reflect either the price at which these goods or comparable goods have sold for in our store before—or the price at which the same goods would have sold for except for the slight irregularities, or (in the case of imported items), the price our buyers feel comparable goods would command if manufactured here.

Irregulars and imported items offered are generally on an allotment basis and when present stocks are sold, no more can be obtained this season.

all-out ASSORTMENTS

Every advertised item backed by a substantial stock. However, we can't be sure it will outlast the sale.

all-out QUALITY

The same good quality for which Jandreys have earned a reputation over many years of retailing.

all-out VALUE

Every item offered represents an outright saving of no less than 20% of the regular retail price.

Enigma Heads Foreign Policy

Dean Rusk Works Best Away From Spotlight

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — In India last May for a conference with Prime Minister Nehru, Dean Rusk learned he was expected to give a pep talk to the U. S. embassy staff next morning. Wherever he goes in the world, the secretary of state is called on to make speeches; the only question usually is when and where.

An aide explained that members of the staff would gather around a large, decorative fish pond in the lobby of the embassy building. Rusk would then speak from a flat stone in the center of the pond.

"What do they want me to do?" he quipped. "Walk on the water?"

Rusk had been secretary of state for 23 months and a request for a miracle would hardly have surprised him — whether it came from a diplomat in New Delhi or from President John F. Kennedy in Washington.

He had worked his way through several major crises, and he had long since learned to confront the improbable, even the impossible situation with cautious optimism for finding some way out.

A diffident, rather self-effacing man, Rusk has even devised ways to dim the spotlight of his personal publicity in one of the world's hottest positions — no small miracle.

As a result he has become something of a Washington mystery. What he stands for in U. S. foreign policy is unclear to the country; the extent of his influence on President Kennedy's decisions often is debated.

Some people have called Rusk a faceless figure in the administration. It seems more accurate to describe him, in words once used by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, as a man with a "passion for anonymity."

A six-footer, weighing 190 pounds, he could be mistaken for a taxi driver, — lawyer, or a bartender, so far as physical appearance goes. He has a quick smile, a little step, even at 54, and more freckles than hair on his gray-fringed head. He is courteous in the southern manner, which traces back to his Georgia rearing. By experience, he is a scholar, soldier, and executive as well as diplomat, with a brilliant record of performance in the pattern of the all-American boy grown up.

Rusk's personal approach to problems calls for a combination of prudence, patience and persistence — and constant hard work. He once quoted the advice of the circuit-riding preacher in his native Georgia: "Pray as if it were up to God; work as if it were up to you."

Rusk has a strong sense of privacy, and he never talks of his own reliance on prayer. But his working days average about 11 hours each, and he spends many hours at his desk every Saturday and Sunday.

New Approach

His optimism — always cautious because Rusk is a cautious man — seems to be an essential part of his capacity to do his massive job. The crises he has had to grapple with are like his speech-making and his travels — here today and there tomorrow. Now nearing the end of his third cabinet year, he has seen the Cold War blaze hotly in Laos, Viet Nam, Berlin, the Middle East, Africa, and twice in Cuba.

One thing he has persistently tried to do is to get across to the officials of other countries that Americans too have their "sensibilities."

He had been in office only a few weeks when he got fed up with talk of what the U. S. was failing to do for their countries. He denounced the notion that co-operation is a one-way street and began hammering home to diplomats the point that Congress and the country must have results from the huge investments in stability and growth abroad.

Rusk's optimism was strained in August 1961 when the Berlin crisis reached a peak of extreme danger with construction of the Communist wall that dammed up violent human emotions on both sides of the city. He worked hard and fast to calm the ensuing storm because he believed it was not the occasion for an all-out showdown with the Soviet Union.

When the occasion did arise, 14 months later, Rusk found himself looking not at Berlin but at Cuba with a direct Soviet missile threat not to Germany but to the United States. He felt the danger of nuclear war between Russia and the U. S. was very great.

Along with everyone in the secret emergency council of about 30 top officials which he helped the President set up, Rusk knew the Soviet missiles had to be taken out of Cuba at any cost. The question was whether they would be taken out peacefully.

In this greatest challenge of his career so far, Rusk supervised the planning work of others along with Undersecretary George Ball, but he withheld his own counsel. He was later criticized in public post-mortems of the crisis for failure to take a position in the policy debates that raged around Kennedy. His explanation is that he deliberately decided to make no judgment until all the facts were in because he would then have to recommend to the President a course of action.

Overall Attitude

Two other steps Rusk took in the Cuba crisis throw light on his over all attitudes toward his job. Early in the crisis, he told a handful of his chief assistants in the State Department:

"For several weeks I will not run the State Department. I will work only on this problem. It is the most important problem in all my years of government service."

He also told Undersecretary Ball that Ball should give his own views directly to the President without clearance by Rusk. Rusk has repeatedly encouraged his subordinates to make decisions and initiate actions on their own authority. He says he has never considered himself in competition with a colleague.

"The problem in government," Rusk remarked once, "is not a struggle for power; it's a struggle to avoid responsibility."

Rusk felt the United States and Russia might be able to sidestep war over Cuba but he was extremely worried throughout the historic week of secret decision-making at the White House. One thing he was sure of; prudent strategy required that, whatever the final decision, Khrushchev must be allowed maximum elbow room to retreat.

Eyeball to Eyeball

In the end, Rusk and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara recommended the strategy of naval blockade which Kennedy announced to the world in his dramatic speech of Oct. 22, 1962.

In the resulting confrontation between U. S. and Soviet power, Rusk, with his gift for a homely summation, visualized Kennedy and Khrushchev standing "eyeball to eyeball."

When he finally went to bed that October night, after Kennedy had drawn the line and the two great nuclear powers were glaring over their missiles, just a hair-trigger pull from Armageddon, Rusk wondered whether mankind would make it.

Awakening next morning, he looked at the fresh, peaceful light flooding through his bedroom window and said to himself: "Well, we're still here."

An unrelenting flood of messages from American ambassadors and ministers in 112 countries pours through Rusk's office seven days a week. Without guiding principles for judging this mass, so much information would produce more chaos than order. One of Rusk's guidelines is the over-riding need he sees for agreements with Russia to reduce the risks of war. The Cuban episode re-enforced this conviction in his mind.

Russian Talks

In his first year in office, Rusk pursued this objective in exploratory talks on Berlin with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, a usually sour-faced man who could easily play the undertaker to Rusk's barter personality. Rusk also tried to reach disarmament agreements, including a nuclear test ban.

But Khrushchev in 1961 was intent on flexing his nuclear muscles — especially after the display of U. S. confusion in the disastrous Bay of Pigs attack on Cuba early in the year. Agreements proved impossible; indeed the East-West situation got worse. Khrushchev broke a three-year moratorium to resume nuclear testing. The "wall crisis" exploded over Berlin.

Dean Rusk

Incidentally, Rusk's role in the policy decisions leading up to the Bay of Pigs episode appeared afterward to have been largely passive.

In those first months of new administration Kennedy was surrounded by advisers whom he knew far better than he knew his secretary of state. The administration's approach to the problem furthermore was based on the view that it raised primarily military and intelligence issues, such questions as whether the invasion would trigger an uprising against Fidel Castro.

Rusk is known to have had a serious reservation about the wisdom of backing the attack on Cuba by the small refugee force that was used. But there was no evidence that he opposed the decision to let the invasion proceed.

Fresh Rounds

The year 1962 opened with new justification for optimism. East and West agreed to start a fresh round of disarmament talks at Geneva. Rusk represented the United States and held more talks with Gromyko but they proved futile.

Following the Cuban crisis last October and November, the situation shifted. Khrushchev had suffered an unprecedented defeat which presumably wiped out in his mind the Kennedy administration's mishandling of the earlier Bay of Pigs crisis. Khrushchev's Cuban setback also sharpened his leadership dispute with Red China. That rift was made worse by Red China's border war with India, which Khrushchev opposed.

These developments led Rusk, though well aware of rifts on the western side also, to begin to talk guardedly about the possibility of great changes in the world. He seems in fact to have underrated the rate of breakdown in the Soviet-Chinese bloc but it was in that quarter that he looked for change. He thought and thinks that the western allies, in spite of their constant quarrels, remain committed to their alliance.

First Step

The renewed search for openings to deal with Russia, in which Rusk played a leading role alongside Kennedy, led finally to the conclusion of the limited nuclear test ban treaty in July. That "first step" has produced in turn the latest round of Rusk-Gromyko talks this fall on other possible accords to lower the risks of war and slow the arms race.

In these events, Rusk has shown himself to be a better diplomat and policy planner than publicist. He is credited by aides with masterminding the numerous moves to get the test ban pact. But the actual negotiating at Moscow was handled by Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman who had not previously been involved in disarmament negotiations.

Rusk's friends in the administration were upset by his deliberate self-denying failure to take credit for anything. So Harriman was instructed only to initial the treaty, and Kennedy sent Rusk to Moscow to sign it. He also had to sound out Premier Khrushchev's views on possible next steps toward better East-West relations.

But Rusk has no real talent for personal publicity. He turned in his usual bland performance. In exploring Khrushchev's views, his mission was a diplomatic success, but it left his public image about as hazy and remote as ever.

To most observers in Washington, Rusk is an enigma. In a highly political town, he lacks the politician's instinct for turning events to his own advantage.

Likes Secrecy

While he has made many speeches and given many television interviews, he does not enjoy news conferences and has held only 21 since he took office. His attitude seems to be due both to his shyness and to a lack of confidence in his own ability to field questions from all corners. This is an unnecessary self-doubt because he is fast, competent and colorful when he lets himself go.

Rusk has a strong instinct for secrecy. He told the press reassuringly in February 1961 that "our democracy works best when its leaders are candid." But about the same time he laid down the modifying view that the "value of the diplomatic channel depends on its privacy."

These two views are in conflict, and the problem of a secretary of state is to balance them off. Rusk prefers to discuss current issues only in very general terms. He thereby preserves diplomatic privacy and discourages public controversy. He also thereby pulls himself away from the spotlight of public interest. That contributes to the mystery that has grown up about him.

Rusk simply does not regard his main job as being to help lead the nation in foreign policy debate. He sees his job as being primarily to work behind the scenes of government and "clear away the underbrush" for presidential policy decisions. The rest is up to the President. In this, Rusk has often been compared unfavorably with stout secretaries of state like Dean Acheson or the late Foster Dulles who actually made foreign policy, subject to presidential approval. In the Kennedy administration it seems clear that on the big questions the policy is made at the White House.

Rusk won the Kennedy appointment as secretary of state because he was recommended by several men whose opinions Kennedy valued highly. These included Dean Acheson, under whom Rusk had served as an assistant secretary of the Far East during the Korean War. Rusk's basic notions of foreign policy were formed at that time.

Brilliant Mind

One of these basic concepts is that problems which the United States deals with should be reduced to their "gut issues." By this means, Rusk found some leeway in 1961 for possible negotiations with Russia on West Berlin. Another idea he developed early is that survival under the threat of nuclear war is a major challenge for 20th Century man, and the United States particularly must learn to live with limited objectives.

Rusk's associates throughout his career seem always to have been impressed with his brilliant mind. A State Department official said recently Rusk has "the greatest capacity I have ever known to consider all sides of any problem simultaneously." He reads swiftly and has a high retentive as well as analytical mind.

His intellectual performance has merited recognition from the beginning of his college years. He was an honor student while working his way through Davidson College, a Presbyterian institution in North Carolina, and a prize scholar at Oxford University in England, where he went on a Rhodes scholarship.

In the 1930s he taught political science at Mills College, Oakland, and studied law at the University of California. His World War I experiences were concentrated in the China-Burma-India theatre where he "flew the hump" to Chungking, China, and otherwise demonstrated physical courage of a high order.

During the Eisenhower administration, Rusk went back to private life as president of the immensely wealthy Rockefeller Foundation. His salary there has been estimated at $50,000 to $75,000 a year over a decade. But he has no personal fortune.

In Washington, he and his wife, who was one of his students at Mills College, live modestly when they have any choice in the matter.

Most evenings, however, they are swept up in official activities. Rusk does his entertaining in the State Department's resplendent new reception and dining rooms and has earned a reputation as a gracious host to kings, presidents, prime ministers and foreign ministers.

Working Arrangement

The "anonymity" of Dean Rusk in spite of his prominence derives partly from the fact that he is personally retiring — a quiet man by choice. It springs also from his working relationship with President Kennedy, the confidential nature of which Rusk guards jealously. The relationship is now much closer than it once was.

During Rusk's first year there were in the White House and in the State Department itself several men of political stature — Adlai Stevenson, Chester Bowles, G. Mennen Williams, presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy and strong-willed men like Secretary McNamara — all of whom were better known to the President or had stronger political positions than Rusk.

Rusk ended the first year with a sweeping shakeup which consolidated his power and demonstrated the extent to which he had won Kennedy's support and confidence. Administration officials now say they believe he is secure in his job for the whole of the President's first term although he may wish to resign or the President may decide to bring in a new man if there is a second term.

One of the best summaries of Rusk's quiet effectiveness as secretary of state — a quality that undoubtedly appeals to the dynamic President he now serves — came foreseeingly from a Japanese diplomat with whom Rusk negotiated back in 1951.

"Without creating bad feelings," the diplomat said, "Rusk is a man who can achieve much."

British Conservative Party Girds for Trouble at Polls

BY ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

BLACKPOOL, England (AP)—Harold Macmillan's Conservative followers are rallying for a back-to-the-wall fight to stay in office.

The 82nd annual conference of Britain's oldest political party opens Wednesday at a time of deepening crisis both for its 13,000,000-plus supporters and for its leader.

After twelve years of power under Sir Winston Churchill, Anthony Eden (now Lord Avon) and Macmillan the party leadership is harassed, divided.

Policies designed for the nation's postwar recovery appear to be losing appeal to voters looking ahead to the late 1960s and 1970s. Setbacks at home and abroad have tarnished the Tory claim to good government.

Labor Success

Successive by-elections have confirmed a swing to the Labor Party which, if repeated in a national ballot, would give laborites a stunning victory.

For 69-year-old Macmillan the convention could be his swan song as party leader. A chorus of demands for his retirement swells with each new governmental reverse. Some of his own followers have argued publicly the party needs a younger, more dynamic leader and a program in tune with the times. Critics suggest the prime minister has about played out his role as their post-Suez savior.

All these things are bound to be the subject of lively backstage talk at the four-day conference. The occasion allows

Tory backwoods-men-and-women-to voice hopes and fears, praise and criticism of their leaders and their policies. But rank-and-file Tories do not vote on such issues as the Laborites do. Nor do they elect their leader. He is handpicked by the king-makers who might happen to be elder statesmen or aristocrats whose ancestors once ruled the land.

Tory Record

Does discontent with Macmillan, or disenchantment with the government, mean the Conservatives have failed Britain? The record suggests no. Certainly there have been Conservative failures.

Internationally the Eden government's involvement with France and Israel seven years ago in the attack on Suez nearly ruined Britain. Yet Macmillan took over from Eden, pieced together the bits of Britain's shattered prestige and romped home in 1959 to the party's third successive electoral victory.

At home, the most embarrassing lapse was over the recent John Profumo affair. The former war minister's liaison with call-girl Christine Keeler, who also dallied with a Russian diplomat, still reverberates through the British political scene.

Most Conservatives nevertheless are proud of their achievements since 1951. They recall Churchill took over from Labor Prime Minister Clement (now Lord) Attlee when Britain was nearly bankrupt; when massive foreign aid propped the economy; when the nation was short of food, overworked, over-taxed, underpaid, underclothed.

Tories claim they have transformed all that. They say Britons today are investing, producing, earning, exporting, consuming and saving more. They insist living standards have never been higher, prices never more stable, expansion never steadier.

Vote for Change

The swing of the political pendulum in most democratic countries shows that people often vote for change. But it is an equal political truth that governments rarely fall in times of prosperity.

Laborites and Liberals claim that British prosperity is surface-deep that the nation is teetering on the razor's edge of insolvency. Macmillan's counter to this in the 1959 election campaign was that Britons "had never had it so good." For this apparent emphasis on material rather than moral well-being the prime minister and his party have been criticized by some churchmen, newspapers and politicians. A certain emphasis on moral and spiritual values is, as a result, creeping back into the declarations of Tory leaders.

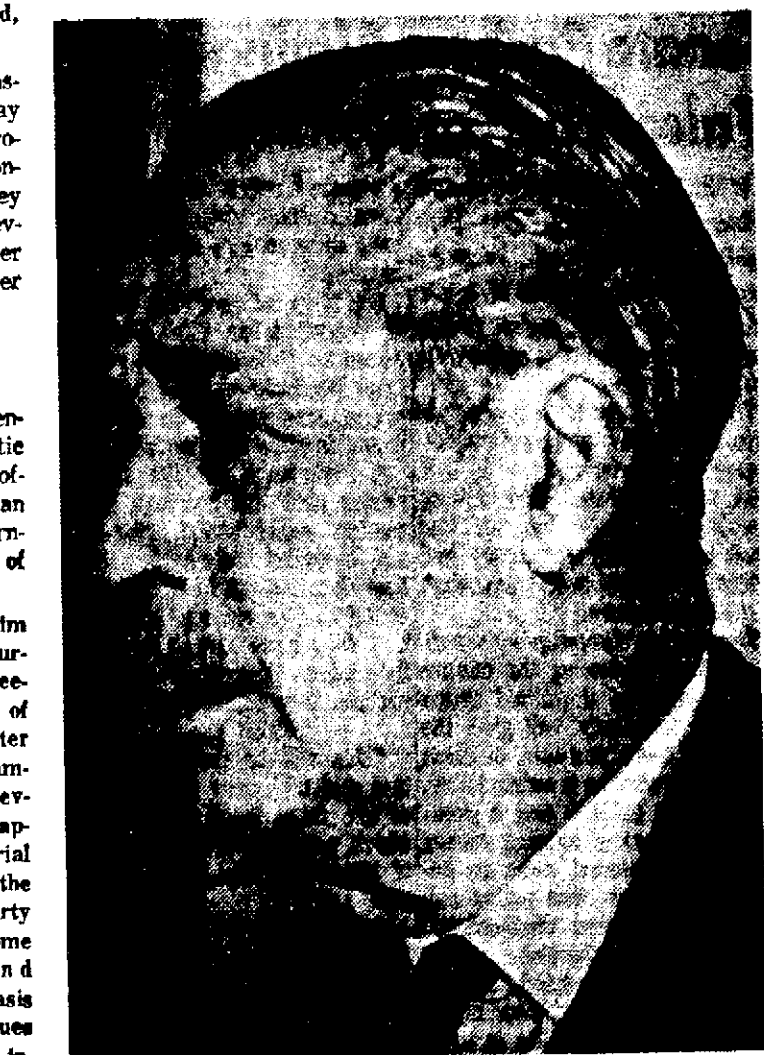

When Macmillan goes who would succeed him?

If there was a clear-cut answer to this Macmillan by now would have retired to an earldom. The truth is that the Conservatives today are divided over the succession. This is rare. It is rare because the kingmakers themselves are split.

Possible Successors

Arch-apostles of true-blue Conservatism like the Marquess of Salisbury — whose forebears once were all-powerful in the affairs of the kingdom — want a man of the right with a sense of Britain's imperial past and global destiny. They have their eyes on Quentin McGarel Hogg, second Viscount Malmesbury, 55-year-old science minister whose patriotic fervor sometimes startles listeners. Like Macmillan, Hogg is a fine orator, clever, ambitious, a regular churchgoer, with an American mother. Like Macmillan, he is a master of the political gimmick, a foe of the Socialists. Some foreigners seem to jar him, and he has included certain Americans among them.

Young Conservatives are plumping for Reginald Maudling, 46, chancellor of the exchequer. The big, jovial Maudling is unimposed in his personal relations, good at his job and has a modern, liberal approach to the big political issues of the day. He is an ordinary speaker who hates dramatics as a substitute for common sense. On present form he is a front-runner in the leadership race and the image he offers of a happy, un-neurotic family man with infectious smile is what lots of Tories believe the country wants. Orthodox, middle-way Conservatives are plugging for old faithful Richard Austen Butler, 60, who now is deputy prime minister. He was in line to take over from Eden after Suez. But his lack of enthusiasm for that venture counted against him. Lots of fellow Conservatives, including the once-influential Salisbury, could not forgive him.

Butler is a skilled policy maker who has remained loyal to all the leaders he has served including Macmillan. He is an expansionist in his economic theories, a conciliator as a politician. Crowds do not thrill to his somewhat cold speeches but his officials and his colleagues swear by his ability to get at the heart of the toughest situation.

Longshots

Two longshot contenders for the leadership are Ian McLeod, joint chairman of the party, and Edward Heath who led Britain's team in the abortive negotiations for membership of the European Common Market. McLeod, 49, once was darling of the Tory ranks for his modernism and liberal approach but he, too, didn't think much of Suez and that counted against him. His chances of becoming leader might improve if the Tories crashed to electoral defeat because many think he would shine in opposition and in the job of regrouping the party for a counteroffensive.

Heath, 47, is regarded as Macmillan's pet for the succession. He has admirers galore in Europe and gives the impression of being direct and sensible. One big handicap, some say, is that he's a backslider.

Disraeli Advice

Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield who was the 19th Century father of modern Conservative philosophy, recognized that change is "inevitable . . . constant" in a world where the balance of forces never is static.

The Conservative philosophy, compounded out of centuries of experience, rests on a code of thought rather than on a definite doctrine. It stands for evolutionary, organic growth of institutions, customs, law and the other paraphernalia of society. It is ready to create new social frameworks while avoiding unnecessary destruction of the old.

Conservatives prefer to spread authority because, as Disraeli warned, "centralization is the death blood of public freedom." Religion is held as the basis of society and the virtues of patriotism, duty, national unity are extolled.

The party still draws its inspiration from the definition Disraeli offered in 1872 of the party's principles:

To maintain the institutions of the country.

To uphold the empire.

To elevate the condition of the people.

Eastern Cuba Flailed by Raging 'Flora' to the Florida Straits forced Flora's turn away from her northwest course

'Eye' Stalled

For eight hours, the eye of the hurricane had been stalled 75 miles southwest of Camaguey, Cuba. Then began a slow drift to the southwest.

At Nassau, forecaster Arthur Pike said Flora would move off the south coast of Cuba and pass near Grand Cayman Island on a course toward the Yucatan Peninsula.

A Miami chief forecaster Gordon Dunn said the future movement of the storm remains "very, very uncertain" with the lack of a definite steering pattern. It has followed one of the oddest tracks we have seen in many a year. Flora's circulation was disrupted by the Cuban mountains and her top winds had dropped to 80 miles an hour around the eye. Once back in the Caribbean where she can draw new moisture from the sea, she could quickly regenerate.

Gale Winds

Gale winds swirled 175 miles north and east to the ragged islands in the lower Bahamas chain.

The Cuban radio reported that thousands of persons had been evacuated from flooded areas and there were reports of crop destruction, damaged buildings and toppled trees.

No deaths had been reported but the radio said there was no late word from Santiago, the island's second-largest city in the heart of the storm area. Earlier Santiago reported winds hitting 95 miles an hour.

Zeidler Urges Urban Studies

or said his plan for state departments of urban affairs "is hardly a far fetched idea." Such a unit in Ontario, he said, led to the establishing of a metropolitan form of government for Toronto and its suburbs.

Make Recommendations

"The department should continuously review and watch the growth and development of municipalities and make recommendations to the governor on the problems confronting municipalities," he said.

Unless states come up with a means to solve urban problems and guide growth of cities and their suburbs, Zeidler warned, the responsibility will be taken over by default by the federal government.

"The states will wither away and the powers will gravitate to the federal government and to special agencies of that government which deal in housing, control of water pollution, public health, and transportation in the solution of the strange new problem of this age in which we live," he said.

Reynolds' Proposal

Zeidler endorsed the proposal of Gov. John Reynolds for a study of local government structure and to combine the weak ones into effective units.

The local government problem, Zeidler said, has two parts—urban governments in rural countries are too weak to meet demands and get county-wide planning and in metropolitan areas there is fragmented government with overlapping jurisdiction and confusion.

"In Wisconsin, the (second) problem exists in Milwaukee, Madison, Racine, Green Bay, and the Fox River Valley," he said.

State governments are slowly changing in attitude of keeping out of local affairs because "the squabbling between local governments when they endeavor to solve their mutual problems, have become so noisy that the state governments cannot avoid the disputes," Zeidler said.

Home Rule

Zeidler recognized the argument that states should not interfere with home rule.

"However, as the problems of local governments in metropolitan areas mount and as these governments are unable to solve critical service and tax problems, the state governments must of necessity look carefully and impartially at these areas to decide how they can be best governed," he said.

Gronouski to End Race Bias

HONOLULU (AP) — John A. Gronouski, who took over as postmaster general five days ago, pledged Saturday a positive approach toward eliminating any remaining discriminatory practices in the postal service.

"Postmasters can expect me to back them to the hilt in any cases where controversies may arise due to local opposition to this policy," Gronouski said.

His address to nearly 4,000 delegates at the National Association of Postmasters Convention was his first major speech since becoming office.

Gilberto Rojas, a Costa Rican farmer, will be receiving two American-born hogs later this week at his farm in Costa Rica. The young man was in the United States last year where he studied Wisconsin farming methods and became interested in hog raising.

rangements Walker contacted airlines and made arrangements for shipment. Then the red tape piled up.

Walker saw that veterinary forms were completed, permission granted for entry to Costa Rica, crating completed and the animals loaded. Kaminski, to create good will offered to sell the pigs at less than half price.

On July 22 "Oak Creek Maid 7" and "Oak Creek King 8" were ready and taken to Milwaukee. They never left Billy Mitchell Field. The government had closed the Houston port to all farm animals. The only shipping point now was Miami. Papers had been filled out for Texas. Now they would be reprocessed for Miami, a time consuming job. There also had been a misunderstanding about shipment. The animals could not be shipped in wheeled planes at high altitudes.

Writes Stories

Sawall wrote the story about the pigs troubles after Kaminski returned from Milwaukee.

Post-Crescent Regional Editor, Roy F. Valitchka discussed the problem with Sawall, Walker and the Blacks. He then contacted Gage, a former Green Bay newspaper man, and asked what could be done. Gage said that we have given away since World War II. But I wonder if anyone ever thinks of this. What would this world be right now if we had not given that money away?

"No one can prove that we would not today be surrounded by a complete sea of communism." Civil rights. "I am one of those who is on the side of the underprivileged people in their struggle to get their political and economic rights respected and observed. Now I believe it is not only a legal but a moral problem for everyone of us."

On Viet Nam

Eisenhower said he had no real suggestions as to what should be done in South Viet Nam, but he hopes nothing will happen that would lead to the trip to El Coco International Airport, San Jose. Sawall will meet Gilberto and accompany the controversial sister-in-law of President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Like many Republicans, and some Democrats, Eisenhower isn't enthusiastic about President Kennedy's plans for an 11-billion tax cut.

"I think we ought to know more about administration expenditure plans," he said.

he'd speak with Byrnes and let him know.

Two days later, the first week in August, Valitchka received a reply from Byrnes requesting a detailed account of the incident. He said he would see to it the animals could be shipped.

In the meantime, the Costa Rican embassy, hearing of the problem, wrote to Walker saying they were sorry for the upset, but that Costa Rica had nothing to do with the mixup. They suggested the pigs be shipped by sea to the island.

Detailed Instructions

Shortly after Byrnes' first letter, Valitchka received another from Byrnes with a two-page single spaced letter from the State Department. Byrnes had made arrangements for shipment. The State Department letter was a list of detailed instructions for shipment.

Another problem arose. There were no pigs available for shipment in August. Walker asked for a month delay until Kaminski's hogs farrowed. Late in September, Kaminski said he had a litter of pigs but all of the same bloodline. He offered to contact another breeder, Boyde McElroy and Sons, Pardeeville, who had a pure bred gilt of another blood line. Kaminski, after he heard the problems in getting the boy's animals out of the country decided to donate them. The boar is a descendant of the United States top priced Duroc from 1962, valued at $3,800.

Byrnes Contacted

Valitchka then contacted Byrnes and told him the animals were ready for shipment and that a reporter might go along to present Rojas with the pigs. Byrnes said the State Department would be on hand when the animals arrived in Costa Rica to complete the story.

A request for free passage for principals of the story was turned down. The CAB told Gage it would not waive its regulations on free flights under any circumstances.

Sawall, who has worked with the New London and Weyauwega families, will leave on the same flight with the animals, remain overnight Wednesday in Miami and then board a LASCA Airline for the trip to El Coco International Airport, San Jose. Sawall will meet Gilberto and accompany the pigs to the farm.

"Everyday I'm waiting them (the animals) but don't arrive to our airport," Rojas wrote the isn't enthusiastic about President Kennedy's plans for an 11-billion tax cut.

Rojas' wait soon will be over.

Hungary Set To Purchase Grain Supply

Charge d'Affaires Janos Radvany, who heads the legation, was instructed to call on the State Department and discuss the issue.

Formal Request

John Cole, Cargill's vice president, conferred with Griffith Johnson, assistant secretary of state for economic affairs, before Cargill submitted a formal request for an export license. Radvany informed Harold C. Vedeler, director of the Office of Eastern European Affairs, about Hungary's interest.

Like most European countries, Hungary had an exceptionally hard winter followed by a summer either too hot or with too much rain.

In other years the Soviet Union and France supplied central European countries with grain, when needed. This year France has no export surpluses and the Soviet Union itself is buying great quantities in Canada and Australia.

Janos Hont, Hungarian deputy minister of agriculture, is now touring the United States with a five-member farm delegation. He is due back in Washington in mid-October and will be ready to negotiate with U.S. authorities if the administration is ready by then to conduct meaningful talks, the spokesman said.

Two-Car Crash Kills Richland Center Man

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Richland Center man was killed early Saturday in a two-car crash. His death raised the state's accident toll for 1963 to 655 compared with 609 a year ago. Lavern Alvin, 27, of rural Richland Center, died at 1:30 a.m. Saturday of a crushed chest, suffered when his car and another collided near Spring Green. The other car was driven by Terrance McCarville, 22, of West Allis.

Senate Probers Aiming at 'False Front' of Syndicate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate crime investigators set their sights Saturday on breaking through a "false front of legitimacy" which they say is masking the operations of a nationwide crime syndicate.

They said they hope to do this with the testimony of police witnesses and mobster Joseph Valachi, who is scheduled to pick up the Tuesday where he left off last week in a recital of murder and crime for profit over more than a quarter century.

The Senate Investigations subcommittee conducting the controversial probe of organized crime said the testimony will give the details of more murders, of illicit narcotics traffic as it exists today, of gambling rackets and a flourishing business of loaning money at usurious interest rates to underworld figures. The police call such move-lending "shylocking."

Reynolds the committee for the first time opened its doors to the press.

"They are going to have to realize they are meeting in Wisconsin," said Reynolds.

Rep. Neil Staehler, Michigan, resolutions committee chairman, mistakenly told the session the Wisconsin government anti-secrecy act applied to political meetings.

"We hope you will find the Wisconsin tradition is stimulating," he said.

The resolutions, however, clearly were worked over thoroughly in advance and there were no debates. Less than half of the 56 committee membership was present.

The committee termed the President's civil rights bill "the most far reaching in this century." There was some criticism from Wisconsin Democrats earlier that civil rights should not have been omitted from the list of panel discussions of state government problems.

The civil rights resolution specified four points of support of the bill, rights of access to all business places serving the public, a strengthening of voting rights, authorization for the Justice Department to sue for citizens in civil rights cases, and creation of a fair employment practices commission with enforcement powers.

Canadian Youths Hit U. S. Race Bias

EDMONTON, Alta. (AP) — The National Federation of Canadian Students has condemned racial discrimination in the United States and the apartheid-segregation—policies of South Africa.

The federation instructed its executive committee to protest "vigorously to the appropriate authorities any violation of the rights of Negro students" in the United States.

Assailing the South African government, the students voiced support for a proposal for an international boycott of South African goods and an embargo on arms to South Africa.

State GOP Looks Forward To Strong Campaign Team

Party Leaders Decry Possible Primary Fight for Governor

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MADISON—The Republican party politicians of Wisconsin had some assurance this week that they will probably field a strong ticket in their underdog drive to retake the statehouse from the Democrats in the elections next year and to recapture a place in the United States Senate.

The commitments of Warren P. Knowles, former lieutenant governor and veteran legislative Republican majority leader, and Jack B. Olson, present lieutenant governor and energetic new-comer to the state Republican scene, to run for the Republican nomination for governor means that the party will have a good campaigner at the top of the ticket.

The consensus of the party professionals is that the situation is made to order for a nomination of Wilbur Renshaw of Dane County for the U. S. Senate, probably with token competition, at the most.

The Republican ticket construction is the major interest in state political affairs currently, since there is very little doubt about the identity of the principal Democratic aspirants. Sen. William Proxmire, who is now the senior senator of the state after holding his seat for six years, has been campaigning obviously for many months and scarcely needs to announce his intentions to inform the electorate. Gov. John Reynolds, who has said lately that he is not yet sure he will run for a second term, will violate all of the habits and rules of politics if he fails to do so.

Rearet Fight

While there is some assurance for the earnest Republican partisan in the emerging state-wide ticket of his party, there also is some private regret among the party leaders about the chances for a hard fight for the gubernatorial nomination between Knowles and Olson which would dis-the last three years, and who has declared so positively that he intends to say in the race this time that it may be difficult for him to retreat gracefully in spite of the formidable threat posed by Knowles.

Endorsement

Olson has pointedly declined to say that his candidacy depends upon the Republican organization backing as indicated by a Republican delegate convention vote. Knowles has made it clear that he will retire from the race if he cannot clear the convention next May successfully, which is probably an indication that he is reasonably sure of a delegate majority while Olson is not.

But there are many months remaining before the delegates will convene. There will be informal rallies of party sentiment in the interval, through polls, through county and district political caucuses, and other means. The candidate announcements thus far have been merely declarations to the press. No official papers need be filed for many months.

While the scramble about the Republican nomination for governor and the comparatively quiet situation with respect to challenging Sen. Proxmire?

The Republicans cannot escape the popular suspicion that it has something to do with the relative vote-getting skills of the senator and Gov. Reynolds.

But it involves also the profound conviction of thoughtful Republican partisans that the governorship is the key to the restoration of their party's power in the state. The governor appoints hundreds of office-holders. Without him the Republican legislature finds it difficult to make a comprehensible record. Without possession of the governor's office, the Republican legislature can do no more than to checkmate the Democratic executive. After three successive defeats for the most important of offices in state politics, there is a deep fear in the party that another failure may mean permanent minority status for the GOP.

Renk's Hopes

Renk plainly wants to run for high office again, in spite of his decisive defeat for the Republican gubernatorial nomination last year, and he is represented as feeling that he could not win a party convention endorsement and would again fail in a contested primary bid.

On the other hand, he is betting considerable encouragement to run for senator and would very likely be able to land convention backing in such an objective. As a widely known farmer, moreover, and a man who won high praises from Democratic and liberal sources last year, he could lend a valued balance to the GOP ticket, it is asserted.

The doubtful element in such ticket speculation is Lt. Gov. Olson, who has barely restrained his eagerness to run for governor for

Enormous Noise Factor Demands Wide Spaces to Prevent Injuries

BY BEN PRICE

GAINESVILLE, Miss. (AP)—The space age has arrived on the Gulf coasts of Mississippi and Louisiana, displacing people, snakes, alligators, wild pigs and one graveyard.

Gainesville, founded in the early 1700s, is now a ghost town. The space age has arrived on the Gulf coasts of Mississippi and Louisiana, displacing people, snakes, alligators, wild pigs and one graveyard.

About 2,630 people are being moved out of a 142,550-acre tract in Hancock and Pearl River counties—mostly swamp and piney woods—to make way for the Mississippi Test Operation—MTO—of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Test Boosters

The purpose of MTO is to test the 7.5-million-pound thrust boosters being built by the Chrysler Corp. and the Boeing Co. at NASA's newly reactivated Michoud ordnance plant at New Orleans, 35 miles away by barge.

The huge boosters will be used to launch astronauts on a trip to the moon by 1970 under Project Apollo.

Within the next five years NASA plans to spend close to $600 million on the construction of MTO and the retooling and renovation of the Michoud plant—43 au-conditioned acres under one roof.

The NASA operation is going to have—and is already having—an enormous impact on the area especially in underdeveloped Mississippi.

The Michoud operation already has reduced unemployment in New Orleans measurably.

For Mississippi the arrival of the space age already is changing standards of income, creating a demand for improved public schools and promising to bring university-level education to the coast for the first time.

Non-Southerners

At the moment Michoud employs 6,780 people and fully 50 per cent came from outside the South-east.

It is estimated by NASA that Michoud ultimately will employ somewhere between 11,000 and 14,000 people and some 70 per cent will have to be imported into the region.

The permanent work force at MTO will number around 2,500 to 3,000 by 1968, NASA estimates, here and at Michoud. Navy Capt. W. G. Fortune, in charge of MTO, said he intends to be ready for the first test firing in March 1965—barring a budget cut which are, "What do you pay?" and, would slow down schedules.

The questions asked most often at the MTO employment offices are, "What do you pay?" and, would slow down schedules.

The senators earlier this week amended the chamber's rules to give ex-presidents the privilege of addressing them.
